THE LOST WILL

Old General Rushford was dead and buried and all the dear five hundred friends were in a state of astonishment and consternation over his will, for it named his pet and protege, Marian Gray, his sole heiress, while his nephew, Robert Rushford, was not even mentioned.

"There is some strange mistake," Mr. Wilde, the lawyer, said. "There was a later will than this drawn up after Mr. Robert came home, and leaving the bulk of the property to him. In it Miss Gray was generously remembered, too, but this one, which makes her heiress, was made while Mr. Rushford was ignorant that his nephew had escaped. I supposed that this will had long since been destroyed."

"What caused you to suppose so?" was Robert Rushford's very natural question.

The lawyer replied that his client had told him—on the occasion of his drawing up the second will—that it was his intention to put the first one into the fire.

"And I thought he had done so. I never doubted but this was the latest will. It seems, however, that we have got hold of the wrong document; the other is still in existence somewhere.

"We will have thorough search for it—"

"And until you find it, or if you fail to find it, this one stands," said Robert Rushford, quietly, stating a fact which the lawyer was forced to admit.

Meantime the heiress by the first will and legated by the second had sat quiet and still. She listened, with her eyes cast down, but spoke no word. While her friends and acquaintances discussed her—not always quite inaudibly.

"What a very awkard and peculiar position for Miss Gray! What an opportunity—if the second will did not turn up—to show her magnanimity and sense of honor, by making over the fortune to young Rushford! Doubtless, in case, he would be most generous to her, and really you know, to a girl of Miss Gray's birth and former position, a few thousands would be a fortune. What was her position? A daughter to old Rushford's housekeeper, my dear, brought up for a governess, or something—came on to visit her mother while the old man was sick and nursed him so tenderly and skillfully that he could not be persuaded to part with her again. She had been as a daughter in the house ever since, and if young Rushford had never turned up, if he had been really lost at sea as was so long supposed—why you know rich old men were eccentric, and there would have been nothing very astonishing in his making her his heiress after all. But now—it would be terrible. Utter ruin to the young man's life. Of course his engagement with Florence Huntly would be broken off. Florence was not fit for a poor man's wife—a lovely creature—and he so infatuated my dear; it will break his heart to lose her."

And so on the stream of gossip flowed—some portions of it finding its way to Marian's ears—until the searching party returned. And announced that as yet they had not found the second will.

There was a marked increase of respect towards Miss Gray after this intelligence and some would have congratulated her, but she checked them.

"It is too early yet," she remarked, with a sad smile.

But the gossips agreed that her chances were favorable.

"And if she really is the heiress, my dear, why of course its dreadful for the young man—terrible—but still—"

Public opinion was disposed to be kind to the heiress in any case.

"She is not over eager—she bears her honors meekly—shouldn't wonder if she turns the fortune over to the nephew after all!" was comment of many after they left the house and went their several ways.

They would have judged different if they could have seen her that night, locked securely in her own room, the blinds and shutters closed, no eyes save those of Heaven upon her. She unfastened her dress, and drew a sealed and folded parchment from her bosom—it was the missing will. She gazed upon it long and earnestly.

"Miserable document," she whispered. "If I should give you to him now what [illegible] you would work for me. Yes, you [illegible] rob me of all I prize, and place it [illegible] the keeping of another. And will he [illegible] Miss Huntly for being poor! What [illegible] love worth then! And she is so [illegible] him that it will break his heart to lose her—and it would mine to lose [illegible] whom I love! Whom I love! Whom I love! Whom I love!" she went on in [illegible] low whisper, clasping her hands [illegible] anguish. "Whom I love [illegible] thought for me. Only for [illegible] and will my actions part them? Is it [illegible] Will he ever forgive me? Is it [illegible] to part true lovers, but are those [illegible] shall see—for, if they are, [illegible]

When she lay down to sleep that night [illegible] will lay under her pillow, and a [illegible] letter beside it, addressed to Rob[illegible] [illegible] Marian kissed that name [illegible] went to sleep.

[illegible] will forgive my sin when he [illegible] "I do [illegible] the will lay warm in [illegible] Rushford and Mr. Wilde [illegible] and sweetly through [illegible]

To this broad hint she replied quietly: "The will may be found, sir. Excuse me if I hesitate to tax your memory while that chance remains. Believe me, my most earnest wish and endeavor is—to obey the dead.

He did not understand.

"She puzzles me," he said to Robert "but somehow I fancy she'll give you your money after all; yes I do believe it."

"So do not I," replied Robert. "Women are so mercenary. See how quickly Florence Huntly has thrown me over. It was worth the loss of the fortune to find her out. Fancy marrying a girl in the belief that she really loved you, and afterward discovering that she only wanted your purse. That would have been my fate if I'd got the fortune. I was hard hit, too, while I thought her a woman with a loving heart, but I shall survive the disappointment. If I thought there was any danger of Miss Gray's indulging in any Quixotic acts of renunciation, I should take measures to prevent it; but you wont find much of that kind of thing among women, believe me."

Mr. Wilde began to think the same as time went on. For six months Marian went quietly on her way, obeying—while the lawyer accused her of ignoring—the wishes of the dead.

Robert was an apt writer and had obtained employment on the press, whereby he made a living. Marian rolled by him in his uncle's carriage in the street,

It seemed as if the ungrateful cuckoo had pushed the true bird out of the nest, after all.

"Mercenary—mercenary to the core!" was Robert's reflection, as he lifted his hat to his uncle's heiress as she rode by, and admired, in spite of himself, her sweet pale face. "Looks as if there might be a heart and soul behind those soft dark eyes—looks like a woman to love and be loved, but they're all alike—mercenary to the very core!" He was sensible of a feeling of disappointment over Marian. "She should be a higher, truer, better type of woman than Florence was, if appearances go for anything at all. She should have been willing to give up to me the fortune. I wouldn't have accepted the sacrifice, but I could have admired and respected her for being ready to make it. But they are all alike."

Reaching his lodging he found Mr Wilde waiting for him in a tremendous state of excitement, and holding an open letter in his hand.

"Look here! Just received this! Listen:

"Dear sir:—Be good enough to call upon me at 7 o'clock, p. m., and bring Mr. Rushford with you. The will is found. I have sincere pleasure in placing the true heir in possession of his own at last.

Very Respectfully,
Marian Gray.

"Where was it found? Where was it found?" cried Mr. Wade as Marian gave the document into his hands.

"Where on earth was it found, my dear?"

"It was never lost," said Marian quietly. Then she told them all.

"Old Mr. Rushford knew of his nephew's love for Miss Huntley, and did not approve of it. Yet he feared to oppose it as it would only confirm the fancy. He had great confidence in me, gentlemen, and revealed to me his plans. I knew the contents of both his wills. During his last illness he gave the true one into my care, with instructions to conceal it six months. By that time my nephew will be thought of as a poor man, and the girl who fools him with a pretence of love will show herself in her true colors. This letter, Mr. Rushford, will confirm my words; and," she added timidly, "If I have sinned in parting you from your love, pardon me! Perhaps she may yet be won, now you are rich again, and I—I but obeyed the wishes of the dead.

"And in so doing earned my lasting gratitude," cried Robert, warmly.

"Florence is not worth winning. I can imagine no more miserable life than that which must fall to the lot of her husband."

"And it is worth more than the fortune to know that in you I find a true woman at last, whose heart and mind do not belie her face, but one is as lovely as the other.

He stopped short, for Wilde's hand was on his arm.

"Read your letter first," said that gentleman, cooly, "and then we'll read the will."

Robert obeyed him.

The letter confirms Marian's statement said he and contains the expression of a wish. Do you know what the wish is?" he asked her.

"No," she answered in surprise; "I do not."

"But you would advise me to endeavor to comply with it, of course you who fulfilled his wishes so religiously; and this wish is also my own. Yes, my most earnest desire.

Marian laughed sweetly.

"It will be to me, but it depends upon another—upon you."

"Upon me?"

"Yes, dearest Marian, upon you. Mr. Wilde here is going to inform me, I know that this now will give the fortune all to me. I can receive it only upon one condition. Can you guess what it is."

Her eyes fell beneath his—the conscious crimson dyed her fair cheeks.

"I will not guess," she answered. You shall tell me."

He caught the little fluttering hand [illegible]

[illegible] dead you know. Must she not, Mr. Wilde," he added with a sudden recollection—but that discreet old gentleman had quietly stolen from the room.

"I will obey the wishes of my own heart, first," said Marian. "Dear Robert, can it be that you really love me.

With my whole heart. And Marian? "Oh I have loved you long," she whispered.

They were married and the finding of the lost will made a little difference since they shared the fortune together.

THE PROPER THING.

Necklaces are worn only with full dress toilettes.

Sealing-wax sets are popular for Christmas gifts.

Black Astrakhan jackets are bordered with gray fur.

Bracelets are worn very narrow and are not bought in pairs.

Elder down is very desirable as wadding for handsome mantles.

Cuff buttons are worn quite large and cuff pins are again used.

Yellow and black is a favorite combination for evening dresses.

Fur trimmed costumes of Jersey cloth are among the latest importations.

Pretty chateline bags are made of pearl or tan-colored kid daintily painted.

Ruching for throat and sleeves has been superceded by bands of crepe lisse or etamine.

Very little lace is seen on bonnets, and the fashion of cutting material into small folds, piping and cords has disappeared.

Fine soft flannels stamped on both sides with rich designs are a new material for curtains and are both cheap and effective.

Standing linen collars and gathered linen frills are worn in the neck and wrists of misses' dresses, and also by quite young girls, as their dresses are now finished with a standing band.

Among the pretty fancy jewels of the season are the ornamental safety-pins, used for fastening bonnet strings, boquets on the bodice etc. They are in the form of bees, flies, butter flies and other insects.

The so-called pumpkin hood of our grandmother's days is again coming to the front as a head wrap for evening wear. They are in satin of gray hue, with an eider down lining. A fine diamond quilting is used to hold the whole together.

EXPERIENCE TAUGHT ME!

And my money paid for it. After having Liver Complaint four years, and spending money on nostrums and doctors who didn't help me, I tried Sulphur Bitters. Six bottles cured me. I shall always use them.—[G. N. Butler, Cohoes, N. Y.

Colonel Lamont Rebuked.

"Daniel," said the President, as the private secretary came in with a portfolio under his arm, "did you write this I found it on the floor."

"What is it, sir?" asked the secretary.

"It is poetry, and I don't like it," said the President, sternly. "Listen to this," and he read from the sheet of paper he held in his hand:

She put out her foot, just enough to disclose
The rather diminutive size of her hose;
"My friends to buy presents are flocking,
And beautiful things they are certain to find;
Now what thing is prettiest—tell me your mind—
I can possibly get in my stocking?"

He looked down at her foot and looked up at her face,
And he bowed with a moderate measure of grace;
"I'll be honest—and don't think me shocking—
They may get what they please, but there is nothing, I swear,
Which can even remotely begin to compare
With what you have now in your stocking!"

"Daniel," said the President sternly, as he finished reading, "I will not embarrass you by pursuing this inquiry any further, but I don't want anything more of this sort. It's all right to be interested in Christmas and the good old-fashioned observances, and I don't object to a verse now and then, even when it is as weak as this, but I do object, seriously, to the sentiment. There is a sort of Parisian flavor I don't like. It doesn't remind you of pumpkin pie. I want it understood, Danial, that there is nothing Gallic about this administration." And the President turned to his papers and began to read the latest charge against Collector Hedden.

Why Jews Live so Long.

The New England Medical Monthly comment very favorably on the proverbial long and healthful lives of Jews. Dr. Picard holds that this superiority is due to their stringent health laws. The Mosaic, like the older Egyptian code, is very stringent regarding the eating of flesh and other articles of food. Of the animals examined, a large proportion are always condemned as unfit food. People who eat meat indiscriminately are very prone to disorders of blood and of the kidneys, for meat is composed of nitrogen, which the kidneys have to remove from the blood, and of course they cannot do this successfully except by the aid of Warner's safe cure, the best kidney strengthener, unless it is temperately partaken of and only the very best meat is used. Jews also use alcoholic liquors very sparingly and thus keep up good digestion, and then again they are a holiday-loving and Sabbath-observing class.—[Housekeeper.

TIRED AND LANGUID WOMEN.

How many women there are of whom these words are true: "They feel languid and tired, hardly able to bear their weight on their feet, the bloom all gone from their cheeks, irritable and cross without meaning to be, nerves all upset, worried with the children, fretted over little things, a burden to themselves, and yet with no acute disease. What a pity it is. But a few bottles of Parker's Tonic will drive all this away, and relieve the troubles peculiar to their sex.

THE PANSY.

For both week day and Sunday reading. The PANSY, edited by "Pansy" herself, holds the first place in the hearts of the children, and in the approval of earnest-minded parents. Among the more interesting features for 1886 will be Pansy's serial story, being a further account of "Little Fishers: and their Nets." The Golden Text Stories, under the title, "Six O'clock in the Evening," will be told by a dear old Grandma, who knows many interesting things about what happened to herself when she was a little girl. Margaret Sidney will furnish a charming story.

REACHING OUT,

ST. GEORGE AND THE DRAGON, to run through the year. Rev. C. M. Livingston will tell stories of discoveries, inventions, books, people, places. Faye Huntington will be a regular contributor during the year. Pansy will take the reader with her wherever she goes, in papers under the title of

WHERE I WENT, AND WHVT I SAW.

There will be, in each number, a selection from our best standard poets suitable for recitation in school or circle. From time to time colloquies for Mission Bands, or for general school exercises, will appear. There will be new and interesting books for the members of the Pansy Society, and as before, a generous space will be devoted to answers to correspondents in the P. S. Corner.

One Dollar. Hood's Sarsaparilla is the only medicine of which this can be truly said; and it is an unanswerable argument as to the strength and positive economy of this great medicine. Hood's Sarsaparilla is made of roots, herbs, barks, etc., long and favorably known for their power in purifying the blood; and in combination, proportion, and process, Hood's Sarsaparilla is peculiar to itself.

"For economy and comfort we use Hood's Sarsaparilla." Mrs. C. [illegible], Buffalo.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla takes less time and quantity to show its effect than any other preparation I ever heard of. I would not be without it in the house." Mrs. C. A. M. HUBBARD, North Chili, N. Y. 100 Doses

In his message, Gov. Hill states that our total State debt unprovided for is only $4,798,166.26. In 1880 a corporation tax law was passed, by which the annual revenue of the State has been increased $1,500,000. Notwithstanding this, the tax rate has not decreased owing to the large increase in governmental expenses. The average amount of taxes levied for eight years past has been $8,077,937.08. The rate for 1885 was 2,96-100 mills larger than in 1879 the year previous to the passage of the corporation tax law. The question of reducing State expenditures is of great importance. The continuance of the civil service commission is recommended. The Gov. advises a revision of the tax law, in reference to which he says:

It is evident that the personal property of the state does not pay its just proportion of the taxes, and the disparity in the assessed valuation of personal and real property verifies the statement that the statutes governing the appraisement and assessment of personal property are to a great extent defective, and do not reach the great bulk of personalty for the purpose of taxation.

For years the State assessors have directed public attention to the fact that the personalty of the taxpayers were escaping assessment, yet there has been a shrinkage from 1871 to 1884(not inclusive) of $107,184,381.

It is reasonable to believe that if our present tax laws were reformed and placed upon some true and consistent theory, the assessment of the personalty would nearly equal the assessment of the realty, and thereby the present unjust burdens upon real estate would be greatly alleviated. Every citizen has a right to insist that taxation shall be uniform and equal as far as possible, and, while the people are patriotic, and do not object to meeting the just demands of government, they may very properly insist that unjust discriminations should not be permitted. The farm and the workshop in the country should bear their proportion of the public burdens, and so should the bonds, the mortgages, the stocks and other personal property in the great cities of the State.

The theory of our present system of taxation is neither a just nor a consistent one. It permits the indebtedness of an owner of personal property to be deducted from its value, while it permits no such deduction in favor of real estate, even though it is represented by a mortgage, which is a specific lien upon such real estate. It is difficult to discover the wisdom of this discrimination.

The message contains the following explaination of the veto of the census bill of last year:

The constitution does not require a census. It does not require an enumeration of cattle, horses, sheep, goats or other animals, or the gathering of statistics relating to any other subject than population. Such a census, however is taken by the general government every ten years. Our constitution does not require an enumeration of the inhabitants. This constitutional requirement was not fulfilled by the last legislature, but was intentionally neglected or evaded. No act was passed providing for a simple enumeration,—the passage of such a measure having been studiously avoided,—but an act was twice passed and twice met with executive disapproval, which required a complicated, elaborate and unnecessary census, which would have cost the people of this State nearly $500,000. Such an outlay of the public money was indefensible. The people did not demand it nor did they approve of it. Subsequent events have justified the action of the executive.

The rapid increase of taxation and administration expenses in New York city, the defects in its laws and the evils which have grown under the abuses of its vast patronage make the question of municipal reform one of urgent necessity. The large expense of city government might be lessened by the abolition of many useless officers and the reduction of extravagant salaries paid to its officials. In his message last year occurred this sentence: "Facilities have been afforded by law to enable capital to incorporate and combine for its protection; like facilities should be afforded for the organization of labor.." The same recommendation is reiterated, also the passage of a general law providing for the incorporation of trades unions.

Child labor receives special mention. We quote the passage in reference thereto.

The State Medical Society, the New York Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to children, the State Workingmen's assembly, and several reputable organizations have repeatedly requested that some action be taken to protect children of tender years from the demands of selfish and often cruel and exacting task masters, but the legislature has heretofore been deaf to their appeals. It is most desirable that an act be passed abolishing labor by children under fourteen years of age, especially in factories and similar workshops, and properly regulating the employment of all minors.

In reference to the growing difficulties between employers and employed, a check is suggested by means of a commission which shall have power to investigate the subject generally and especially the system of boards of arbitration. The principle of this system has recently been illustrated by the appointment of Allen G. Thurman as [illegible] in the matter of differences [illegible] in Ohio.

He would sweep away the State Board of Charities and vest its powers in a single department known as the "Commissions of Charities."

In 1880, the legislature created a State Board of Health consisting of ten members. The chief member is the secretary who receives a salary of $3,000 and has an office staff of six employees. The expense of this board during the present fiscal year was about $33.00. We quote the words of the message:

"I believe that the Board of Health should be abolished, and its powers vested in a single responsible official, to be known as the "health commissioner" of the State, who would not be a mere secretary or statistican, but one competent to assume sole general charge of the preservation of the public health, and give personal direction to whatever is proper to be done concerning it."

Changes are also suggested in the matter of State surveys, the constitutional convention and the existing law in regard to murder in the first degree. Want of space prevents further reference to the message.

REPRESENTATIVE Belmont of New York has prepared a resolution, which he will offer in the house of representatives upon the first opportunity, for the appointment of a committee of nine members to inquire into the manner in which the civil service law has been executed and to suggest such modification and improvements therein as may prove beneficial to the service.

INFORMATION has been received by the State Board of Health that typhoid fever is prevailing to an alarming extent through the State, owing mainly to the continued mildness of the winter. If this weather continues much longer serious results are feared. Localities that have been comparatively free of disease heretofore, now report many cases of it.

GOVERNOR HILL has sent his second annual message to the Legislature and our leading daily papers have placed it in the hands of the major part of the reading public. A great many people omit to read the annual message of governors, presidents and president's secretarie's reports, because of their length. The reading public is the acting public and there is a certain duty incumbent upon us to read these reports and opinions of the heads of these governments which we as voters have sworn to protect and uphold. There are always valuable suggestions contained in them and we can profit by reading and thinking. We do not publish the governor's message, as nearly every reader will receive it in another form, but we call attention to it as containing many suggestions which voters will do well to think about Among various bequests for religious and educational purposes made by the late Mrs. Sophronia Morehouse of Liverpool, N. Y., was one of $80,000 to Syracuse university. Of this sum $5,000 is for the special use of indigent students. This bequest was made to the university some time before the death of the devisor, she receiving the interest during her lifetime. The university now enters into full possession.

The Utica Herald in an article on fish and game says that partridges are also said to be scarce, and it is feared by sportsmen that these birds are in danger of becoming extinct in this part of the state. Their greatest enemy is the snare, and near Oneida lake, Camden and Taberg many of these birds are annually taken in this way. A man who resides near Cleveland is said to have captured between 500 and 600 partridges with snares during the past season.

As [illegible] the New Year's [illegible] here [illegible] a grand reception [illegible] the [illegible] world of Washington [illegible] out in [illegible] excitement about the President's [illegible]. Just before a Presidential inauguration or New Year's reception, the weather, that always interesting subject, became an absorbing question of speculation here. The Signal Service Bureau was frequently interviewed yesterday to learn whether the old year would leave us with sunshine or storm. Blue skies favored the event of to-day however, and there was nothing to mar the success of Mr. Cleveland's first New Year's reception.

The Marine band was there as usual and discoursed fine music from the main ante-room, while the callers passed in and out. The newspaper correspondents were promptly on hand also and some few quill drivers of the fair sex were dissatisfied with their accommodations, and wanted vantage ground in the Blue Room where they could more accurately note the dresses and laces and diamonds.

A few minutes before 11 a.m. the band commenced playing "Hail to the Chief," and the president with Miss Cleveland and the ladies of the Cabinet took their position in the Blue Room. Only the Cabinet ladies, neither the Speakers wife, Mrs. Carlisle, nor Mrs Sherman the wife of the President of the Senate, were of the receiving party. Mr. Cleveland wore a prince Albert coat, dark neck-tie and white kid gloves.

The Cabinet officers came first on the program to greet the Executive and his assistant receivers. Next came the representatives of foreign countries in their showy attire of velvet, gold, lace sashes, stars, crosses and other insignia of rank. England, France, Germany, Spain, Russia, Japan and China were conspicuously represented, by bedizened diplomats, while some of the South American Republics came in Democratic attire, meaning the customary evening dress of American gentlemen.

The reception of the Supreme court, and the various courts of the District of Columbia, Senators and Members of the lower house, military and naval officers followed close. Each division of the procession defiled into the East Room as it passed the President. The Diplomatic corps remained there until it was reinforced by the gilt epauletted officers of the Army and Navy, and the scene became exceedingly gay, animated, variegated, brilliant, picturesque, statuesque, etc, etc. For once the gentlemen outshown the ladies in splendor of attire, and that is saying much, for the ladies of the foreign Legations reflected every tint of the rainbow.

When all the dignitaries and officials in Washington had grasped the President's hand and passed on into the East Room and gradually out to their carriages again, the people's reception began. For an hour another varied scene was presented, of grey headed men and women, young people, children, and middle aged, black and white, rich and poor.

The President bore his fatiguing task patiently and cheerfully, and remarked in reply to some expression of sympathy from a friend that this was one of his easiest duties. He looked each caller in the eye, and to each greeting gave a "Thank you," or "I am pleased to see you."

Secretary Bayard gave the usual diplomatic breakfast to the Diplomatic Corps after leaving the President's reception, and his rather small house on Highland Place was taxed to its utmost, to accommodate these foreign gentlemen as there is quite a number of them now in Washington. The Diplomats continued in full court dress at this breakfast given in their honor, and after that assumed frock coats for general calls.

The Cabinet ladies repaired to their homes after the White House ceremonies and held their own New Year's reception assisted by lady friends. For some years the leaders of society here have discouraged the use of liquor as a feature of New Year's hospitality. The ladies of the new administration also agreed not to begin the New Year by keeping an open bar for their gentlemen callers.

[illegible] to [illegible] the [illegible] Association [illegible] for the past year. But Mr. Editor, I notice that he very carefully and [illegible] avoids mention of his membership in the Oswego county druggists combination, which is quite another institution, to which the letters from Kenyon, Potter & Co. (below appended) refer. His language would lead the uninformed to believe that the Pharmaceutical association was the only druggists organization of the county, but he well knows that such is not the case. I challenge him to deny that he did not wait upon me in company with others about one year since, in an effort to obtain my affiliation with the Oswego county combination. I further challenge him to deny that his name is now appended to an agreement, with other druggists of this county, of which the following is an extract:

OSWEGO COUNTY PATENT MEDICINE DEALERS ASSOCIATION AGREEMENT.

To take effect January 1st, 1884:

We the undersigned druggists and dealers in patent medicines in Central New York, do hereby mutually agree that we will not sell at retail either directly or indirectly, any proprietory or patent medicines for less than the price established by the manufacturers of such medicines or less than the list prices furnished by the committee of the Central New York Patent Medicine Dealer's association, and we further agree that we deposite a check for the sum of fifty (50) dollars with the treasurer of said association to be deposited in one of the banks of the city of Oswego and for any violation of the above agreement we agree to forfeit the said sum of $50.

All violations are to be decided in the following manner viz: A committee on grievances is to be appointed, and upon their decision, the party violating this agreement shall forfeit the $50 deposited, which sum shall be paid to the treasurer of said association, and the party forfeiting the same shall immediately deposit the further sum of $50 with the treasurer as before. I desire to enquire of the gentleman if the omission of the above from his card of Dec. 30 was due to ignorance; or at the time of the framing of his disertation, was his patronage behind his screen so extensive as to bar all thought of the main facts at issue between his combination and myself. In his mirthful mood he delicately alludes to somebody's credit. This will seem really amusing to your readers when I inform them that he now has in his possession some of my money. The almighty dollar receives its share of attention in his statement; we obtain it by fair dealing and moderate prices, and thank Heaven we are able to view it without glasses. His most amusing allusion in my judgment, is the great united effort on the part of his fellows to elevate the standard of the drug business by cooperation and united action, in forcing invalids to meet their combination high prices for the medicines they require. If opposition to this kind of missionary work arises from ignorance, I pray that I may ever remain thus depraved and unprincipled. We desire to question the gentleman as to the principle of a business man that would be guilty of publishing, or causing to be published, a preamble and code of ethics of an honorable society with a view to screen his connection and membership of another organization entirely distinct from the Pharmaceutical Association and which has an endorsed agreement to preserve the manufacturer's high prices under a penalty of $50 for selling below the scale. Will he inform us as to the object of the St. James hall meeting previous to the issuing of his and others' circulars. He further states that the idea of preventing any man from buying goods when the whole world is a market, is simply absurd. Will he please reflect a penny's worth of light upon the following copies of letters, the originals of which are on file at my store.

SYRACUSE, April 11, 1885.

Mr. H. C. Giesler, Fulton, N. Y.

Dear Sir:—There has been several complaints made to us from druggists in Oswego county who have ascertained that you were buying goods from us—that you were injuring the trade by cutting prices and that you had refused to join the county organization. We have seen the demoralizing effect upon the trade generally by such cutting, not only in our own city but elsewhere, and have never known a case where the party so cutting has been benefitted in the end but has ruined the whole trade as far as profits are concerned. Knowing this we feel justified in taking the liberty of strongly urging you to maintain prices as we know it will be to your interest.

Yours Truly
KENYON, POTTER & CO.,

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Dec. 19, 1885.

Mr. H. C. Giesler, Fulton,

Dear Sir:—Inasmuch as we are satisfied that your peculiar method of selling proprietary goods is exceedingly injurious to the trade of Oswego county (where we have many customers). Although personally our relations have been very pleasant, we must respectfully decline to fill your orders for proprietary goods for the present, but should be pleased to fill your orders for any other goods you may need and trust that we may very soon not feel obliged to decline orders proprietary.

Yours Truly,
KENYON, POTTER & CO.

SYRACUSE, Dec. 28, 1885.

Mr. H. C. Giesler, Fulton, N. Y.

Dear Sir—We inclose herewith invoice of goods ordered in your favor of 25th inst., and shipped this day which we wish safe to hand and satisfactory. For reasons given in our letter of 19th inst we omit the proprietary goods. We hope however that you will soon be able to see your way clear to joining the Oswego County Association thereby guaranteeing to all the trade a fair profit on patents where now all sell at cost. Trusting that this very desirable consummation may be effected soon we remain

Yours Truly
KENYON, POTTER & CO.

Notwithstanding the elevated condition of the drug trade in our town, as illustrated in the above letter, I desire to assure my customers that I shall continue to supply them with all first-class goods at the same fair profit regardless of the elevated Oswego county combination even if I am forced to obtain goods as far distant as Chicago, San Francisco or Japan. I have the honor to be sir your very obedient servant,

H. C. GIESLER,
Opera House Drug Store.

[illegible] the world is to [illegible] the tower of the board of trade building, at the foot of LaSalle street, a little over 300 feet above the ground. While the building was in process of construction the idea of crowning its highest point with a ring of lights was suggested by Elmer A. Sperry, a Cornell university man, 25 years old, who came here from Cortland, N. Y., three years ago and formed an electric light, moter, and car brake company. Various circumstances prevented the execution of the scheme until the present time. Mr. Sperry's company puts up the lights, the board of trade furnishes the power, and the other expenses are paid by subscriptions from owners of surrounding property, including the federal government and several railroad compnies. There are 20 of the lights, and they are fastened to a ring of 4-inch gas pipe 29 feet in diameter. The ring hangs on steel wires three quarters of an inch in diameter, running over sheaves placed at the extremities of four arms projecting from the tower near the top. By these ropes which are attached to drums in the clock room, the lights are lowered, when neccessary, to a balcony surrounding the tower at the dial, 68 feet below. The lights are of 2,000-candle power each, and are connected with a 20-light dynamo of 29 amperes in the basement. The carbons will burn 15 hours if necessary. The lights are to burn every night in the year. To-night the glowing crown is visible for miles away. It is reported that it can be seen at Michigan City, 60 miles distant across the lake. It is thought that the light can be seen from a point in the lake off Milwaukee. The rail-road yards of the city are greatly benefitted by the light.

Howe Ventilating Stove.

A NEW STOVE. ON A NEW PRINCIPLE.

A HANDSOME STOVE. AN EXCELLENT HEATER.

AN ECONOMICAL STOVE. A PERFECT VENTILATOR.

☞A good Base Burner of any kind will heat a room, but it also destroys and burns up the life principle of the air. Foul air if hot will not keep a person warm. The Howe Ventilating Stove warms the room and keeps the air pure. It Ventilates the room at the same time that it heats it. Cold, fresh air is taken into the Stove through a pipe from the outside of the house. Fresh air passes into the Stove, is heated and passes into the room through the open top, while the foul, impure air being heavier than fresh, pure heated air drops dead to the floor, is forced into a flue in the Stove and is drawn through a small pipe in the smoke pipe into the chimney and escapes with the smoke.

Literary Notes.

Three rising Canadian authors, who are making their mark in the older magazines, contribute to Wide Awake's series of "True Adventures," Edmond Collins, Macdonald Oxley and Charles G. D. Roberts. In the February issue Mr. Collins has a fine coast story, "Saved by a Kite."

Nora Perry will have a racey paper in the February Wide Awake about "Autographs and Autograph Hunters." Some witty autograph verses of Whittier, Mrs. A. D. T. Whitney, John G. Saxe and others, which never have been in print, are embodied in this article.

D. Lothrop & Co. will shortly issue an important religious work for popular reading, "Divine Sovereignty and Other Sermons," by Reuen Thomas, D. D.

S. B. Becker wishes to say to the public that he has a number of first-class [illegible] at his livery on First street, next to [illegible] Clark house, which he will let at reasonable prices. If you need a rig, give him a call. 16tf

[illegible] this year is all [illegible] We are satisfied, [illegible] say. These golden October days when a person had to take a balloon and fly above the watery clouds to find where the golden came in. Then November was to bring us out all right. It did, we may guess. Rain is purifying, so they tell us. We were purified in November. Yet another month, December, the time of winter festivities—moonlight straw-rides—cradle of winter poets—Christmas fantasies—where were they all? sunk forty fathoms in Volney mud. Still another month and surely the snow would come then, Oh no, cisterns must be filled, rivers and creeks must be made,—further preparations made for winter. So we are going through mud and slush and mire. We do not know anything about the weather in '35 or thereabout, but we have enough of this. Can it be possible that the sun has struck a snag and cannot get far enough away from us to give Volney a chance to show her band, or has the old town forgot herself and thinks she is playing to a wet summer. Of course some will say that the new water works is the cause of all this water. If that be true, we trust the village authorities will look into the matter, for we do not believe that the contract calls for any such hilarities on the part of the weather and as we understand it it, was not to be a part of the "test." Even as we are writing, our complaints seem to have effect, for the rain has ceased and the mud is freezing and snow is falling. Come ye scribblers of an hour, and let thy muse sing of "the beautiful snow."

High Water at Parish.

PARISH, Jan. 5—Last night, about 8 o'clock, the dam at Newel Wright's mill about three miles above this village, on the Little Salmon creek, burst, and a torrent rushed down the already swollen creek, striking Edick's mill, about a mile from this place. The water poured into and upon it, tearing off the shingles and completely demolishing more than half of the building. The dam is still standing, but the water is cutting a broad, deep channel between the mill and road. When the torrent reached this village, it broke a large boom of logs in the pond and carried them over the dam to the flats below. The dam is standing the pressure bravely, but the mill is surrounded with the seething waters and the road is overflowed. About 5 o'clock the increased volume of water poured over the dam at the red mills, and, dashing against the new iron suspension bridge, carried it away with a loud crash. The bridge at the south branch on the road to Hastings, was the next to give way. The roads at Carley's Mills are impassable on account of the high water. In this village the utmost excitement prevails. The creek has forced a new channel across the flats, which are a sea of foaming water. It is impossible to estimate at present the damage done. Should not the water soon abate the dam here will go to pieces. At present the prospects are not encouraging.

The Forresters.

In speaking of the Forresters, who open an engagement here next Tuesday evening, a Port Jervis paper says: "Never in the history of the Opera house has there been such a crowd as there was Dec. 25 at the Forresters. The doors opened at 7 o'clock, and it was nearly 9 before the performance could begin, and the large building was filled to its utmost capacity. There must have been close to 2,000 people. The Forresters are great favorites here." The prices have been reduced to 20 and 25 cents. The opening play will be "Our Girls." The Forresters have some fine new plays and carry their own special scenery. Reserved seats will be on sale at Watsons.

The store formerly occupied by D. A. Waterman has been leased to Daniel Corcoran of Oneida, who will open a cigar manufactory and store.

The monthly meeting of the Granby S. S. Union will be held at Dexterville on Sunday, the 10th day of January, at 2 o'clock, p. m. Rev. John Fulford of this village and others will address the meeting.

The water in the river has risen considerably, owing to the heavy rains of the past few days. Several families on the flats, it is said, have been compelled to seek more comfortable quarters.

Prof. Coats, formerly principal of the union school in this village, now residing in the eastern part of the state, buried a second daughter within a month, Elizabeth [illegible], aged 11 years. The family have the heartfelt sympathy of many friends here.

Owen Rafferty, who was shot several weeks ago in Syracuse, has been released from the hospital where he has been confined since the shooting, and is in town for a few days, visiting his relatives. He appears nearly as well and hearty as ever. An operation is to be performed this week and the ball removed.

A party of gentlemen from Cleveland, Ohio, were in town last week, and after looking over the stone quarry on the farm of O. J. Jennings in Granby, leased twelve acres of ground. A hollow drill was sunk to a distance of 65 feet. The core showed a fine quality of brown sand stone. Work upon the new quarry will be commenced early in the spring.

Next Tuesday evening Mr. and Mrs. N. C. Forrester, supported by an excellent company, will open an engagement of five nights in Stephens Opera House, with a change of program each night. The press every where speaks of this company in the highest terms. Popular prices of admission, 20 and 25 cents. Reserved seats for sale at Watson's drug store.

Nugent & Gleason's Metropolitan company closed a very successful engagement here last Saturday evening. They have been greeted by good houses during their stay and cannot but feel pleased at their reception in Fulton. They seem to grow better each season and the amusement loving public will always welcome the Metropolitans to our village. They left Monday morning for Baldwinsville, where they play a week's engagement.

Albert Vanderhaden of this village, was arrested and lodged in jail Monday afternoon by Officer Poole on the receipt of a dispatch from Chief Wright of Syracuse, charging him with larceny. An officer came here yesterday morning and returned with the prisoner to Syracuse. The alleged crime was committed on the night of charter election in 1884, when a man named Geo. Barber was robbed of a gold watch and chain. The police have been looking for Vanderhaden for over a year.

It is finally settled in regard to the old sewer that was dug up in Rochester street several months ago by men in the employ of the New York, Ontario & Western R.R. company, and through which a sewer connecting Second street with the canal was to have been layed, and which has remained in an unsightly condition since the question arose as to whether the company should lay the sewer the same depth as the old one or go deeper. The company have a force of men at work blasting out the rock and will have it finished as speedily as possible.

Congressional Inquiry Unnecessary.

Congress reassembles to-day and then the fun will begin.

A perfect flood of bills is expected to overwhelm the Speaker's desk within the next two days.

Among them will be not one requiring inquiry as to the best place to buy clothing, for it is well understood all over the country that Kent & Miller's No. 18 and 20 South Salina street, Syracuse, N. Y., is the most popular resort for purchasers of ready made and custom clothing.

The TIMES' readers are reminded of this well known fact, and are earnestly invited to call and examine the stock of overcoats and winter suits which, as the season draws on towards its close, must be disposed of at prices very disadvantageous to customers. Remember the place No. 18 and 20 South Salina street.

A Pointer For Pasteur.

Henry Bergh says there is no such thing as hydrophobia, but if a man chases a dog down one street and up another and hoots and yells at it and throws stones at it, the dog gets mad. Why, certainly, Henry. Your head is level as a nice [illegible]. And when a dog chases a man down street and over the fence and through the garden and down the alley and into the river and up the hill and around the [illegible]

Ten Years in Auburn.

Murtaugh Murphy of this village, who was tried at the county court in Oswego last week for the crime of highway robbery on James Dewell of Palermo, was found guilty and sentenced to ten years at hard labor in Auburn prison. The prisoner took the sentence coolly, but his aged mother, who was in the court room, cried bitterly. The sentence was the lowest that could be inflicted in such a case.

Our readers will remember taat on the evening of Saturday, June 27, 1885, Dewell, in company with several others, visited several saloons in town, the last one being Conley's on Second street. While there he displayed quite a sum of money and soon after started to go home with a friend of his who lived near the Upper Landing. When near the Willow hotel on his return, he claims to have been set upon by Murphy and another man by the name of James Dwyer, also of this village. Through the untiring efforts of Officer Poole, Dewell identified the two men and notwithstanding their threats of punishment appeared against them upon their examination and they were held to await the action of the grand jury. Dwyre will be tried in March. He is under $1,000 bail. He was taken to Oswego yesterday his bondsmen having surrendered him.

The New Railroad.

The extension of the Phœnix & Syracuse railroad from the junction to Broadway is rapidly nearing completion. A large gang of men were working all Saturday night and Sunday. The ties and rails are laid nearly to Division street. Monday work was suspended, owing to the rain. A TIMES reporter who visited the place yesterday found an animated scene, an engine and several flat cars carrying sand and gravel, and a large force of laborers engaged in leveling up the track. In digging out the cut near the junction, a team was driven along a line of shovelers, each man throwing a shovel full of dirt on the wagon and when it had passed the line of workmen was full. An endless procession of wagons kept the shovelers busy and the wagons moving continually. The contemplated passenger and freight depot has been marked out with stakes. It will be on the north-eastern corner of the foundry lot, directly opposite Case's grocery.

Grand Army Camp-Fire.

Post Schenck, G. A. R., of this village, held one of their notable camp-fires last evening in Nichols hall. The members of the post with their families and friends were bountifully served with refreshments, after which, short, pithy speeches were made by different members of the post and citizens. An excellent program consisting of readings, recitations, etc., was rendered. The Fulton band was present and furnished some very fine music. Several veterans gave some very interesting reminiscences of army life. At a late hour the company departed with pleasant memories of a Grand Army camp-fire.

Jumped the Track.

About one o'clock Monday morning, an engine and caboose backing up to Syracuse from Oswego jumped the track at Woodard's station on the S. P. & O. railroad. No one was injured, The wreck lay in such a position that trains could not pass and passengers were transferred. The freight trains were abandoned. A wrecking train was sent out from Oswego and the wreck cleared away.

Unclaimed Letters.

The following letters remain uncalled for in the post office at Fulton, Oswego county, N. Y. on January 6th, 1885:

The regular monthly meeting of the Fire department was held last evening.

A number of young people attended the reception given by the Celery Club in Phoenix last Friday evening. They report a fine time.

We publish in another column a letter from Orin L. Horton, a former well-known resident of this village, who for several years has been living in Iowa.

In our issue of last week we were in error in stating that John Cavanaugh had been arrested and convicted of an assault on Timothy Sullivan. We should have said Thomas Cavanaugh.

Joseph Murphy, who for some time past has kept the grocery at the corner of Broadway and First streets, has confessed judgment to C. E. Crouse & Co., of Syracuse, for the sum of $1,500, and his store was closed by the sheriff last Thursday. The goods were sold yesterday.

At the regular meeting of Neahtawanta Lodge, No. 245, I. O. O. F., held last Wednesday evening, the following officers were elected: J. C. Dresser, N. G.; J. H. Case, V. G.; Harvey Buck, Recording Secretary; Jas. Stevens, Permanent Sec.; Jas. Parker, Treas. They will be installed this evening.

To-morrow evening occurs the first of a series of social receptions given by the Odd Fellows at their rooms in the Dexter block. The socials will be held each alternate Thursday evening during the winter. The committee on reception are E. C. Wolcott, J. C. Dresser, Jas. Stevens, W. J. Boomer, and L. Palmer. Judging from the socials given by the Odd Fellows during several past seasons, a pleasant and successful series may confidently be looked for.

In 1886 New Year's day came on Friday; Washington's birthday will come on Monday; St. Valentine's day on Sunday; All Fool's day on Thursday; Memorial day on Sunday; Fourth of July on Sunday; St. Patricks's day on Wednesday, and Christmas on Saturday. Easter Sunday will be the 25th of April; Lent begins March 10. There will be two eclipses, of the sun, one March 5th, visible in the United States, west of the Susquehanna river. This will be annular. The other on August 29th; visible as a partial eclipse here.

A meeting of the stockholders and directors of the Howe Ventilating Stove Works, was held yesterday afternoon at their salesrooms, corner of Broadway and First streets. A splendid showing was made in the report of the work done to Jan. 1st. The stove is an undoubted success and the stockholders have the utmost confidence in its future prosperity, so much so, that they decided to increase their stock fifty per cent, and to push the works to their full capacity the coming season. The old board of directors was re-elected. F. G. Weeks president, E. R. Redhead vice-president; A. Bristol treasurer; E. L. Messenger, manager; A. Emerick, John Pratt and G. J. Emeny directors.

The Amusement Club met last Friday evening at the residence of F. A. Emerick. About thirty couples were present. A notable feature of the evening was the Christmas tree, loaded with beautiful (?) presents and a great deal of amusement was occasioned as the various gifts were opened. Refreshments were served and dancing indulged in. "David" of Syracuse furnished the music. Among the guests of the club from out of town were Mr. and Mrs. McKinstry, James Herrick, of Oswego; Misses Lillian and Annie Foster, of Canandaigua, and Mr. Kellogg of Chittenango. The club at present comprises about fifty-five members.

Palermo.

PALERMO, Jan. 4th—The party at the Palermo Centre House on New Year's was well attended, about ninety couples being present. Everything passed off very pleasantly. Good music and a very fine supper was furnished. A large number of Fulton young people attended the party.

Frank Randall and wife of Syracuse, are in town since New Years, making his friends a call. He was formerly of this place and has many friends here.

James Partrick of Lockport, is on a visit here to see his many relatives and old friends.

COUNTY COMMENT.

The Sandy Creek News says that it is common gossip on the street that a man residing in that town sold his wife to another man for two dollars. After living with number two awhile the woman returned to her husband.

The house on the Morehouse farm, about one-half mile from Mexico, occupied by a family named Becker, was totally destroyed by fire Monday morning. The house, but not the household goods, was insured. The family had a narrow escape from being burned to death. Nothing was saved.

Yesterday morning, the examination of Wm. White of Hannibal, who is charged with the seduction of Maggie Jacobs of the same town, under the promise of marriage, was commenced before Recorder Bulger in Oswego. Messrs Metcalf & Hathway appeared for the people and Morehouse and Beckett for the defence. Miss Jacobs was put on the stand and swore that she was 16 years of age in September and also swore positively to the offense as charged in the absence of her adopted parents, Mr. and Mrs. Sanford Palmer of Hannibal. The defense say that they will be able to prove Mr. White entirely innocent [illegible]

[illegible] in the [illegible] Iowa. It will be [illegible] the coming February since I left your [illegible] village, to cast my lot with the growing west, and so far have never regretted my venture. At present I am engaged in the general merchandise business and find that the past year has been very hard for farmers and merchants. The hog cholera has played sad havoc among western swine, to which we attribute in a great degree the business depression. The general opinion is that times will be no better for some time to come. Prices of produce are exceedingly low. There has been a great rush for new settlements in the West the past two years, and it would astonish New York people to see the few young men who remain under the paternal roof of the Iowa farmer after passing his majority. Iowa is a grand State and in a few years will be in the foremost ranks as regards productiveness and wealth. Why, you may ask; because of her deep rich soil and salubrious atmosphere. There is not a State in the Union which has the evenness and depth of soil that Iowa possesses. Land here at present is very low but we may expect a great rise in prices within the next two years. The finest soil under good improvement can be purchased now at from $20.00 to $35.00 per acre according to location and it would be a fine opportunity now for Fultonians desiring a new home, to purchase a splendid farm at a fair price. Taxes are light, the State is free from debt, and no railroad bonds to pay. Cattle and hogs are the principal stock products of the Iowa farmer and it is not uncommon to find many of the business men in most towns engaged in the same industry most of them owning farms in the adjoining vicinity. Among the grain products, corn is king, for it is a necessary adjunct to the stock industry. Wheat has had it's day and but little of it is raised. As to our climate, we have all that can be asked for. The winters are short and often severe, but for no length of time. Snow is a scarcity and seldom do we have sleighing. So far this season we have had one cold wave and a light run of sleighing for a period of ten days but since the 15th we have had warm weather and for two days past fog, rain and wind. Fogs are seldom seen in these parts and the climate is very healthy, with no malarial complaints.

I have just noticed the account of the death of Rev. James Gilmour late principal of Falley Seminary and connected with his death appears to me something remarkable. Mr. Gilmour was an excellent man and a fine instructor, and I have hundreds of times gone back in my day dreams to the good old days which I spent at Falley under his training, and as often thought, were I to visit my native town and he was still living he would be one of the first to recieve a call from me. But the remarkable part is that in close proximity with his death I saw him in a dream. I met him at a depot in a strange western town and the meeting was heartily enjoyed. His face was very pale and thin and it was with difficulty that he spoke. He said to me that as soon as he returned to his home in Fulton, that he was going back to Scotland to die, that he could not live but a short time. I felt very sorrowful at his remarks and suddenly he vanished and I saw him no more. When I arose in the morning I mentioned my dream and I believe if I had noted the date it would have corresponded with the date of his death. Questions: Do spirits exist and do they impart information similar to the above to friends however far they may be seperated?

As I have written at greater length than I intended I will close, hoping to receive calls from my acquaintances in and about Fulton should they come this way. Truly yours

[illegible] them out and perhaps [illegible]

It is said that in packing apples for [illegible] fruit should be filled two [illegible] higher than the head of the barrel so that when pressed down it will not shake by rough handling in the cars or in being delivered.

It is said that there is no better index to the health of cattle and horses than the condition of the hair. Indigestion and all other diseases that farm stock is heir to, even in a short time, is plainly indicated by a rough, harsh coat of the animal.

For a horse which carries his tongue out of his mouth, fit on the bit an oval piece about three inches long by two inches wide. It is put over the tongue, and as the tongue can not then be put over the bit it can not be thrown out at the side, and must be kept in its right place.

Crocks of butter placed in the cellar to keep for months should be at least a foot from the cellar bottom on a bench, and have a thick woolen cloth thrown over them. If the crock touches the cellar bottom there will be two degrees of temperature within it, and this will be prejudicial to the top portion.

Farm Hints for January.

Of course, before you take your vacation, the farm harness will be oiled and repaired, the wagons, and sleighs, and buggies and carriages, carefully examined, and the nuts tightened. There will be a place for everything and everything will be in its place—forks, rakes, hoes, shovels, spades, chains, clevises, whiffle-trees, plows, cultivators, horse-rake, mower, binder, roller, harrows, farm drill, garden drill, garden line, corn marker—I am afraid my corn marker is sticking on the fence, but I have no expectation of taking a vacation unless we may conclude that that is the proper place for it.

Of course you will get the harrow teeth sharpened, and the wood-work saturated with crude petroleum. The manure will be all drawn out and piled in the field. You will get everything ready for the lambs, and the pens will be made comfortable for the early spring pigs. You will have a plenty of troughs and racks. Hoops will be tightened on barrels. New leathers will be put on pumps. Pruning will be done. Dead trees will be cut down and worked up. Dead branches of shade trees will be removed, and wherever shade trees, or trees on the lawn are too thick, they will be thinned out. Fences, gates and bars, will be in perfect order. All the pig pens, cow stables, hen house, cellars and sheep sheds, will have two coats of white wash, and some of them three. The potatoes in the cellar will be sorted over, the decayed ones removed, and those intended for seed, for market, or for home use, put by themselves. There will be no broken panes of glass; no windows loose in the frames; the doors, the locks and the bolts, will work smoothly. The garret will be overhauled. Perhaps you will say this is woman's work. At any rate, you will see that they have a good bench for the wash tubs.—[American Agriculturist for January.

New Potatoes.

Whether deterioration and loss of vigor in the course of cultivation are owing to an inherent tendency in a variety, or result from faulty methods of cultivation, it would be difficult to decide, with our present knowledge; but certain it is that potatoes, formerly famous and profitable, have disappeared from cultivation, and became supplanted by new-comers. Every year witnesses the introduction of numerous new [illegible], most of them not better, if so [illegible] already existing standard kinds. [illegible] Peachblow, Prince Albert, and [illegible] unexcelled Mercer, had to give [illegible] the Early Goodrich, Calico, and [illegible] which in their turn have disappeared to make room for the Early Rose, Snowflake, White Star, and others; and, to judge from the past development of potatoes, these favorites of the present day, will, before long, have to yield to newer varieties. Many of these will have but a short existence, yet our leading seedsmen have become more careful in ascertaining the real merits of [illegible] before sending them out [illegible] the custom. [illegible] to try "something [illegible] but little risk [illegible] novelties introduced [illegible].—[Dr. [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] we would not have [illegible] an old man.

Verily, a diamond in the rough. As a child he sat in the shadows of poverty; as a youth he had no advantages of education; as a man he must enjoy the [illegible] of life with brawn and muscle. And so he came to the public a diamond in the rough, but he brought with him such a big heart, such good nature, and such a fund of sympathy for the erring and unfortunate that the men and women and children of America forgot his rough points and became his friends and defenders.

And he is dead!

A thousand lost children have been taken kindly in his arms, their tears of fright wiped away with a fatherly hand and his soothing voice has said to them: "I will soon take you home to mother." Women whose lives have been a struggle with poverty and despair have come to him for kind words and for bread, and not one has ever been refused. Men who had been unfortunate have found in him an honest sympathizer and a kind adviser. In his goings and comings his cheerful voice and big heart made the world better.

And to-day he lies in his last resting place—old, poor in purse, with no grand procession of carriages—but with more hearts sorrowing than we can number. There will be no monument to mark his grave, but it will be remembered for all that. When the world owes a debt of gratitude it does not repay it in cold and unfeeling marble.

How often this old man lying dead—this man with such a heart as the world seldom hears of—has pleaded with Justice to give the young and unfortunate, the old and despairing, one more opportunity to retrieve themselves, we who have seen him daily know best. How many owe to him as much as themselves the fact that they are living in the sunshine of honest life to-day we will not say. It is a grand eulogy on the dead to say of him: "He wronged no one—all were his friends."

And that big heart has stopped its beating, and that gruff voice, of which children even were not afraid, will be heard no more on earth. If he did not profess Christianity—if not found upon his knees among praying men—if his voice did not sing the hymns of salvation—he had in his heart charity, sympathy, forgiveness. That was the record he took with him into the valley of the shadow—across the dark river to the brighter shore. By it he will be judged, and a thousand hearts will plead: "May he find peace."—[Detroit Free Press.

A New Year's Song.

[illegible] is full of mystery,
[illegible]
What is before [illegible]
[illegible] work of [illegible];
[illegible] and why they brought [illegible] thought.

[illegible] was a time when we were [illegible],
[illegible]
[illegible] and be forgot,
[illegible] all our joy and [illegible].
[illegible] like the wind or like the snow
[illegible] a thousand years ago.

We live as if we should not die,
Blindly, but wisely, too;
For if we knew Death always nigh,
What would we say or do.
But fold our hands, and close our eyes,
And care no more who lives or dies.

If death to each man in his turn
Is coming, soon or late,
Be ours the soldier's unconcern
And his courageous fate;
Better to perish in the strife
Than to preserve the coward's life.

Before my heart's [illegible] pondering long,
As 'twere a bivouac,
I heard last night this solemn song,
Which I have summoned back.
It seems my sombre mood to cheer,
And is my greeting to the Year.

New Year, if you are bringing Youth,
As you are bringing Age,
I would not have it back, in sooth;
I have no strength to wage
Lost battles over. Let them be.
Bury your dead, O Memory.

You can bring nothing will surprise
And nothing will dismay.
For tears again in these old eyes,
No darkness in my day.
You might bring light and smiles instead
If you could give me back my dead.

I have beheld your kiss, New Year,
Full fifty times, and none
That was so happy and so dear,
I wept when it was done.
Why should we weep when years depart,
And leave their ashes in the heart?

Good-by, since you are gone, Old Year,
And my past life, good-by.
I shed no tear upon your bier,
For it is well to die.
New Year, your worst will be my best.
What can an old man want but rest?

—[R. H. Stoddard.

THE JUMPING FROG OF CALAVERAS.

BY "MARK TWAIN."

In compliance with the request of a friend of mine, who wrote me from the East, I called on good-natured, garrulous old Simon Wheeler, and inquired after my friend's friend, Leonidas W. Smiley, as requested to do, and I hereunto append the result. I have a lurking suspicion that Leonidas W. Smiley is a myth; that my friend never knew such a personage; and that he only conjectured that if I asked old Wheeler about him, it would remind him of his infamous Jim Smiley, and he would go to work and bore me to death with some exasperating reminiscence of him as long and as tedious as it would be useless to me. If that was the design, it succeeded.

I found Simon Wheeler dozing comfortably by the bar-room stove of the dilapidated tavern in the decayed mining camp of Angel's, and I noticed that he was fat and bald-headed, and had an expression of winning gentleness and simplicity upon his tranquil countenance. He roused up and gave me good-day. I told him a friend of mine had commissioned me to make some inquiries about a cherished companion of his boyhood, named Leonidas W. Smiley—Rev. Leonidas W. Smiley, a young minister of the Gospel, who he had heard was at one time a resident of Angel's Camp. I added that if Mr. Wheeler could tell me anything about this Rev. Leonidas W. Smiley, I would feel under many obligations to him.

Simon Wheeler backed me into a corner and blockaded me there with his chair, and then sat down and reeled off [illegible] narrative which follows [illegible] paragraph. He never smiled, he never frowned, he never changed his voice from the gentle flowing key to which he tuned his initial sentence, he never betrayed the slightest suspicion of enthusiasm; but all through the interminable narrative there ran a vein of [illegible] earnestness and sincerity, which showed me plainly that, so far [illegible] imagining that there was anything ridiculous or funny about his [illegible] regarded it as a really important [illegible], and admired its two heroes [illegible] transcendent genius in finesse. [illegible] go on in his own way, and [illegible] interrupted him once.

[illegible] Leonidas W. H'm, Rev. Le— [illegible] was a feller here once by the [illegible] Jim Smiley, in the winter of '49 [illegible] the spring of '50—I [illegible] exactly, somehow, though [illegible] makes me think it was one or the [illegible] big [illegible] come [illegible] the [illegible] and can tell you about him. Why, it never made no difference to him—he'd bet on anything—the dangdest feller. Parson Walker's wife laid very sick once for a good while, and it seemed as if they warn't going to save her; but one morning he come in, and Smiley up and asked him how she was, and he said she was considerable better—thank the Lord for His inf'nite mercy—and coming on so smart that with the blessing of Providence she'd get well; and Smiley, before he thought, says, 'Well, I'll resk two-and a half she don't, anyway.'

"Thish-yer Smiley had a mare—the boys called her the fifteen-minute nag, but that was only in fun, you know, because [illegible] was faster'n that—and he used to win money on that horse, for all she was so slow and always had the asthma, or the distemper, or the consumption, or something of that kind. They used to give her two or three hundred yard's start, and then pass her under way; but always at the fag-end of the [illegible] she'd get excited and desperate-like, and come cavorting and straddling up, and scattering her legs around limber, sometimes in the air, and sometimes out to one side among the fences, and kicking up m-o-r-e dust and raising m-o-r-e racket with her coughing and sneezing, and blowing her nose—and always fetch up at the stand just about a neck ahead, as near as you could cipher it down.

"And he had a little small bull-pup, that to look at him you'd think he warn't worth a cent but to set around and look ornery, and lay for a chance to steal something. But as soon as money was up on him he was a different dog; his under jaw'd begin to stick out like the fo'castle of a steamboat, and his teeth would uncover and shine like the furnaces. And a dog might tackle him and bully-rag him, and bite him, and throw him over his shoulder two or three times, and Andrew Jackson—which was the name of the pup—Andrew Jackson would never let on but what he was satisfied, and hadn't expected nothing else—and the bets being doubled and doubled on the other side all the time, till the money was all up; and then all of a sudden he would grab that other dog jest by the j'int of his hind leg and freeze to it—not chaw, you understand, but only just grip and hang on till they throwed up the sponge, if it was a year. Smiley always come out winner on that pup, 'till he harnessed a dog once that didn't have no hind legs, because they'd been sawed off by a circular saw, and when the thing had gone along far enough, and the money was all up, and he come to make a snatch for his pet holt, he see in a minute how he'd been imposed on, and how the other dog had him in the door, so to speak, and he 'peared surprised, and then he looked sorter discouraged like, and didn't try no more to win the fight, and so he got shucked out bad. He gave Smiley a look, as much as to say his heart was broke, and it was his fault, for putting up a dog that hadn't no hind legs for him to take holt of, which was his main dependence in a fight, and then he limped off a piece and laid down and died. It was a good pup, was that Andrew Jackson, and would have made a name for hisself if he'd lived, for [illegible] in him and he had genius—I [illegible] because he hadn't no opportunities to speak of, and it don't stand to reason that a dog could make such a fight as he could under them circumstances if he hadn't no talent. It always makes me feel sorry when I think of that last fight of his'n, and the way it turned out.

"Well, thish-yer Smiley had rat-tarriers and chicken-cocks, and tom-cats, and all them kind of things, till you couldn't rest, and you couldn't fetch nothing for him to bet on but he'd match you. He ketched a frog one day, and took him home, and said he cal'lated to educate him; and so he never done nothing for three months but set in his back yard and learn that frog to jump. And you bet he did learn him, too. He'd give him a little punch behind, and the next minute you'd see that frog whirling in the air like a doughnut—see him turn one summerset, or maybe a couple, if he got a good start, and come down flat-footed and all right, like a cat. He got him up so in the matter of ketching flies, and kept him in practice so constant, that he'd nail a fly every time as fur as he could see him. Smiley said all a frog wanted was education, and he could do 'most anything—and I believe him. Why, I've seen him set Dan'l Webster down here on this floor—Dan'l Webster was the name of the frog—and sing out, 'Flies, Dan'l, flies!' and quicker than you could wink he'd spring straight up and snake a fly off'n the counter there, and flop down on the floor ag'in as solid as a gob of mud, and fall to scratching the side of his head with his hind foot as indifferent as if he hadn't no idea he'd been doin' more'n any frog might do. You never see a frog so modest and straightfor'ard as he was, for all he was so gifted. And when it come to fair and square jumping on a dead level, he could get over more ground at one straddle than any other animal of his [illegible]. Jumping on a dead level was his strong suit, you understand; and when it come to that, Smiley [illegible] him as [illegible] a red. Smiley was monstrous proud of his frog, and well he might be, for fellers that had traveled and been [illegible] he laid over any [illegible]

[illegible] the beast in a little [illegible] to fetch him [illegible]

'Well,' Smiley says, easy and careless, 'he's good enough for one thing, I should judge—he can outjump any frog in Calaveras county.'

The feller took the box again, and took another long, particular look, and gave it back to Smiley, and says, very deliberate, 'Well, I don't see no p'ints about that frog that's any better'n any other frog.'

'Maybe you don't,' says Smiley. 'Maybe you understand frogs and maybe you don't understand 'em; maybe you've had experiance, and maybe you ain't only an amature, as it were. Anyways, I've got my opinion and I'll resk forty dollars that he can outjump any frog in Calaveras county.'

And the feller studied a minute, and then says, kinder sad like, 'Well, I'm only a stranger here, and I ain't got no frog; but if I had a frog I'd bet you.'

And then Smiley says, 'That's all right—that's all right—if you'll hold my box a minute, I'll go and get you a frog.' And so the feller took the box, and put up his forty dollars along with Smiley's, and set down to wait.

"So he set there a good while thinkin to hisself, and then he got the frog out and pried his mouth open, and took a teaspoon and filled him full of quail shot—filled him pretty near up to his chin—and set him on the floor.

Smiley he went to the swamp and slopped around in the mud for a long time, and finally he ketched a frog, and fetched him in and gave him to the feller, and says:

'Now, if you're ready, set him alongside of Dan'l, with his forepaws just even with Dan'l's, and I'll give the word.' Then he says, 'One—two—three—git!' and him and the feller touched up the frogs from behind, and the new frog hopped off lively, but Dan'l gave a heave, and histed up his shoulders—so—like a Frenchman, but it warn't no use—he couldn't budge; he was planted as solid as a church, and he couldn't no more stir than if he was anchored out. Smiley was a good deal surprised, and he was disgusted, too, but he didn't have no idea what the matter was, of course.

The feller took the money and started away; and when he was going out at the door, he sorter jerked his thumb over his shoulder—so—at Dan'l, and says again, very deliberate, 'Well,' says he, 'I don't see no p'ints about that frog that's any better'n any other frog.'

Smiley he stood scratching his head and looking down at Dan'l a long time, and at last he says, 'I do wonder what in the nation that frog throwed off for—I wonder if there ain't something the matter with him—he 'pears to look mighty baggy, somehow.' And he ketched Dan'l by the nape of his neck and hefted him, and says, 'Why, blame my cats if he don't weigh five pounds!' and turned him upside down and belched out a double handful of shot. And then he see how it was, and he was the maddest man—he set the frog down and took out after that feller, but he never ketched him. And——'

[Here Simon Wheeler heard his name called from the front yard, and got up to see what was wanted.] And turning to me as he moved away, he said, "Just set where you are, stranger, and rest easy—I ain't going to be gone a second."

But by your leave, I did not think that a continuation of the history of the enterprising vagabond Jim Smiley would be likely to afford me much information concerning the Rev. Leonidas W. Smiley, and so I started away.

At the door I met the sociable Wheeler returning, and he buttonholed me and re-commenced:

"Well thish-yer Smiley had a yaller one-eyed cow that didn't have no tail, only jest a short stump like a bannanner, and——"

However, lacking both time and inclination, I did not wait to hear about the afflicted cow, but took my leave.

George Washington's Mother.

She was a woman born to command, and since she was left alone with a family and an estate to care for, she took the reins in her own hands, and never gave them up to any one else. She used to drive about in an old-fashioned open chaise, visiting the various parts of her farm, just as a planter would do on horse-back. The story is told that she had given an agent directions how to do a piece of work, and he had seen fit to do it differently, because he thought his way a better one. He showed her the improvement.

"And pray," said the lady, "who gave you any exercise of judgement in the matter? I command you, sir; there is nothing left for you but to obey."

I think that George Washington owed two strong traits to his mother,—a governing spirit, and a spirit of order and method. She taught him many lessons and gave him many rules; but, after all, it was her character shaping his which was most powerful. She taught him to be truthful, but her lessons were not half so forcible as her own truthfulness.—[January St. Nicholas.

ALMOST A CAPTURE.

An Incident of the Late War.

[Written for The Times.]

In looking back upon the events of my past life, none do I dwell upon with greater interest, than those that transpired during my connection with the army.

The life and career of the soldier in the field is marked by the continued repetitions of hair breadth escapes from death and capture. He is often called upon to extricate himself from difficulties, which in private life he would deem almost an impossibility.

Allow me here to recount an adventure, in which I was the principal actor. It was during the fall of '63, the army of the Potomac was lying at winter quarters on the Orange & Alexandria railroad and before the season had passed the daily routine of duty made camp life rather dull and monotinous, yet sometimes we were awakened from our lethergy by the daring raids of Mosby's men, who swarmed the country in great numbers and they had become so bold of late that only a short time before the event, which I am about to relate, transpired, they actually attacked Gen. Ayers and staff within sight of headquarters though his body guard was twice their number.

Orders were immediately issued that no officer should leave camp unless he had a special pass from the general in command.

It was nearly Christmas and of course every preparation was made that could be, so far as our limited means would allow, to make the event interesting and acceptable. I had previously made arrangements with a family that were living about a mile from camp, to provide a turkey and, a pair of chickens for our expected feast, and it was agreed that I should go or send for them on the day before Christmas, but these new orders being issued, I doubted whether I would be able to accomplish my undertaking.

It so happened that the regiment on picket at the place I wished to pass, was the one to which I was connected. I knew that it would be an easy matter for me to pass the lines, and not feeling satisfied with the idea of giving up entirely our expected banquet, the longed for feast, I carefully armed myself with a pair of "Colt's navies" and started. I succeeded in passing the line of pickets without difficulty though I had to promise secrecy with regard to the genuiness of my pass port.

The house I was about to visit was nearly a mile from the picket line. It was situated on rising ground sloping from either side and from the way I approached was a narrow ravine, or marsh, which had to be crossed, and through its centre ran a stream. From the ravine to the picket line was a belt of thick heavy timber.

When I reached the house, I found everything according to my previous agreement. I paid for my purchase and accepted an invitation to remain for a while as I had on previous occasions, chatting with the daughter of my host. I was so pleasantly entertained that the sun was quite down, and I was somewhat surprised when I became aware of the lateness of the hour.

Before starting I went to the front window, from which I could see the surrounding country at a glance, wishing to know if the coast was clear. To my surprise I saw emerging from the woods I have before metioned, four mounted men dressed in that detestable grey. Escape from the house would be impossible without discovery, but believing that they were not aware of my presence in the house, I thought it would be better to let them pass.

From the appearance of the approaching party after they had crossed the run, I knew that they were aware of my presence, for they immediately encircled the house and came from all sides. A southern prison with all its dread realities rushed through my mind, though I was bound not to be taken without a struggle, for I was well armed and intended to use my weapons if necessary. The people were very much alarmed with regard to my safety and suggested a way of escape. I went to the chamber and from a window saw my only way. There was a wood shed whose roof came nearly to the window and I could see two men tying their horses near by. I knew if I were only on the back of one of them and was free to go I was safe. I took off my boots so as to make no noise in my descent. I opened the window carefully and saw that my way was clear. I reached the ground without difficulty, but to my mortification, in my great haste to escape, I had forgotten my boots and the ground was well covered with snow. Unfastening one of the horses was the work of an instant. I vaulted into the saddle, gave him the command "go" adding to it a blow of my revolver. He was a noble animal and sped like the wind. I had nearly succeeded in reaching the run before my escape was discovered.

Soon they were after me like a pack of blood hounds after a fugitive slave, I felt as though my life hung on a hair. They discharged their pistols at me but without effect only to increase my speed, though one of the bullets came in [illegible] to my cranium. I [illegible]

Ingersoll on Lincoln.

Under the singular caption of "Motley and Monarch," Col. Robert G. Ingersoll contributes to the December North American Review, a genuine "prose-poem" on Abraham Lincoln, who is summed up and photographed in a single paragraph, thus:

Strange mingling of mirth and tears, of the tragic and grotesque, of cap and crown, of Socrates and Rabelais, of Æsop and Marcus Aurelius, of all that is gentle and just, humorous and honest, merciful, wise, laughable, lovable, and divine, and all consecrated to the use of man; while through all, and over all, an overwhelming sense of obligation, of chivalric loyalty to truth, and upon all the shadow of the tragic end.

And here are some more of the diamonds gleaming incidentally in Colonel Ingersoll's surperb cluster:

Nearly all the great historic characters are impossible monsters, disproportioned by flattery, or by calumny deformed. We know nothing of their peculiarities.

Washington is now only a steel engraving. About the real man who lived and loved and hated and schemed we know but little.

Hundreds of people are now engaged in smoothing out the lines on Lincoln's face—forcing all features to the common mould—so that he may be known, not as he really was, but, according to their poor standard, as he should have been.

Lincoln never finished his education. To the night of his death he was a pupil, a learner, an inquirer, a seeker after knowledge. You have no idea how many men are spoiled by what is called education. For the most part colleges are places where pebbles are polished and diamonds are dimmed. If Shakespeare had graduated at Oxford, he might have been a quibbling attorney or a hypocritical parson.

Nothing discloses real character like the use of power. It is easy for the weak to be gentle. Most people can bear adversity. But if you wish to know what a man really is, give him power. This is the supreme test. It is the glory of Lincoln that, having almost absolute power, he never abused it, except upon the side of mercy.

He was patient as Destiny, whose undecipherable hieroglyphics were so deeply graven on his sad tragic face.

Lincoln was the grandest figure of the fiercest civil war. He is the gentlest memory of our world.

HOUSEHOLD HELPS.

A neat, clean, fresh aired, sweet and well managed house exercises a moral as well as a physical influence over its inmates.

Whole cloves are now used to exterminate moths, and are better for that purpose than either tobacco, camphor, or cedar shavings.

To loosen stoppers of toilet bottles, let a drop of oil flow around the stopper and stand it about a foot from the fire. After a time tap it smartly, but not too hard. If then it does not loosen, add a fresh drop of oil.

A strong solution of sulphate of magnesia will give a beautiful quality to white wash, and a little of it used with starch will add considerably to its stiffness, and render cotton or linen garments to a certain extent incombustible.

In buying lamp chimnies it pays to buy the best, though at double the cost. One of the best kind will bear almost any ill usage; while the least sprinkle of even warm dish water is enough to break one of the common sort.

To make excellent tooth powder take and quantity of finely pulverized charcoal made very fine; then add a little suds made of castile soap and sufficient spirits of camphor to wet all to a thick paste. Apply with the finger, rubbing thoroughly, and it will whiten the teeth better than any tooth powder you can buy.

Keep if you can, a closet for the sole use of medicines, and appliance for sickness or accidents. A narrow, high chimneyside closet answers the purpose admirably, with shelves half way down and deep drawers to fill the remaining space. Bundles of old, soft cotton and linen pieces, a roll of cotton batting and flannel, the rubber water bag, medicine dropper, bed pan, and feeding cup, and everything needed in emergency or long sickness. Have every vial plainly labeled, those marked poison place always on the upper shelf. Keep the whole under lock and key, the key beyond the reach of children, but easily accessible to older members of the family.—[Good Housekeeping.

TIRED AND LANGUID WOMEN.

How many women there are of whom these words are true: "They feel languid and tired, hardly able to bear their weight on their feet, the bloom all gone from their cheeks, irritable and cross without meaning to be, nerves all upset, worried with the children, fretted over little things, a burden to themselves, and yet with no acute disease. What a pity it is. But a few bottles of Parker's Tonic will drive all this away, and relieve the troubles peculiar to their sex.

JAS. R. FAIRGRIEVE - EDITOR

The past week is noted for having had the most severe storm that has occurred in over twenty years. In nearly every state east of the Rocky Mountains there have been heavy snow falls, very low temperature, high winds, blizzards, blockaded railroads and highways. Traffic and travel have been impeded while the loss of life and the suffering of stock has been very great. The Utica Herald of Monday says:

"A snow storm, accompanied by a high wind and very cold weather, prevailed the latter part of last week, throughout the United States east of the Rocky Mountains. In extent and severity it was the worst in over twenty years. Railway travel over a large extent of country was paralyzed. Ice formed in the gulf states, and people froze to death in several of them. The low temperature continues south and west."

Although the weather has been crisp in Central New York, this locality seems to have been favored as to less severity, possibly because it was the dead center of the wintry cyclone, and also because we have become accustomed to such January manifestations."

The maratine disasters, along the American coast have been extremely great. From Maine to Florida come reports of marine disasters while the coasts have been strewn with the debris of shattered shipping. It is impossible to estimate how many vessels have been wrecked, how many lives have been lost.

In Galveston, New Orleans and many other points in the South the thermometer registered a lower temperature than has been before recorded, on the gulf coast, since 1862.

Great and wide spread destruction was caused among the live stock, especially sheep, in some of the western states. Stockmen and farmers did not anticipate the storm, and many did not have their stock under shelter. The snow blockades on the railroads have been almost unprecedented. Trains all over the country have been from one to fifteen hours late. In many instances trains were abandoned and on many smaller roads traffic was entirely suspended.

The signal office reported the following temperature Monday: Boston 6 above zero; New York, 10 above; Albany, 9 above; Buffalo, 8 above; Chicago, 9 below; Milwaukee, 2 below; Pittsburg, 1 below; Cincinnati, 11 below; Cleveland, 8 below; St. Louis, 9 below; Omaha, 15 below; Washington, 6above; Augusta, 8 above; New Orleans, 22 above; Galveston, 26 above; Memphis, 2 below; Nashville, 8 below; Bismark, Dak., 27 below; Helena, Mont., 15 above; Fort Assinaboine, 13 above; Duluth, 15 below; Minnedas, N.W., 18 below; Lacrosse, 13 below, Denver, 19 above; Des Moines, 13 below; Vicksburg, 10 above; Atlanta, zero; Mobile, 17 above: Knoxville, 6 below; Leavenworth, 10 below.

The change in temperature, during the past week, has been too great, even in this part of the country, to be theroughly enjoyable. We would prefer a little of the "golden mean" between the two extremes of winter weather, but this is merely a matter of choice. We will have to put up with what we get and make the most of it.

COURTNEY AND ROSS.

To-night Charles E. Courtney and Wallace Ross, the oarsmen, will give an exhibition race on Courtney's patent rowing machine at Oswego. It is claimed that they illustrate their style of rowing as faithfully as when in their shells.

THE democrat mayor of Brooklyn has requested the resignation of all the members of the civil service board of that city and intends to have a board of his own.

THE business failures during last week were greater than any other week since January 1885. As reported to R. G. Dunn & Co., they number for the United States 336 and for Canada 20 or a total of 356.

THE fence surrounding the Andre monument at Tappan, which was damaged by the recent explosion, was taken down yesterday and sent to the Composite Iron Works to be repaired. Mr. Field will soon replace the stone in proper shape.

SENATOR Davis has introduced, into the Senate a Postal Telegraph bill. It provides for the establishment of telegraph offices in all Post Offices and for the transmission of telegrams by contract with existing lines. Rates are fixed at 25 cents for 500 miles and 5 cents additional for every 250 miles for 20 word messages.

[illegible], a mining village, near [illegible] has been during the [illegible]

[illegible] Of course there was some disappointment, as there always is, and some ill feeling over the list when it was announced. Still the less favored members are disposed to acknowledge that Speaker Carlisle desires to be just and fair to all. Owing to the great diversity of opinion on important questions, even in his own party, the Speaker's position is a peculiarly difficult one.

The work of the session will now begin in earnest. An immense amount of new business will be presented for consideration, though the country is more interested just now in the quality than the quantity of measures passed. Thus far seventeen hundred House bills have been introduced, and several States are yet to be heard from.

It is hoped the reorganization of the House committees, the change and promotions made among them, will have a salutary effect upon legislation. The revision of the rules, which attracted the attention of the country, will certainly have the effect of expediting such measures as are of urgent importance. It will enable committees to select their important bills and consider them, if a majority so wishes. There will be no wrangling over "points of order" as to legislation on appropriation bills, and there will be far less friction than before as to precidence of business.

Considerable interest has attached to Senatorial proceedings during the last few days. Senator Beck disclaimed any attack upon the Administration in his ante-holiday speech, and inquired if Senator Morrill had not misconstrued his recent utterances on the Silver question. The Senator from Vermont said he had misunderstood Mr. Beck's allusions to the President and his financial adviser, the Secretary of the Treasury, and took pleasure in saying so. Both Senators seemed to feel better after this explanation and immediately was sprung the question of Woman Suffrage in Utah.

That clause of the Utah bill prohibiting women from exercising the right of suffrage in the Territory came up. Senators Hoar of Mass. and Blair of N.H., two prominent champions of woman's rights, combinined an attack upon this section of the bill, and stirred Senator Edmunds to some of his old time spirit. Senator Edmunds declared that the majority of the women of the United States do not sign for the right to vote. At present he thinks society is better off without such a union of the home and the field of politics.

"Whenever our wives, sisters and sweethearts," said he, "believe that they can serve society and themselves by going into politics than by confining themselves to the sphere in which they are now employed, they shall have the aid of my vote in attaining their object."

Senator McPherson, of New Jersey, answered Senator Beck's recent speech by sustaining the President's position, advocating the suspension of silver coinage. Senator Gray, the successor of Secretary Bayard, made his maiden effort in the Senate in the defense of the same measure. The forensic debut of Mr. Gray was listened to with much curiosity and interest. Being a fine looking man and having a good voice and manner he made rather a favorable impression upon both the Senate and galleries. He was however, embarrassed by his surroundings and by an ungracious remark made by Senator Edmunds. The latter had the floor and was asked to yield, in order that Senator Gray might speak on the silver question. Mr. Edmunds said he would not refuse, because it was so important for new Senators to make their first speeches that nothing but the falling-in of the Senate walls should prevent them. Mr. Gray did not look very grateful for this caustic introduction, but made no reply to it, and proceeded with his speech, which he read from manuscript.

STATE AND VICINITY.

John Humphry Noyes, formerly leader of the Oneida Community is very sick at his residence in Niagara Falls. He is in his seventy-fifth year and it is doubtful if he will recover.

The cigar makers have decided to support the strikers of Syracuse and New York.

The annual mechanical fair of the Oswego Citizens Corps will be held at the State armory in Oswego, from Monday, January 25th to Saturday January 30th. The coming fair promises to be even a greater success than the last.

Jacob Henry, a well-to-do Hebrew merchant, committed suicide at his residence in Schenectady last Monday, by shooting.

The mother of Paddy Ryan, the pugilist, died at her home in West Troy, last Sunday night.

The Central railroad shows an increase of 600,000 tons over last year, and the Erie a decrease of 1,500,000 tons.

The St. Lawrence river rose on Sunday and inundated a part of Montreal. The thermometer registered ten below zero. The destitution caused by the flood among the poor people of the city is terrible.

The great Harmony Mills and [illegible]

[illegible] of her, feeling that he was in for it any-how, he beat out her brains with the stock of his gun. The crime, it will be remembered was one of great atrocity. Reed assaulted the young lady while she was walking home after having visited a friend near Gainestown. He concealed himself with his gun by the roadside and sprang on the young lady as she passed through a strip of woods. She resisted and was to strong for him to carry out his purpose. He then struck her with his fist and gun. The brave girl fought him until he shot her and murdered her by striking her repeatedly after she fell.

After the arrival of Reed and the guard at Gainestown it was evident that but short shrift would be allowed him. About two hundred persons, white and black, took the prisoner out on the road near the spot where the murder had been committed and chained him to a tree. Blacks and whites piled light wood about the miserable criminal, and when the pile was breast high one among them applied the torch.

As the flames shot upward the negro gave a shriek of agony. The crowd seeing the smoke and flames enveloping him, did not wish him to die so easily. They scattered the brands and the man was seen writhing in agony. Once more a pile of light wood was constructed and the flames sprung up briskly, scorching the negro terribly. Before they became fatal, however, they were again subdued, and again the doomed wretch was seen convulsed with terror and pain. The third time the pile was lighted it was allowed to do its work, and the body of Reed was completely burned to ashes. The crowd then dispersed to their homes.

This is the second incident of the kind in the same place. About seven years ago a negro preacher who murdered an old lady and a little boy and assaulted a young girl, was in a similar manner tied to the stake and roasted to death.

GENERAL NEWS.

An earthquake shock was distinctly felt at Seneca Falls and Waterloo last Thursday.

The Albany Journal says it is generally understood that the chairmanships of the Assembly committees will be allotted as follows: Ways and means, Mr. Erwin of St. Lawrence; cities, Mr. Hamilton of New York; insurance, Mr. Lyon of New York; judiciary, C. D. Baker of Steuben; canals, Mr. Gallagher of Buffalo; banks, Mr. Hopkins of Greene; state prisons, Mr. Palmer of Clinton; agriculture, Mr. Porter of Niagara; engrossed bills, Mr. Davis of Wayne; railroads, Mr. Cole of Schuyler; revision, Mr. Kruse of Cattaraugus. Speaker Husted is making up the committees on the old basis of seven Republicans to four Democrats. Speaker Husted will officially make known his appointments to-day.

Personal and Political.

John B. Gough has reappeared on the lecture platform.

A complementary dinner was given at Delmonico's last Friday evening, to Governor Hill, by the business men of New York and was a brilliant affair.

Kaufmann, the fifth American patient that has been treated for rabies by Pasteur, the French physician, sailed from Havre, France last Saturday.

S. D. Phelps of New York has laid before the President charges affecting the official integrity of General Appriser Brewster of New York. The President has referrd them to the Secretary of the Treasury.

It is probable that the thirty-ninth state in the union will be Dakota. Senator Moody is bringing all means to bare and says he expects that Dakota will be admitted this winter. A resolution will probably be introduced in the Senate when it next meets.

Bennet Smith, one of the largest ship owners in Nova Scotia, died Monday morning. He was probably the richest man in the Province.

The nomination of Mr. Jordan as treasurer of the United States has been reported favorably by the committee on finance.

Mr. Gladstone and Mr. Parnell were on the same platform a few minutes before the restarting of their respective trains a few days since, but neither of the great leaders spoke to the other.

The New York Star, the paper which is owned and edited by William Dorsheimer, President Cleveland's U. S. district attorney for New York city, produces an article in favor of the election of postmasters by the people in the localities where the office is situated.

General Husted has entered upon his sixteenth year as member of the assembly and it is his fourth term as speaker of that body. This exceeds any previous record within the last thirty years except that of Dewitt G. Littlejohn who was speaker five terms.

For 15 years I was annoyed with severe pain in my head and discharges into my throat from catarrh. My sense of smell was much impaired. By the use of Ely's Cream Balm I have overcome these troubles.—J. B. Case, St. Denis Hotel, N. Y.

Board of Trustees' Proceedings.

FULTON, N. Y., Jan 6. 1886.

Board met pursuant to adjournment.

Present, a full board.

Minutes of last meeting and the special meeting read and approved.

Mr. G. S. Piper appeared before the board in behalf of the Fulton Water Works Company, and asked that the President be authorized to give such company a certificate that the Fire Hydrants and water supply have been accepted by the village.

After some discussion as to the supply of water etc. Mr. Hendrick moved that the president be directed to give a certificate that the Water Works have been completed and water furnished to the Fire Hydrants as required by the contract, and the same accepted on the part of the village, as of January 1st, 1886.

Mr. Piper here stated in behalf of the Water Works Company that the village authorities may at such time as they desire by means of fire alarms or notice to the Superintendent of the Water Works, Company test the Works to any reasonable extent.

Motion of Mr. Kendrick was lost as follows:

Ayes—Mr. Kendricks.	1
Noes—Messrs Gage, Hulett, Johnson.	3
Not voting—Messrs. Bradford and Chase	2

The following bills were reported from the Finance committee and on motion of Mr. Johnson the same were audited at the amounts claimed, and the clerk was instructed to draw orders on the treasurer therefor, viz.:

C. C. Hughes, services Board of Health,	$ 1 50
J. N. Clark, Street Com'r, Highway work,	49 51
Repairs to street lamp,	21 60

S. C. North, gas for street lamps,	22 05
Arvin Rice clerk and services,	26 30
	$263.12

The clerk reported that the Board of Supervisors of Oswego county had disallowed the bill for rent of the jail. And that the same board had [illegible] to agree upon a case to submit the question of the county's liability to pay such rent to the General Term of the Supreme Court. On motion of Mr. Johnson the clerk was directed to agree upon such case in behalf of the village.

[illegible] DISCOVERY.

[illegible]

[illegible] gold, silver, copper, [illegible] Besides, there are abundant samples of granite, marble, [illegible] coal for gas, sandstone, alum, fire clay, shale, gypsum, mineral wax, petroleum, glauber salts, etc. Wheat, barley and oats in profusion are side by side with a fine flour exhibit and a pyramid of excellent woolen goods, as flannels, blankets, shawls, plaids, and cloths for men and women's dress goods. A gigantic pumpkin and a number of gigantic Irish potatoes speak well for the Utah vegetable world.

To-morrow the Creole Historic Exhibit will be formally opened. It occupies part of Art Hall, and will doubtless prove to Northern and Western visitors the most interesting of the many rare attractions the Exposition contains. The articles shown are loaned by the old Creole families; and especially to those to the manor born they speak an ancestral history which no lapse of time can dim.

Among the original portraits are those of Chas. Gayarre, the distinguished historian of Louisiana; Louis Philippe and his Queen; Marceau, the gallant young General of the French Revolution; Lamartine; Lafayette; Benjamin Franklin; Napoleon Bonaparte; Andrew Jackson; Audubon, the Louisiana naturalist; Gen. Z. Taylor; and many notabilities of the French and Spanish regime, when Louisiana was a foreign colony.

Among the family relics are: the commission of Capt. M. Fortier, signed by the great Napoleon; the pistols used in a duel between Daniel Clark, father of the late Mrs. Gaines, and Julien Poydras, French merchant and philanthropist; a portrait of Gen. Trudeau, the companion of Audubon in his hunting expeditions; a picture of LaGrange, the home of Lafayette, painted by the celebrated Ary Sheffer;—a portrait of Jos. Coiron, the first to use a steam engine in sugar making:—jewels, laces, crockery, coats-of-arms, manuscripts, land grants, books, miniatures, music, all hundreds of years old and belonging to various ancient French and Spanish families;—a lock of Andrew Jackson's hair, set round with jewels;—dresses worn at courts of Louis XIV, XV, and XVI:—autograph letters of Gayoso, Casacalvo, Carondelet, Jefferson and Lafayette;—and a number of articles that were used by Gen'l Washington and Mrs. Washington.

The above autograph letters, together with many ancient colonial documents, are contributed by the Hon. Chas. Gayarre. The venerable historian counts among his ancestors the most distinguished French and Spanish colonial officials. Senor Don Gayarre came here from Spain with General O'Reilly as one of his civil staff, when the French colony was transferred against its mill, to the Spanish King; and Monsieur De Bore, the historian's maternal grandfather, was a military officer of court of Louis XVI. He was the first Mayor of New Orleans under the American rule; and on his plantation, located next below where the Exposition now stands, the first sugar crop was made in Louisiana.

Mr. Gayarre finished his legal education in Philadelphia. He soon became prominent in State politics, serving as Secretary of State and U. S Senator; but his chief distinction has been as a scholar, a historian, and a writer of historic novels. He speaks and writes English as easily and incisively as French, and, at eighty-one years, is still vigorous and clear, ready, and penetrating in intellect. One of the old school of Louisiana gentlemen: who would rather die than commit a mean or dishonorable act.

This Creole Historic exhibit alone is worth coming a thousand miles to see.

By-the-bye, it is well enough for strangers coming here to know that the Creoles of Louisiana are whites, who descend in direct lineage from the original French and Spanish colonists.

THE PROPER THING.

Pearl necklaces and small pearl pins are in great favor.

Collars, cuffs and belts are made of beaded galloon.

Beaded Astrakhan bonnets are a novelty of the season.

Long tan colored undressed kid gloves are worn with any evening dress.

Big buttons in groups of three appear on many stylish rough goods costumes.

Low velvet waists are the caprice of the season, and may be worn with various skirts.

Among the prettiest colors in velvet selected for evening ware, are golden brown and mauve.

Straight bangs are worn, also short bangs curled under at the edges and very close to the forehead.

Very young ladies wear ball dresses of plain white tulle combined with beaded or silver tulle.

Demi-trained party dresses are the exception, but are sometimes worn by young married ladies.

Black watered silk with black lace and jet passementeries is the favorite black toilette this winter.

Coiffures, with full dress toilettes, follow the shape of the head closely, and are frequently in coils of one or two figure 8s' in shape.

A single large, long stemmed flower is now worn, thrust in the front of the corsage in preference to the bouquet formerly pinned to the dress.

Rough goods fabrics, to look well must be lined and faced with silk to match or harmonize with the colors of the wool goods.

Cold, fresh air is taken into the Stove through a pipe from the outside of the house. Fresh air passes into the Stove, is heated and passes into the room through the open top, while the foul, impure air being heavier than fresh, pure heated air drops dead to the floor, is forced into a flue in the Stove and is drawn through a small pipe in the smoke pipe into the chimney and escapes with the smoke.

The Water Works Question.

By reference to the Board of Trustee's proceedings, published elsewhere, it will be seen that the vote to accept the water works was lost, but one vote being in the affirmative, that of Mr. Kendricks. The Board seems to be in doubt about the supply being adequate for both Fulton and Oswego Falls. The contract was made first with Fulton and without any reference to laying a main across the river. The contract of Oswego Falls with the company is entirely independent with the one made with Fulton. The contracts say that each village is to have it from the same source and without reference to the other village. If there is not enough water for both villages, it looks as if the demand must be regulated by the supply. A diversity of opinion exists in regard to the matter. We have not been able as yet to form any definite opinion pro or con. The question of water supply for Fulton and Oswego Falls is important and we shall endeavor to investigate the subject fully and give our readers the benefit of our conclusions.

The Wrong Man's Picture.

A column article was published in the last issue of the Syracuse Sunday Times charging Dr. W. J. Bulger of Oswego, with serious offences. Together with the article was a picture of Hon. C. N. Bulger, recorder of that city and brother of the party against whom the attack was made. It is said that Glynn, the Oswego correspondent, secured the picture from John K. Nagle, the photographer, thinking it to be the portrait of Dr. Bulger. From this the cut was made. Dr. Bulger has instituted a charge of criminal libel against Weed and Knickerbocker, publishers of the Syracuse Sunday Times. A. K. Miller, its editor and George Glynn, its Oswego correspondent.

OBITUARY.

Sidney A. Hubbard was born Aug. 29, 1858 and departed this life Dec. 31, 1885. Brother Hubbard was an industrious young man. He worked his way from the position or water boy to that of engineer. His worldy prospects were fair He loved and cared for his mother. But disease in the form of consumption came, and he had to turn aside from business life, to pine away and die. He was saved in Sept. 1884, and a few months after he experienced the blessing of entire sanctification. From September 1884 until his death he was a happy man. At the last he longed to go and be with God. His funeral sermon was preached at his mother's residence in Fulton by Rev. J. Odell.

Patrick Cary of Granby died yesterday at his residence in the Reynolds district, aged 75 years. Funeral services will be held at 2 o'clock, p. m.. tomorrow from the Catholic church, Father Early, officiating.

OSWEGO FALLS.

For several days Joseph Nichols has been concealed in the Riverside mill subsisting upon meals stolen from the dinner pails of the employes. Monday he was arrested and taken before Police Justice VanWagenen, who discharged him on his promise of better behavior.

Communion was observed at the Congregational church on Sunday. The ordinance of Baptism was administered to two persons, and fourteen united with the church.

Call and Examine.

The Amusement Club will hold their next meeting at the home of Miss Hattie Nelson next Wednesday evening.

The annual meeting of the Oswego Falls Agricultural Society was held this noon at the office of Howe & Rice in this village.

Owing to the illness of Rev. H. B. Goodyear, no services were held in Zion church last Sunday. It is thought that Mr. Goodyear will be able to officiate next Sunday.

The first social reception given by the Odd Fellows in their parlors in the Dexter block last Thursday, was well attended, about forty couples being present. The evening passed off very pleasantly and was thoroughly enjoyed by all.

A rumor was circulated about town this forenoon that a man had been drowned in the river above the factories. A Times reporter visited Oswego Falls and learned that a man named Pat Tobin had fallen in the raceway, but was rescued. The rumor probably originated from this fact.

The widely known and the most popular spectacular drama of the day, "The World" is soon to be presented in Stephen's Opera House. The popular actor J. Z. Little supported by a company of acknowledged ability will present the play with their own magnifiicent scenery and effects.

It is said that a man in Oswego Falls is laboring under the impression that he owns a large amount of very desirable property. He is said to claim with three others, that he is heir to several acres in the heart of the city of Montreal. Not being content with this, he is further said to lay claim to half the city of Albany. It would seem to be only a question of time before he "wants the earth."

'Lackey' Demeraugh of this village, was arrested Sunday night and lodged in jail. It will be remembered by our readers that last summer he escaped from Jailor Morris while under arrest and up to the present has made himself scarce. He was arraigned before Police Justice VanWagenen and sentenced to 3 months in Onondaga penitentiary. He was taken there Monday by Officer Roderick.

The Forresters opened a five nights engagement last evening in Stephens opera house by presenting "Our American Girls" to a fair sized audience. Owing to the extreme cold and absence of gas, the house was but poorly heated and imperfectly lighted. In spite of these difficulties the play was presented in a very satisfactory manner. The balance of the week the house will be better provided with both light and heat.

The modern society young man, remarks the Boston Journal, has independence of manners which distinguish him above all his elegant predecessors. At a recent party one of these adornments of society, who evidently "never would be missed," claimed a dance from a young lady whom he had engaged at the beginning of the evening. The fair partner arose with eyes bright in the prospect of the next dance, but, to her surprise the young man stood languidly in his place. "Oh, I don't dance," he kindly said in explanation. "I fill up my order at the beginning of the evening and converse the rest of the time." If his conversation were as agreeable as his audacity he must have been the brilliant feature of the entertainment.

In an interview with General Lew Wallace in the Commercial Gazette Sunday, the general uses this language: "General Grant in his report of 1865 says emphatically that the battle of Monocacy saved Washington. I have no hesitancy in saying that it saved the capital contrary to the wishes of General Halleck. I am convinced that at that time out of jealousy of Grant, Halleck was willing to betray his country and allow Washington to be captured knowing that such a thing would destroy Grant.

Watson, the Druggist, has always sold Drugs, Medicines Dye Stuffs, &c., cheaper than any Drug House in Fulton and will continue to do so. Patent Medicines at reasonable prices.

Geo. Fisher is now prepared to do blacksmithing at his shop on Broadway. His oldest son Charles Fisher has an appointment as page in the Assembly chamber at Albany this winter.

An elegant line of Young Men's suits that must be sold at D. C. More & Co's and they will be sold low.

The Long Agony Over.

The question of "who'll be the next postmaster?" is at last answered. Among the nominations sent to the Senate by the President, Monday, was that of Samuel B. Whitaker of Fulton, who will succeed N. H. Gilbert as postmaster of this village. The appointment seems to give general satisfaction—except to the disappointed candidates—and it is safe to say that Sam will make a very efficient officer. He is well and favorably known as a reliable business man—a staunch Democrat and will without doubt attend to the duties of the office in a perfectly satisfactory manner.

Killed in the Woods.

William Brown, a farm laborer, at work chopping in the woods near Gilberts Mills, in the town of Schrœppel, yesterday morning, was killed by a tree falling upon him. The deceased leaves a wife and one child. He was a survivor of the 81st regiment, and is said to have fired the first gun at the battle of Fair Oaks. His funeral will take place from the Baptist church at Gilberts, to-day. Coroner Marsh was summoned but did not deem it necessary to hold an inquest,

A Benefit Performance.

To-night the Forresters will give a grand benefit performance in Stephens opera house, the proceeds to be given to the suffering people of "the flats". The play will be "Bertha, The Sewing Machine Girl, or Death at the Wheel." Mr. Howard has very generously tendered the use of the opera house and our citizens should respond liberally and fill the house, The prices for this night only will be 25 and 35 cents. Let everybody come and contribute toward helping the needy sufferers.

Officers Installed.

At the regular weekly meeting of Neahtawanta Lodge, No 245, I. O. O. F., held last Wednesday evening, the following officers were installed by District Deputy Cordingly of New Haven:

J. C. Dresser, N. G., J. H. Case, V. G., Harvey Buck, Sec., Jas. L. Parker, Per. Treas., Chas. D. Branch, Conductor, Thos. Keyes, Warden, C. H. Wolcott. R. S. N. G., F. B. Highriter, L. S. N. G., W. J. Boomer, R. S. V. G., E. C. Wolcott, L. S. V. G., C. S. North, R. S. S. L. Palmer, L. S. S., J. C. Lang, Chap. After the installation, the entire lodge, upon the invitation of J. C. Dresser repaired to the Johnson House, where a bountiful supper had been spread and to which ample justice was done.

The Almighty Nickle.

F. K. Jones has received a new grist of Strings for different instruments 1,000 violin "G's" steel, silver plated, going at a nickle each. Whole "sets" of steel silvered for three nickles, Exquisite toned Italian strings at ten nickles each. High? Some! But such a lovely tone! And then for 'Cello comes the great "G" string for five nickles, made of steel silk and silvered windings. The best money can buy. Then comes a remarkable "sinew" string for violin, that is warranted "fine" at two nickles each "Double Bass," "Guitar," and "Banjo" are here for selection at prices from a nickle apiece up to ten nickles.

Unclaimed Letters.

The following letters remain uncalled for in the post office at Fulton, Oswego county, N. Y. on January 13th, 1886:

The Modern Samaritan's Story.

The Historian doesn't know where this story had its actual origin, but it was "told for true" on a recent ocean voyage to enliven the company. A gentleman who had indulged too freely, and hadn't had the discovery made for him in season to get a carriage, was helped home by a very good Samaritan. He was very grateful in an exhilariting way, and asked his benefactor's name.

"My name?" said the gentleman from Samaria, "Oh I'm St. Paul."

The inebriate steadied himself by a final effort, and looked dreamily at his departing friend.

"I shay!" said he, "St. Paul! Did you ever get any ansher to that d—d long letter you wrote the Ephesions?"—[Boston Evening Record.

Card of Thanks.

I wish to express my gratitude and thanks to all those that extended their sympathy and aid during the last of my son Sidney's sickness. May God's blessing be upon you. Jesus says "in as much as ye have done it unto the least of those ye have done it unto me."

When D. C. More & Co., advertise to reduce prices, it means a bonafide reduction, their idea is to sell their goods at a sacrifice rather than carry them over until next season. Their stock is all new and desirable.

James Macfarlane of Albany, has been in town for several days looking over the ground with a view to publishing a general directory of the villages of Fulton and Oswego Falls. The directory will contain the name, residence and occupation of every resident of both villages. The advantages to any place of a directory are almost incalulable. We earnestly hope that the citizens and business men of Fulton and Oswego Falls, seeing the benefits to be derived from a complete and correct directory, will give their hearty support to it and thus fill what is truly a "long-felt want."

[illegible] flats live about one hundred families in all conditions, from comfortable circumstances to the most abject poverty, and the houses they live in correspond with their circumstances. Last week the water commenced rising in the river and by Monday morning reached the highest point known in 12 years. The entire flats were under water and First street below the paper mill was a roaring, rushing river. Saturday afternoon and evening the water, which had reached a point no higher than it does nearly every spring, seemed to stop rising and no more danger was apprehended. Before morning however, it had risen several feet and was still rapidly coming up. At 8 o'clock Sunday morning in response to an alarm from the fire bell, the fire department and a large number of citizens turned out and with row boats began the work of rescuing the imprisoned inhabitants. Several families who retired Saturday night with no apparent thought of danger were rudely awakened before morning by the splashing of the water, and in many cases found upon arising a foot or two of icy water, inside their dwelling. A Times reporter, who visited the scene Sunday morning, found 25 or 30 men, women and children clustered around the stove in the paper mill, all of them having been rendered homeless by the flood. With few exceptions the clothes they wore were the only articles saved. All day Sunday men with strong arms, willing hearts and wet feet were engaged with boats in rescuing and saving women and children, household articles, furniture, bedding, dogs, etc., which were carried to a place of safety on the higher ground. The foundry of J. R. Campbell was submerged Saturday afternoon and the machine shop of James Pearman about the same time. The machinery, stock, etc., in these two shops will be badly damaged and in many cases utterly ruined. Dilts' foundry was running Sunday forenoon, he having work that must be finished ere the water raised sufficiently to stop him. The machinery, lumber and tools in McCully's planing mill were hoisted into the second story and all saved. Taylor Bros. knife manufacturers, are among the heaviest losers. Their entire shop is covered by about four feet of water. The stock in the paper mill and the flour in Gardner and Seymour's mill was removed to a place of safety before the water reached them. Sunday noon the flood reached the fires in the gas house instantly quenching them and ruining the retorts. C. S. North estimates his loss at about $1,500. It is impossible to calculate the loss to the other sufferers, but it is safe to say many thousand dollars will not cover it.

At a meeting of the manufacturers who have suffered by the flood, held Sunday night, a telegram was sent to Dr. John F. Boynton, a scientist of Syracuse, asking him to come here and see what could be done to blow up the ice by dynamite and clear the channel to allow the water to go down. Dr. Boynton arrived Monday morning and after carefully looking over the field decided that it would be impossible to clear the river. To a Times reporter the Dr. said: "The anchor ice that has filled the channel covers such a large territory that it would be utterly impossible to blow up the obstruction with torpedoes, because as fast as it was blown up in one place it would accumulate again as solid as before. The damage has been caused not by heavy anchor ice, as I had supposed, but by masses of mush ice of no greater consistency than mud. I might have laid any number of torpedoes at distances of twenty feet, and ten minutes after the explosion there would have been no appreciable result for the better. Explosives could accomplish nothing with this mush. It is carried along under water, as snow flakes are carried along in the air, until it meets an impediment, and then it is piled up, forcing the water back upon the village. The only remedy that I can see, is to wait until the weather moderates."

Monday afternoon word was sent to the State Engineer's office of the state of affairs and asking for assistance if any could be had. Canal superintendent Richardson thought that if the locks at the Battle Island dam were opened the ice would be forced down the river. Yesterday morning Engineer Whitford and his assistant, Mr. Clark, arrived here and looked over the situation. He gives it as his opinion that nothing can be done toward dislodging the ice until it breaks up of its own accord.

NOTES.

The fire department and other rescuers are entitled to much credit for their work.

A flag of truce waved in the breeze from the front window of Taylor Bros.' office.

Yesterday morning the water had receded about eight inches.

Officer Roderick found a duck frozen fast in the ice, just above. He thawed it out and it was soon lively as ever.

Several houses were lifted bodily from their foundations and floated some distance.

A number of the boat houses belonging to the Canoe club are among the missing.

The old Tucker house on the east side of First street near Nelson's stave mill, had the entire front crushed in by the ice.

Several families took their hens and [illegible] to a place of safety.

[illegible] the welfare. There is no general [illegible] a choice can be made [illegible] "Take the breed you fancy." [illegible] as well with a variety [illegible] especially fancy as with one that [illegible] his eye." All the varieties [illegible] are now bred in such numbers [illegible] there is no difficulty in getting good [illegible] to breed from, and there is no popular breed which has not its good points, and a host of them. Of course something depends upon the general idea of work in the poultry yard which a breeder has in view. If eggs are the special object the non-sitting varieties will probably prove most satisfactory, and in these is a wide range of feathering and shape to satisfy the most particular. If table poultry is an important item, the larger breeds, Bramhas, Cochins, Langshans, or Plymouth Rocks, afford field enough for the widest range of fancy in color.

The breeder must, of course, have constant reference to the room he has to devote to his work. A small poultry yard can, as a rule, better be given to some of the larger and quieter kinds of feathered stock, while an unlimited range just suits Leghorns, Hamburgs, and the like. A clean gravelly soil is a good thing at all times, but colored birds look better on a red clay than any light or white ones. The latter in rolling or even walking about get a dingy, reddish touch on their feathers that always makes them unsightly. A clear, white bird looks finely on a well-kept grassy lawn.

These general observations are really all that can be said to assist new breeders in the choice of the variety they are to breed, and we can only say, as we did at the beginning of this article, "Take the breed you fancy," using the facts just given as a set of guide posts, but not as closed walls to travel between.—[American Poultry Yard.

Curing Hams.

A Southern correspondent of the Spirit of the Farm gives the following receipt for what are known as the Fernvale hams: Have good fat hogs. Cut out as soon as the animal heat is out of the hogs. Cut the hams round, trim off the surplus fat and the bones at the butt end and on the side, making the ham smooth. Cut the foot off just above the joint. Then the ham is ready for salt. Rub on the hock end and the fleshy part of the ham one measured teaspoonful of saltpetre. The main object of this article is to give the meat a fine pink color. If more than the above amount is put on, it makes the meat red and brittle. Have your salt well mixed with pod red pepper, and one teaspoonful of Cayenne pepper to the ham. Have it well mixed with this mixture of salt and pepper. The pepper hardens and flavors the meat. When the hams are ready, pack them closely, air-tight, on the platform; next pack on top of the hams the shoulders and jowls, then top of the bulk with the sides. Do not disturb the bulk under three weeks and not longer than four weeks. Then break up the bulk and wash and wipe off the ham nicely with hot pepper teas; then hang up and smoke; and when smoked to your liking, take a paper bag the right size, and run it over the ham as it hangs, and tie closely around the string that holds the ham. Moderately cold weather for slaughtering hogs is better than cold, freezing weather. The freezing of pork is detrimental. All that is necessary in temperature is for it to be sufficiently cold to expel the animal heat.

Live Stock Notes.

Coarse fodder, like corn stalks, hay from wet ground, bean vines, etc., should fed with a little meal upon them, if there is any reason for economizing. When there is no such reason, they should be cut into foot lengths, so as to make the manure less difficult to handle in the spring. When cows have eaten all the coarse fodder they will, give them good hay, and finally a feed of roots, with meal and bran. In this way they will eat with better appetites, and the results, either in flesh, milk or butter, will be very marked. Most farmers err in doing exactly the reverse. Feeding ground feed first, then hay, and then let them "pick over" the coarse stuff. Do not neglect regular salting. Keep no stock that it will not pay to winter; either sell or have a quiet funeral. Attempt to winter no more stock than you can bring through in good condition. A half-starved animal stops growing, and goes back so far that it takes half the summer to catch up. Breeders provide now for calves in October, lambs in May, and pigs in the last week in March or early in April.

How to Plant Nuts.

Nut-fruits will not germinate after once becoming thoroughly dry. They may be planted at once, after dropping from the tree in the fall; but if planting is to be done in spring, the fresh nuts should be mixed with sand and placed in heaps, lightly covered and exposed to the influence of the frost and rains, [illegible] from one to two inches deep. All [illegible] form a long single tap-root, [illegible] should always be transplanted when [illegible] year old. This first transplanting [illegible] the roots to become more spreading [illegible] thereby makes subsequent transplanting [illegible] as safe as in case of an apple [illegible] very large number of nut [illegible] the planter may find [illegible]

[illegible] in the ear, [illegible] with the cobs, [illegible] so. If allowed to lie too [illegible] is not as good [illegible] kinds, because it becomes [illegible] too many worms. It is [illegible] should be gathered up and applied [illegible] since it wastes too much by lying out exposed to the weather.

Ordinarily there is not a very large quantity of this kind of manure made on the farm, but if more care were taken in providing plenty of good shelter and a good dry floor to feed the stock on, furnishing them with a sufficient supply of bedding to keep them comfortable, the quantity could be considerably increased.

The pens should always be kept clean. If the floors are made slightly slanting, this work can be made easier. As with all other manure except what is used in the garden, I prefer to haul out as fast as I can find time to do the work; I prefer to use it on root crops, although it is valuable for all kinds of crops, and can be applied profitably.

Rotted corn cobs are a valuable fertilizer on any soil that is deficient in potash, and are worth saving for this purpose alone; while if rotted with manure, they are considerably more valuable, and in cleaning up the hog pen, considerable pains should be taken to gather up and mix them with the manure.

Cleaning up the pens often and hauling out the manure, materially aid in keeping the stock healthy. Hogs seem to be susceptible to disease, perhaps more so than some other kinds of stock, and cleanliness is a great aid toward health, and while you secure valuable manure by keeping the hog-pen clean, you also increase the health of the stock. [Correspondence, Country Gentleman.

FACTS FOR FARMERS.

Musty fodder taints the butter.

Train, rather than break the colts.

For market purposes moderate sized and even small turkeys command a more ready sale than large ones do.

For pigs that have the thumps give them ten drops of the tincture of digitalis every two hours for twenty, and then if they do not get well, give them the same dose every three hours until they get well or die.

Thousands of tons of cheese are made in France from the milk of sheep while milk from goats are used for the same purpose in Germany. In European markets such cheese brings the highest prices, and the demand is always equal to the supply.

A Scotch farmer has grown potatoes on the same land for a dozen consecutive years, by the aid of artificial fertilizers, and without the application of barnyard manure. The results have been favorable in the main, with an occasional failure in a very dry season,

Probably post and timbers cut now will not prove as durable as if cut in midsummer. Such is said to be the experience of those who have tried cutting at both seasons, but few want to spend time then to cut fence posts, and it is well to save out all such as are suitable for that purpose when cutting fuel.

It is not good policy to sort over apples very frequently in winter, especially if they are put in close barrels. The more they are handled the greater the amount of oxygen they are exposed to and the more rapidly decay progresses. An entirely sound apple is easily injured by contact with one that is rotting. But if it has a bruise anywhere it will soon become a speck of rot and speedily destroy the apple.

Recipes.

Beef Hash, with Poached Egg.—Boiled, fresh or salt beef left from the preceeding day and made into a hash with one-half meat, one-quarter each of potato and apple, and a little minced celery, nicely cooked and served on toast with a poached egg, is a very good breakfast dish.

Oat Flake Griddle-Cakes.—One pint of oat flakes, a teaspoonful of salt, an ounce of melted butter, two eggs well beaten, a scant pint of milk; mix well and stir in a teaspoonful of flour. When the griddle is hot, grease it slightly; pour from a large spoon on the griddle; continue until the griddle is covered with small cakes, then turn the first one and so on until all are done. Wipe the griddle with a clean cloth, and grease slightly after each batch.

Capons.

The object of caponizing is to improve the quality and increase the quantity of the flesh of fowls. A capon will outgrow a cock at the same age, just as an ox will exceed a bull in weight, and for the same reasons, which are—that castration makes an animal less restless and quarrelsome, and less of the nutriment it digests is diverted from flesh-forming. The operation is not very difficult, and is quickly performed after a little practice. There need be no more than six to eight per cent. of the birds killed even by an indifferent operator; and as those die by bleeding to death, they may be eaten as if they had been butchered in the regular way.—[American Poultry Yard.

Preserving Celery During Winter.

Take a bed five or six feet long, twelve inches wide and twenty to twenty-four inches deep. Put in thee inches of sand on soil and stand the celery upon this, closely packed to exclude the air. Celery thus treated will keep well untill March. This method was first recommended by Peter Henderson.

[illegible] IMPROVED BUTTER COLOR

A NEW DISCOVERY.

☞For several years we have furnished the Dairymen of America with an excellent artificial color for butter; so meritorious that it met with great success everywhere receiving the highest and only prizes at both International Dairy Fairs.

☞But by patient and scientific chemical research we have improved in several points, and now offer this new color as the best in the world.

It Will Not Color the Buttermilk. It Will Not Turn Rancid. It is the Strongest, Brightest and Cheapest Color Made,

☞And, while prepared in oil, is so compounded that it is impossible for it to become rancid.

☞BEWARE of all imitations, and of all other oil colors, for they are liable to become rancid and spoil the butter.

☞If you cannot get the "improved" write us to know where and how to get it without extra expense. (46)

KIDNEY-WORT

SCROFULA

Usually develops in early life, and is a peculiar morbid condition of the system, usually affecting the glands, often resulting in swellings, enlarged joints, abscesses, thickening of the lips, enlarged neck, sore eyes. A scrofulous condition is often hereditary, but bad diet, too free use of fat meats, bad air, want of sunshine and nourishing food will induce it. Some people are troubled with scrofulous swelling of the glands, and with ulcers and kernels, which may cause very little pain; others may have inward scrofula, scrofula of the lungs, scrofula of the spleen, scrofula of the kidneys, and scrofula of the bones. BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS will drive away any case of scrofula and not to appear in another place, for their action on the blood and bowels will carry the disease entirely from the body.

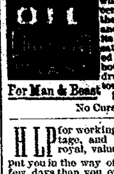
The World Challenged



The liniment has been manufactured and used for twenty five years, and our innumerable certificates of cure prove it to be an unparalleled success. We do not offer it as an Internal Remedy, positively asserting that any liniment that can be taken into the stomach without injury can have little efficacy in acting as a specific when externally applied. You will find a trial of it the best certificate of its value. It is the only Lade entirely of Oils and we challenge the world for its equal. Warranted to give satisfaction or money refunded. Palma Sola, Florida

The paradise of invalids! The home of tropical fruits! Climate unsurpassed! No frost! No extremes of heat or cold! No malaria! Ground high and dry! Plenty of pine! and the finest hunting and fishing in America.

PALMA SOLA has the name of being the largest, prettiest and youngest town in Florida. Is beautifully located on the Gulf Coast, two miles above the mouth of the Manatee River. Already the iron horse is wending its way to Palma Sola, and soon the tourist will arrive at its first class hotel, where he can get a meal to suit his epicurian tastes.

Palma Sola possesses the largest store [illegible] ern Florida, with sawmill, furniture [illegible] packing houses, warehouses, churches [illegible] house, postoffice, stores, beautiful residences, a large wharf at which ocean steamers arrive daily from Tampa.

WARREN LELAND, Jr., of "Long Branch" fame, has secured a location at Palma Sola for the erection of a winter resort. The prediction is a safe one, based as it is upon the natural advantages and attractions of the place, that he will make this the "LONG BRANCH" of FLORIDA, and other large hotels will be built.

With the completion of the railroad, this will be the terminus, and the direct route to Havana, Cuba. Lots will double and quadruple their present prices. Now is the time to buy.

Lots 100x200 ft. $40 to $200 per lot. We want PALMA SOLA to keep booming, and as an inducement to the public, and to thoroughly advertise this beautiful place, WE WILL GIVE AWAY a LIMITED number ONLY of our lots, giving lots ALTERNATELY as they come (corners excepted) charging applicants the expense of deed, transfer, etc., which will not exceed $3.00. Applicants can send postal money order with application to insure promptness, otherwise deeds will be sent C. O. D. Unseasonable Rhymes.

A REVERIE RUDELY BROKEN.

Maiden in the hammock swings,
Where the elm it's shadow flings;
Overhead the robin sings,
As the honey bees are humming.

Dreaming is the maiden fair
Ah, of a youth with princely air,
Handsome, rich and debonair,
Who to claim her hand is coming.

Building castles fair is she,
Swinging in a reverie,
While the robin merrily
Trills his tuneful lay above her.

Now has come the wedding day;
She is decked in fine array,
And to church she takes her way,
With her rich and princely lover.

But a voice the stillness breaks;
Ah, the discord that it makes!
And the maiden fair awakes
From her reverie delicious.

'Tis her pa. Her dreams take wing.
Hear him: "Hannah, leave that swing.
Come right in, you lazy thing,
And help your mother wash the dishes."

WIDOW TOWNSEND'S FIRST LOVE

A Tale of the "Eastern Shore."

The fire crackled chearfully on the broad hearth of an old-fashioned fire-place in an old-fashioned public house in an old-fashioned village, down in that part of the Old Dominion called the 'Eastern Shore.' A cat and three kittens basked in the warmth, and a decrept yellow dog, lying full in the reflection of the blaze, wrinkled his black nose approvingly, as he turned his hind feet where his fore feet had been. Over the chimney hung several fine hams and pieces of dried beef. Apples were festooned along the ceiling, and other signs of plenty and good cheer were scattered profusely about. There were plants, too, on the window ledges, horse-shoe geraniums, and dew-plants, and a monthly rose, just budding, to say nothing of pots of violets that perfumed the whole place whenever they took it into their purple heads to bloom. The floor was carefully swept, the chairs had not a speck of dust upon leg or round, the long settle near the fireplace shone as if it had been just varnished, and the eight-day clock in the corner had had its white face newly washed, and seemed determined to tick the louder for it.

Two arm-chairs were drawn up at a cosy distance from the hearth a candle, a newspaper, a pair of spectacles, a dish of red-cheeked apples, and a pitcher of cider filled the little table between them. In one of these chairs sat a comfortable-looking woman about forty-five, with cheeks as red as the apples, and eyes as dark and bright as they had ever been, resting her elbow on the table and her head upon her hand, and looking thoughtfully into the fire.

This was Widow Townsend 'relict' of Mr. Levi Townsend, who had been mouldering into dust in the neighboring churchyard for seven years and more. She was thinking of her dead husband, possibly because all her work being done, and the servant gone to bed, the sight of his empty chair at the other side of the table, and the silence of the room, made her a little lonely.

'Seven years,' so the widow's reverie ran; 'it seems as if it were more than fifty, and yet I don't look so very old neither. Perhaps it's not having any children to bother my life out, as other people have. They may say what they like—children are more plague than profit, that's my opinion. Look at my sister Jerusha, with her six boys. She's worn to a shadow, and I am sure they have done it, though she never will own it.'

The widow took an apple from the dish and began to peel it.

'How fond Mr. Townsend used to be of these apples! He'll never eat any more of them, poor fellow, for I don't suppose they have apples where he has gone to. Heigho! I remember very well how I used to throw apple peal over my head when I was a girl to see who I was going to marry.'

Mrs. Townsend stopped short and blushed, for in those days she did not know Mr. T., and was always looking eagerly to see if the peel had formed a capital S. Her meditations took a new turn.

'How handsome Sam Payson was, and how much I used to care about him! I wonder what has become of him! [illegible] says he went away from our village just after I did, and no one has ever heard of him since. What a silly thing that quarrel was! If it had not been for that——'

Here came a long pause, during which the widow looked very steadfastly at the empty arm-chair of Levi Townsend, deceased. Her fingers played carelessly with the apple-peel; she drew it safely towards her, and looked around the room.

'Upon my word, it is very ridiculous, and I don't know what the neighbors would say if they saw me.'

Still the plump fingers drew the red peel nearer.

'But then they can't see me, that's a comfort; and the cat and old Bose never will know what it means. Of course I don't believe any thing about it.'

The peel hung gracefully from her [illegible]

'[illegible]till, I should like to try; it would [illegible] old times, and——'

[illegible] her head it went, and curled up [illegible] the floor at a little distance. [illegible], who always slept with one [illegible], saw it fall, and marched de[illegible] up to smell it.

[illegible] touch!' cried his [illegible] bending over it with a [illegible] she turned as red as fire. [illegible] a capital S as [illegible] at the [illegible], and the widow [illegible] the apple-[illegible]

'Who is it?' asked the widow, somewhat relieved to find that the departed Levi was still safe in his grave on the hill-side.

'A stranger," said the voice.

'What do you want?'

'To get a lodging here for the night. The widow deliberated.

'Can't you go on? There's a house half a mile farther, if you keep to the right-hand side of the road, and turn to the left after you get by——'

'It's raining cats and dogs, and I'm very delicate,' said the stranger, coughing. 'I'm wet to the skin; don't you think you can accommodate me?—I don't mind sleeping on the floor.'

'Raining, is it? I didn't know that,' and the kind-hearted little woman unbarred the door very quickly. 'Come in, whoever you may be; I only asked you to go on because I am a lone woman with only one servant in the house.'

The stranger entered, shaking himself like a Newfoundland dog upon the step, and scattering a little shower of drops over his hostess and her nicely swept floor.

'Ah, that looks comfortable after a man has been out for hours in a storm,' he said, as he caught sight of the fire; and striding along towards the hearth, followed by Bose, who sniffed suspiciously at his heels, he stationed himself in the arm chair—Mr. Townsend's arm-chair! which had been kept 'sacred to his memory' for seven years. The widow was horrified, but her guest looked so weary and worn out that she could not ask him to move, but busied herself in stirring up the blaze that he might the sooner dry his dripping clothes.

A new thought struck her: Mr. T. had worn a comfortable dressing-gown during his illness, which still hung in the closet at her right. She could not let this poor man catch his death, by sitting in that wet coat. If he was in Mr. Townsend's chair, why should he not be in Mr. Townsend's wrapper? She went nimbly to the closet, took it down, fished out a pair of slippers from a boot-rack below, and brought them to him.

'I think you had better take off your coat and boots—you will have the rheumatic fever or something like it, if you don't Here are some things for you to wear while they are drying. And you must be hungry, too; I will go into the pantry and get you something to eat.'

She bustled away, 'on hospitable thoughts intent, and the stranger made the exchange with a quizzical smile playing around his lips. He was a tall, well-formed man, with a bold but handsome face, sun-burned and heavily bearded, and looking any thing but 'delicate,' though his blue eyes glanced out from under a forehead as white as snow. He looked around the kitchen with a mischievous air, and stretched out his feet decorated with the defunct Boniface's slippers.

''Upon my word this is stepping into the old man's shoes with a vengeance! And what a hearty, good-humored woman she is! Kind as a kitten,' and he leaned forward and stroked the cat and her brood, and then patted old Bose upon the head. The widow, bringing in sundry good things, looked pleased at his attention to her dumb friends.

'It's a wonder Bose does not growl; he gennerally does if strangers touch him. Dear me, how stupid!'

The last remark was neither addressed to the stranger not to the dog, but to herself. She had forgotten that the little stand was not empty, and there was no room on it for the things she held.

'Oh, I'll manage it,' said her guest, gathering up paper, candle, apples, and spectacles (it was not without a little pang that she saw them in his hand, for they had been her husband's, and were placed each night, like the arm-chair, beside her) and depositing them on the settle.

'Give me the table cloth, ma'am, I can spread it as well as any woman; I've learned that, along with scores of other things, in my wanderings. Now let me relieve you of those dishes, they are far to heavy for those hands'—the widow blushed; 'and now please sit down with me or I cannot eat a morsel.'

'I had supper long ago, but really I think I can take something more,' said Mrs. Townsend, drawing her chair nearer to the table.

'Of course you can; My dear lady; this is cold fall weather, people ought to eat twice as much as they do in warm. Let me give you a piece of this ham, your own curing, I dare say.'

'Yes; my poor husband was very fond of it. He used to say that no one understood curing ham and drying beef better than I.'

'He was a most sensible man, I am sure. I drink your health, ma'am, in this cider.'

He took a long draught, and set down his glass.

'It is like nectar.'

The widow was feeding Bose and the cat (who thought they were entitled to a share of every meal eaten in the house), and did not quite hear what he said.

'Fine dog, ma'am, and a very pretty cat.'

'They were my husband's favorites,' and a sigh followed the answer.

'Ah, your husband must have been a very happy man.'

The blue eyes looked at her so long, that she grew flurried.

'Is there anything more I can get for you, sir?' she asked, at last.

'Nothing, thank you, I have finished.'

She rose to clear the things away. He assisted her, and somehow their hands had a queer knack of touching as they carried the dishes to the pantry shelves. Coming back to the kitchen, she put the apples and cider in their old places, and brought out a clean pipe and a box of tobacco from an arched recess near the chimney.

[illegible] swered, for she had her candle in her hand.

'Oh, no; I do not object to smoke at all.' She put the candle down; some faint suggestion about 'propriety' troubled her, but she glanced at her old clock, and felt reassured. It was only half past nine.

The stranger pushed the stand back after the pipe was lit, and drew her easy-chair a little nearer the fire and his own.

'Come, sit down,' he said, pleadingly; 'it's not late, and when a man has been knocking about in California and all sorts of places, for a score of years, he is glad enough to get into a berth like this, and to have a pretty woman to speak to once again.'

'California! Have you been in California?" she exclaimed, dropping into the chair at once. Unconsciously, she had long cherished the idea that Sam Payson, the lover of her youth, with whom she had so foolishly quarreled, had pitched his tent, after many wanderings, in the far-off land. Her heart warmed to one who, with something of Sam's looks and ways about him, had also been sojourning in that country, and who very possibly had met him—perhaps had known him intimately? At that thought her heart beat quick, and she looked very graciously at the bearded stranger, who, wrapped in Mr. Townsend's dressing-gown, wearing Mr. Townsend's slippers, and sitting in Mr. Townsend's chair, beside Mr. Townsend's wife, smoked Mr. Townsend's pipe with such an air of feeling most thoroughly and comfortably at home!

'Yes, ma'am, I've been in California for the last six years. And before that I went quite round the world in a whaling ship!'

'Good gracious!'

The stranger sent a puff of smoke curling gracefully over his head.

'It's very strange, my dear lady, how often you see one thing as you go wandering about the world after that fashion.'

'And what is that?'

'Men, without house or home above their heads, roving here and there, and turning up in all sorts of odd places; caring very little for life as a general thing, and making fortunes just to fling them away again, and all for one reason. You don't ask me what that is? No doubt you know already very well.'

'I think not, sir.'

'Because a woman has jilted them!'

Here was a long pause, and Mr. Townsend's pipe emitted short puffs with surprising rapidity. A guilty conscience needs no accusor, and the widow's cheek was dyed with blushes as she thought of the absent Sam.

'I wonder how women manage when they get served in the same way,' said the stranger, musingly; 'you never meet them roaming up and down in that style.'

'No,' said Mrs. Townsend with some spirit, 'if a woman is in trouble she must stay at home and bear it, the best way she can. And there's more women bearing such things than we know of, I dare say.'

'Like enough. We never know whose hand gets pinched in a trap unless they scream. And women are too shy or too sensible—which you choose—for that.'

'Did you ever in all your wanderings, meet any one by the name of Samuel Payson?' asked the widow, unconcernedly.

The stranger looked towards her; she was rummaging the table-drawer for her knitting work, and did not notice him. When it was found, and the needles in motion, he answered her.

'Payson—Sam Payson? Why, he was my most intimate friend! Do you know him?'

'A little—that is, I used to, when I was a girl. Where did you meet him?"

'He went with me on the whaling voyage I told you of, and afterwards to California. We had a tent together, and some other fellow with us, and we worked the same claim for more than six months.'

'I suppose he was quite well?'

'Strong as an ox.'

'And—and happy?' pursued the widow, bending closer over her knitting.

'Hum—the less said about that the better, perhaps. But he seemed to enjoy life after a fashion of his own. And he got rich out there, or rather, I will say, well off."

Mrs. Townsend did not pay much attention to that part of the story. Evidently she had not finished asking questions, but she was puzzled about her next one. At last she brought it out beautifully:

'Was his wife with him in California?'

The stranger looked at her with twinkling eyes.

'His wife, ma'am! Why, bless you, he has not got any wife.'

'Oh, I thought—I mean I heard'—here the little widow remembered the fate of Ananias and Sapphira, and stopped short before she told such a tremendous fib.

'Whatever you heard of his marrying was all nonsense I can assure you. I knew him well, and he had no thoughts of the kind about him. Some of the boys used to tease him about it, but he he soon made them stop."

'How?'

'He just told them frankly that the only woman he ever loved had jilted him years before, and married another man. After that no one ever mentioned the subject to him again, except me.'

Mrs. Townsend laid her knitting aside, and looked thoughtfully into the fire.

'He was another specimen of the class of men I was speaking of. I have seen him face death a score of times as quietly as I face the fire. 'It matters very little what takes me off,' he used to say; 'I've nothing to live for, and there's no one who will shed a tear for me when I [illegible]

[illegible] the woman who jilted him?'

'I know her first name.'

'What was it?'

'Maria.'

The plump little widow almost started out of her chair, the name was spoken so exactly as Sam would have said it.

'Did you know her, too?' he asked looking keenly at her.

'Yes.'

'Intimately?'

'Yes.'

'Where is she now? Still happy with her husband, I suppose, and never giving a thought to the poor fellow she drove out into the world?'

'No, said Mrs. Townsend, shading her face with her hand, and speaking unsteadily; 'no, her husband is dead."

'Ah! but still she never thinks of Sam.'

There was a dead silence.

'Does she?'

'How can I tell?'

'Are you still friends?'

'Yes.'

'Then you ought to know, and you do. Tell me.'

'I'm sure I don't know why I should. But if I do, you must promise me, on your honor, never to tell him, if you ever meet him again.'

'Madam, what you say to me never shall be repeated to any mortal man, upon my honor.'

'Well, then, she does remember him.'

'But how?'

'As kindly, I think, as he could wish.'

'I am glad to hear it, for his sake. You and I are the friends of both parties; we can rejoice with each other.'

He drew his chair much nearer hers, and took her hand. One moment the widow resisted, but it was a magnetic touch, the rosy palm lay quietly in his, and the dark beard bent so low that it nearly touched her shoulder. It did not matter much. Was he not Samuel's dear friend? If he was not the rose, had he not dwelt very near it, for a long, long time?

'It was a foolish quarrel that parted them,' said the stranger, softly.

'Did he tell you about it?'

'Yes, on board the whaler.'

'Did he blame her much?'

'Not so much as himself. He said that his jealousy and ill-temper drove her to break off the match; but he thought sometimes if he had only gone back and spoken kindly to her, she would have married him after all.

'I am sure she would,' said the widow piteously. 'She has owned it to me more than a thousand times.'

'She was not happy, then, with another.'

'Mr.—that is to say her husband—was very good and kind,' said the little woman, thinking of the lonely grave out on the hill-side rather penitently, 'and they lived very pleasantly together. There never was a harsh word between them.'

'Still—might she not have been happier with Sam? Be honest, now, and say just what you think.'

'Yes.'

'Bravo! that is what I wanted to come at. And now I have a secret to tell you, and you must break it to her.'

Mrs. Townsend looked rather scared.

'What is it?'

'I want you to go and see her, wherever she may be, and say to her, 'Maria'—what makes you start so?'

'Nothing: only you speak so like some one I used to know, once in awhile."

'Do I? Well, take the rest of the message. Tell her that Sam loved her through the whole; that, when he heard she was free, he began to work hard at making a fortune. He has got it; and he is coming to share it with her, if she will let him. Will you tell her this?'

The widow did not answer. She had freed her hand from his, and covered her face with it. By and by she looked up again—he was waiting patiently.

'Well?'

'I will tell her.'

He rose from his seat, and walked up and down the room. Then he came back, and, leaning on the mantel-piece stroked the yellow hide of Boze with his slipper.

'Make her quite understand that he wants her for his wife. She may live where she likes, and how she likes, only it must be with him.'

'I will tell her.'

'Say he has grown old, but not cold: that he loves her now perhaps better than he did twenty years ago; that he has been faithful to her all through his life, and that he will be faithful till he dies——'

The Californian broke off suddenly. The widow answered still, 'I will tell her.'

'And what do you think she will say?' he asked, in an altered tone.

'What can she say but—Come!'

'Hurrah!'

The stranger caught her out of her chair as if she had been a child, and kissed her.

'Don't—oh, don't!' she cried out. 'I am Sam's Maria!'

'Well—I am Maria's Sam!'

Off went the dark wig and the black whiskers—there smiled the dear face she had never forgotten! I leave you to imaging the tableau; even the cat got up to look, and Bose sat on his stump of a tail, and wondered if he was on his heel or his head. The widow gave one little scream, and then she———

But, stop! Quiet people, like you and me, dear reader, who have got all over these follies, and can do nothing but turn up our noses at them, have no business here. I will only add that two hearts were very happy, that Bose concluded after awhile that all was right, and so laid down to sleep again, and that one week afterwards there was a wedding at the house that made the neighbor's stare. The widow had married her First Love.

THE PROPER THING.

Cuffs are again universally worn.

Velvet is the material for rich winter costumes.

Ivory white silk vests are fashionable in dark silk, velvet or wool dresses.

Bonnets and hats with brims of fur of fur plush are in high favor.

Old fashioned round boas, very long and large, are coming in vogue again.

Short women should have their street dresses and wraps of the same color.

Belts and cloak clasps and buckles are now made of the finest gold and silver.

Imitation straw hats, made of braids of pleated felt, are among late millinery novelties.

The wearing of straw hats heavily lined with cloth or velvet is a Parisian fancy.

Colored folds of silk or Japanese crape are worn in the neck and sleeves of dresses. Yellow is the favorite color.

Guimpes of lace or some soft tissue are gathered on the neck against a wide band which surrounds the neck.

Chrysanthemums are the reigning flower for bridesmaids' boquets, brown and white being favorite color.

Tight sleeves very small at the wrists make the hands look large; the cuff should be measured over the hand at the knuckles instead of at the wrist.

Nearly all the best dresses have from one to three rows of very narrow side-plaiting at the bottom of the skirt. No trimming is provided for the waist or sleeves in the most expensive goods.

In choosing velvet, that with very short thick pile is preferred, because it is more durable than that with the long showy nap. It is economy to buy good velvet, putting all the outlay of money into the material, without adding expensive trimming, as new silk velvet is beautiful enough of itself, and any trimming set upon it mars the pile, flattening it in some cases so badly that it is difficulty to restore by steaming. It is the best plan to have the entire dress of plain velvet instead of combining it with figured velvet, as plain velvet is always in fashion. Remember in making the dress, the pile must be turned upward, so that it will look rich when the fleece falls downward and open naturally, instead of being flattened, as it would if made to point downward as was formerly the custom.—[Harper's Bazar.

Rules For Reading.

Somebody has taken the pains to prepare the following rules to govern reading:

Are you deficient in taste? Read the best English poets, such as Thompson, Gray, Goldsmith, Pope, Cowper, Coleridge, Scott and Wordsworth.

Are you deficient in imagination? Read Milton, Aikenside, Burke and Shakespeare.

Are you deficient in powers of reasoning? Read Chillingworth, Bacon and Locke.

Are you deficient in judgment and good sense in the common affairs of life? Read Franklin.

Are you deficient in sensibility? Read Goethe and Makenzie.

Are you deficient in political knowledge? Read Montesquieu, the Federalist, Webster and Calhoun.

Are you deficient in patriotism? Read Demosthenes and the Life of George Washington.

Are you deficient in conscience? Read some of President Edward's works.

Are you deficient in anything? Read the Bible.

The Bee-Hive.

Observe these busy little bees a laying up their honey, and try to be as wise as these by saving all your money. You smoke, say five cigars away, and drink,
say six times daily; cards, pool and billiards, too, you play and, treat the fellows gayly. In twenty years this fun will cost, according to good scholars, with interest and time that's lost, just $200,000. But if you count your loss of health and self-inflicted trouble, you'll find this foolish waste of wealth will figure more than double. Then, when it's time no more to slave, but pleasure take, so sick you will feel because you did not save, you will want some one to kick you.
So imitate these busy bees, and all your pennies treasure, and then when older take your ease with forty years of pleasure.

One Dollar. Hood's Sarsaparilla is the only medicine of which this can be truly said; and it is an unanswerable argument as to the strength and positive economy of this great medicine. Hood's Sarsaparilla is made of roots, herbs, barks, etc., long and favorably known for their power in purifying the blood; and in combination, proportion, and process, Hood's Sarsaparilla is peculiar to itself.

"For economy and comfort we use Hood's Sarsaparilla." MRS. C. BREWSTER, Buffalo.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla takes less time and quantity to show its effect than any other preparation I ever heard of. I would not be without it in the house." MRS. C. A. M. HUBBARD, North Chili, N. Y. 100 Doses

Hood's Sarsaparilla cures scrofula, salt rheum, all humors, boils, pimples, general debility, dyspepsia, biliousness, sick headache, catarrh, rheumatism, kidney and liver complaints, and all affections caused by impure blood or low condition of the system. Try it.

"I was severely afflicted with scrofula, and for over a year had two running sores on my neck. I took five bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla, and consider myself entirely cured." C. E. LOVEJOY, Lowell, Mass.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla did me an immense amount of good. My whole system has been built up and strengthened, my digestion improved, and my head relieved of the bad feeling. I consider it the best medicine I have ever used, and should not know how to do without it." MARY L. PEBLE, Salem, Mass.

TIRED AND LANGUID WOMEN.

How many women there are of whom these words are true: "They feel languid and tired, hardly able to bear their weight on their feet, the bloom all gone from their checks, irritable and cross without meaning to be, nerves all upset, worried with the children, fretted over little things, a burden to themselves, and yet with no acute disease. What a pity it is. But a few bottles of Parker's Tonic will drive all this away, and relieve the troubles peculiar to their sex.

CATARRH

Is a prevalent and exceedingly disagreeable disease, liable, if neglected, to develop into serious consumption. Being a constitutional disease, it requires a constitutional remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla, which, acting through the blood, reaches every part of the system, effecting a radical and permanent cure of catarrh in even its most severe forms. it will be time enough to doubt the reliability of Kidney-Wort. Doctors all agree that it is a most valuable medicine in all disorders of the Liver, Kidneys and Bowels, and frequently prescribe it. Dr. P. C. Ballou of Monktan says: "The past year I have used it more than ever, and with the best result. It is the most successful remedy I have ever used.' Such a recommendation speaks for itself. A CHAT WITH THOSE WHO READ NEW YORK NEWSPAPERS. AND OTHERS WHO DON'T READ ANY.—The newspaper is becoming more and more a necessity to intelligent men and women, and residents of Central and Northern New York will find upon trial that the meet their wants as no other newspapers can succeed in doing. The UTICA MORNING HERALD since its recent enlargement, is able by means of its special wire connection with the Associated press to publish every morning the telegraphic news of the world in larger quantity, and of a later date than any New York newspaper, owing to the fact that the latter are compelled to go to press about two hours earlier than the HERALD. Containing all the general news, with complete market reports, the UTICA HERALD also supplies, with minuteness that permits no rivalry, the local news of all Central and Northern New York, carefully gleaned by an army of special correspondents. Thus it does for its patrons what no New York paper can do, supplies a general and local newspaper in one. More than that, it presents in each issue a wealth of reading matter of the choicest and freshest description, culled from every source; and so answers for a dozen newspapers and one or two magazines thrown in.

UTICA MORNING HERALD

AND

UTICA WEEKLY HERALD

The same characteristics distinguish the UTICA WEEKLY HERALD, so long the favorite family journal of the rich agricultural section through which it continues to enjoy an unrivaled circulation. Its ten generous pages overflow with news, local and general, the latest markets, an admirably equipped agricultural department, and miscellany to enliven the long winter evenings. It is a healthy newspaper, that can be admitted into every family and read with genuine profit; in this respect differing widely from the flash publications that are offered in the guise of weekly newspapers, containing sensational and demoralizing reading which is poison to the young.

If you don't know this from actual experience, subscribe for the daily or weekly UTICA HERALD for a month, and you will be convinced. The Herald keeps its old friends, and welcomes new ones. A sample copy of either issue will be sent to any address, on receipt of a postal card asking it. The UTICA MORNING HERALD costs 67 cents a month, $2.00 for three months, or $8 a year.

The UTICA WEEKLY HERALD is $1.50 a year. Postage free in the United States. Address

SUITS have been commenced against the city of New York for damages, aggregating $125,000 by five victims of the recent accident on the Brooklyn bridge. The individual claims range from $5,000 to $50,000, and are for broken ribs, fractured limbs, internal injuries, &c. Under the bridge charter the trustees can not be held liable for injury to persons and this move against the city is likely to raise some interesting points.

WE constantly find in looking over our exchanges accounts of deaths that have occurred from the disease known as trichinosis. The latest is that of the Hansemeyer family, at Tarentow, near Pittsburg, Pa. Five members of the family have died during the past week, the fifth, George, aged 30, died Monday and the lives of the remaining three are despaired of. The disease arises from eating meat that has not been thoroughly cooked. The flesh of animals especially that of the hog is often infested with a minute parasite or worm known as the trichina spiralis. When the meat is not well cooked these insects are liable to be introduced into the human system and it gives rise to this most terrible disease. It is well that every house-keeper should be thoroughly cognizant of this fact and see that no meat of any kind, be put upon their table until it has been sufficiently cooked.

The Baltimore & Ohio railroad still continues to get the lion's share of the controllable western passenger business from New York city. None of the trunk lines has yet taken any public action toward meeting the cut, although it has been rumored that several conferences have been held. The weaker lines are becoming restive under the continued loss of business which they have experienced during the past week. Something, they argue, must be done before long to help them recover what they have lost.

A CAPTAIN'S FORTUNATE DISCOVERY.

Captain Coleman, schr. Weymouth, plying between Atlantic City and N.Y., has been troubled with a cough so that he was unable to sleep, and was induced to try Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption. It not only gave him instant relief, but allayed the extreme soreness in his breast. His children were similarly affected and a single dose had the same happy effect. Dr. King's New Discovery is now the standard remedy in the Coleman household and on board the schooner. Free Trial Bottles of this Standard Remedy at R. E. Phillip's Drug Store.

The Three American Expositions.

Special to The Times.

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 14, 1886.—The exhibits of the six New England States are grouped in neighborly fashion, one next the other, on opposite sides of the main aisle, near the centre of the States' building. None of them are very large, yet they are just large enough; and there is a special symmetry, order, and neatness about them, individually and collectively, that gives them a distinct and very attractive character. This is partly due no doubt, to the fact that the majority of the articles shown are samples of manufacturers; and these naturally catch and please the eye sooner than a show of rough raw products, no matter how intrinsically valuable.

Massachusetts is famed for her manufactures; and her compact and tastefully arranged exhibit, in charge of Commissioner F. W. Sargent and his assistant, J. A. Nichols, will assuredly be carefully examined by all visitors interested in the progress and prosperity of American industries, productive and self-sustaining, as opposed to European rivals. Six of the very best and best known manufactories of cotton and woolen goods are handsomely represented here; one by its ginghams; another, by its woolens; a third, by its bleached and brown cottons; a fourth, by its cotton and dress fabrics; fifth, by its bleached and brown cottons; and sixth by its printed cotton dress fabrics.—The gingham mill took the first prize here last year, and all its goods are sold ahead, so constant and large is the demand for them. The woolen mill is one of the oldest and most celebrated in this country. The bleached and brown cotton mill took four medals at last year's Exposition; it claims that its fabrics are the best of the kind made in the United States. The mill for cotton and woolen dress fabrics produces one hundred million yards per annum; its buildings cover 43 acres; it employs 3500 persons, for whom it provides a library, a relief fund, etc.; it has taken the highest awards at all the World's Fairs; and at the Paris Exposition of 1867 was awarded the second prize, out out of ten offered, for "the best managed mill." The technical or trade names of the fifth mill on this list are known in every dry goods store in the world. And the sixth mill is one of the oldest, if not the oldest, in this country.

Another mill that is represented makes nothing but knit goods by machinery, especially stockings. Another is famous for its twines, fish-lines, etc. Another, established by a Scotchman, has entirely driven out of the American market the European made goods known as "Turkey Red;" and last, but not least, another mill produces carpets that have long since established a reputation the best European manufacturers can envy.

The South is aiming at establishing mills of the above character; and in this Massachusetts textile mills exhibit she will find much subject-matter for study.

Other interesting samples of Massachusetts manufacturing ingenuity and skill are shown in handsome parlor grates; excellent carriage wheels and carriage parts; steam fire engines and hose carriages; and wool and felt boots and shoes for protection against water and snow. The principal seedsman of New England, hailing from old Marblehead, has an exhibit that gardners and farmers can't fail to notice.

In women's work, there is a very elegant and varied list of needlework, plain and ornamental, by individuals and by schools; the process of making lace; an exhibit of cocoons and silk; several ingenious inventions, among them a simple apparatus for "home gymnastics;" and paintings in oil and water colors, of decided merit.

A large and justly-praised display of American imitation bronzes is made by one metal-working company. The articles are: fruits, portraits, game, armor, etc., all suitable for decorating halls and apartments.

The pupils of the Boston Art Museum send drawings, in crayon and chalk, that are much admired by the art critics.

The attention of educators and of parents will be especially drawn to the exhibits by the pupils of the celebrated Massachusetts Institute of Technology, located in Boston, and established by the State in 1861. Every State and Territory should take example by Massachusetts in this admirable and succesful method of giving the youth of the land a "practical" education. W. D. B.

John Kelly, the great Tammany leader, has been very sick during the past week and for several days it was thought that he would die. The crisis, has, however, passed. The exact nature of Mr. Kelly's trouble has never been definitely ascertained but he has suffered mainly from indigestion and insomnia and was much worn from nervous excitement. He has grown thin, lives chiefly on milk and takes little exercise.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

[From our Regular Correspondent]

WASHINGTON Jan. 18th.—For the first time during the present session of Congress the House of Representatives has, this week, settled down to work. Since Congress met nearly six weeks ago, it has spent the time discussing new rules, waiting for the announcement of committees, and voting to adjourn every day or two for a recess of greater or less length. While thus engaged, nearly four thousand bills and resolutions were laid upon the Speaker's table, and are now awaiting the action of the various committees. Just think of four thousand bills in the House alone, already, and more to come on every Monday throughout the session.

This flood of bills reminds me that the rules have not been changed half as much as is necessary yet, and that no abuse needs investigation so much as Congress itself. About three fourths of these bills are little measures and petty private claims which should never go to Congress at all. No attention could possibly be paid to half of them under any circumstances, but it is an iniquitous waste of the peoples' time for Congress even to read the titles of the measures.

Senator Hoar has proposed that the time for the meeting of Congress shall be changed, so as to give more weeks for needed legislation, especially during the second session, which meets on the first Monday in December and adjourns by law on the ensuing fourth of March. Congress never sits more than ten months in all, though paid for two full years of service. Still, much more work could be accomplished in this length of time if members would attend to the duties for which they are paid by remaining at their desks during business hours. And this growing abuse of absenteeism is the one to which I referred above, and for which some remedy will have to be demanded sooner or later. The journals of the Senate and House show culpable neglect in this respect, and prove that the most important Appropriation bills are sometimes passed without the recorded presence of a quorum in either body.

Then, pairing, as it is called, is a device for neutralizing votes, and sheltering our statesmen from the penalty of losing their pay for non-attendance at the daily sessions. This plan of dodging the record has become distressingly prevailent. When a vote is in progress in either branch of Congress, a Senator or Representative will often say, "I am paired with Mr.———." That is to say if Mr.———votes yes, he votes no, and vice versa.

Oratory has been expended during the week, on the subjects of national monuments and the Army in the Senate, and on Silver in both Houses. Senator Manderson of Nebraska, spoke in behalf of Army reform. Senator Blair of N. H., proposed that monuments be erected to Abrahan Lincoln and General Grant. Senators Coke of Tex, Brown of Ga., Vance of N. C., Pugh of Ala., and representative Reagan of Tex., all added their contribution to the fund of information on the silver question. All of them different from the President with regard to money, and all advocated continued coinage. The agitation of the silver question is likely to continue in both Houses of Congress for some weeks yet, if not, at intervals, through the entire session. A late canvass among Senators and Members however, indicates that no measure calculated to interrupt the coinage of silver dollars is likely to pass either the Senate or House.

Moral ideas are notably popular in the Senate now; a great deal of moral legislation having been proposed this session. Senator Plumb of Kans, is going to ask the Senate to provide for a new article of war, which shall forbid any officer of the Army, and private soldiers as well, to gamble for any stake, however small, whether on duty or on furlough.

Senator Blair who is addicted to formulating measures for the promotion of morality, is now preparing a bill against whiskey and tobacco. He proposes that special instructors be employed in the schools of the District of Columbia to demonstrate to the children the physical injury which arises from the use of liquor or tobacco in any of their forms. He proposes to have this novel plan tried here first, and if it works satisfactorily, he hopes to see it adopted by the other States.

The Senate has confirmed a long list of the President's important recess nominations without opposition. Special cases will doubtless arouse controversy, but most of the names will go through without objection. In adopting this dignified course the Republican Senators fortify themselves in a way to reject consistently nominations in cases where they feel called upon to do so.

A TERRIBLE CONFESSION.

A Physician Presents Some Startling Facts.

The following story—which is attracting wide attention from the press—is so remarkable that we cannot excuse our selves if we do not lay it before our readers entire:

Editor of the Rochester (N Y) Democrat:

SIR:—On the first day of June, 1881, I lay at my residence in this city surrounded by my friends and waiting for death. Heaven only knows the agony I then endured, for words can never describe it. And yet, if a few years previous any one had told me that I was to be brought so low, and by so terrible a disease, I should have scoffed at the idea. I had always been uncommonly strong and healthy, and weighed over 200 pounds, and hardly knew, in my own experience, what pain or sickness were. Very many people who will read this statement realize at times they are unusually tired and cannot account for it. They feel dull pains in various parts of the body and do not understand why. Or they are exceedingly hungry one day and without appetite the next. This is just the way I felt when the relentless malady which had fastened itself upon me first began. Still I thought nothing of it; that probably I had taken cold which would soon pass away. Shortly after this I noticed a heavy, and at times neuralgic, in one side of my head, but as it would come one day and be gone the next, I paid little attention to it. Then my stomach would get out of order and my food often fail to digest, causing at times great inconvenience. Yet, even as a physician, I did not think that these things meant anything serious. I fancied I was suffering from malaria and doctored myself accordingly. But I got no better. I next noticed a peculiar color and odor about the fluids I was passing—also that there were large quantities one day and very little the next, and that a persistent froth and scum appeared upon the surface, and a sediment settled. And yet I did not realize my danger, for, indeed, seeing these symptoms contually, I finally became accustomed to them, and my suspicion was wholly disarmed by the fact that I had no pain in the affected organs or in their vicinity. Why I should have been so blind I cannot understand!

I consulted the best medical skill in the land. I visited all the famed mineral springs in America and traveled from Maine to California. Still I grew worse. No two physicians agreed as to my malady. One said I was troubled with spinal irritation, another dyspepsia; another heart disease; another general debility; another congestion of the base of the brain; and so on through a long list of common diseases, the symptoms of many of which I really had. In this way several years passed during which I was steadily growing worse. My condition had really become pitiable. The slight symptoms I at first experienced were developing into terrible and constant disorders. My weight had been reduced from 207 to 130 pounds. My life was a burden to myself and friends. I could retain no food on my stomach and lived wholly by injections. I was a living mass of pain. My pulse was uncontrollable. In my agony I frequently fell to the floor and clutched the carpet and prayed for death! Morphine had little or no effect in deadening the pain. For six days and nights I had the death-premonitory hiccoughs constantly! My water was filled with tube-casts and albumen. I was struggling with Bright's Disease of the kidneys in its last stages!

While suffering thus I received a call from my pastor, the Rev. Dr. Foote, at that time rector of St. Paul's Episcopal church in this city. I felt that it was our last interview, but in the course of conversation Dr. Foote detailed to me the many remarkable cures of cases like my own which had come under his observation. As a practicing physician and a graduate of the schools, I derided the idea of any medicine outside the regular channels being in the least beneficial. So solicitous, however, was Dr. Foote, that I finally promised I would waive my prejudice. I began its use on the first day of June. 1881, and took it according to directions. At first it sickened me; but this I thought was a good sign for one in my debilitated condition. I continued to take it; the sickening sensation departed and I was finally able to retain food upon my stomach, In a few days I noticed a decided change for the better, as also did my wife and friends. My hiccoughs ceased and I experienced less pain than formerly. I was so rejoiced at this improved condition that, upon what I had believed but a few days before was my dying bed I vowed in the presence of my family and friends, should I recover I would both publicly and privately make known this remedy for the good of humanity, wherever and whenever I had an opportunity, and this letter is in fulfillment of that vow. My improvement was constant from that time, and in less than three months I had gained 26 pounds in flesh, became entirely free from pain and I believe I owe my life and present condition to Warner's safe cure, the remedy which I used.

Since my recovery I have thoroughly re-investigated the subject of kidney difficulties and Bright's disease, and the the truths devoloped are astounding. I therefore state, deliberately and as a physician, that I believe more than one-half the deaths which occur in America are caused by Bright's disease of the kidneys. This may sound like a rash statement, but I am prepared to verify it fully. Bright's disease has no distinctive features of its own, (indeed, it often developes without any pain whatever in the kidneys or their vicinity,) but has the symptoms of nearly every other common complaint. Hundreds of people die daily, whose burials are authorized by a physician's certificate as occurring from "Heart Disease," "Apoplexy," "Paralysis," "Spinal complaint," "Rheumatism," "Pneumonia," and other common complaints, when in reality it is from Bright's disease of the kidneys. Few physicians, and fewer people, realize the extent of this disease or its dangerous and insidious nature. It steals into the system like a thief, manifests its presence if at all by the commonest symptoms and fastens itself in the constitution before the victim is aware of of it. It is nearly as hereditary as consumption, quite as common and fully as fatal. Entire families inheriting it from their ancestors, have died and yet none of the number knew or realized the mysterious power that was removing them. Instead of common symptoms it often shows none whatever, but brings death suddenly, from convulsions, apoplexy or heart disease.

As one who has suffered and knows by bitter experience what he says, I implore every one who reads these words not to neglect the slightest symptoms of kidney difficulty. No one can afford to hazard such chances.

I make the foregoing statements based upon facts which I can substantiate to the letter. The welfare of those who may possibly be sufferers such as I was is an ample inducement for me to take the step I have, and if I can successfully warn others from the dangerous path in which I once walked, I am willing to endure all the professional and personal consequences.—J. B. HENION, M. D.

Letter From Iowa.

CLEAR LAKE, IOWA, Jan. 13, 1886.

Editor Times,—When I last wrote we were in Manitoba, and after spending some time there, we crossed over to Ernest, Pembina Co. Dak., where we saw thousands of acres of wheat put up in shocks. Soon after the steam thrashers were set in motion, and turned out wheat fit for market, at the rate of two bushels per minute, and for pastime we sat upon the sulkey plow and turned over the stubble, these furrows are one mile long and 16 inches wide. On the 22nd. of Oct. we came back to DeSmet, Dak., and, enjoyed the most beautiful fall weather we ever saw up to the first week in Dec. no rain, no mud, and bright sunshine most of the time. Farmers were plowing up until Dec. 3, when we had a few days of cold weather and about two inches of snow, but it all went off in a few days and we left there Jan. 5, 1886. We are now at Clear Lake, Iowa, 290 miles south-east of DeSmet and 365 miles west of Chicago. Clear Lake, Iowa is a beautiful village situated on the east bank of Clear Lake, a beautiful body of water, 7½ miles long and 2½ miles wide. It is in Corro Gordo Co., the second tier of counties from the north. Clear Lake has been termed the Saratoga of the West, and has become a popular summer resort for pleasure seekers. On the banks of the lake, and in the groves which surround its border a great many commodious buildings have been erected for the holding of religious meetings, musical, temperance and other conventions. On the lake in the proper season, constantly ply two steamboats and a large number of sailboats, and in its depths of fine water there abounds fish of many varieties, affording sport for those who enjoy that kind of recreation. The village contains about 1200 inhabitants, and there are many tasty and beautiful residences and summer cottages nestled in the groves along the shore of the lake. There are four churches, a large school employing seven teachers. Here I met John O. Davis Esq. who formerly lived in Fulton, a prosperous and successful dry goods merchant who owns the largest dry good store in the village. We also met Mrs. Lydia Phillips widow of the late Rev. Cyrus Phillips of the Northern N. Y., conference, and H. B. Phillips who was lately with his brother in Fulton. He has rented his farm in DeSmet Dak., and is now in a drug store here and is doing a good business. The crops in the vicinity of this place are corn, oats, wheat, rye, barley, flax etc., and a large number of hogs are fattened for the Chicago market. Yesterday a farmer brought in 60 hogs alive weighing 250 pounds a head. Yesterday we visited the stockyard of a Mr. Lindow in the east part of the village where we saw a great number of fine thorough bred cattle, many of them imported from England. He has some of the most beautiful Herefords that I ever saw. He has also short horned, and other breeds. He was very kind to show us through the stables, and yards, and point out to us the different kinds of stock. He keeps about 300 head and some of them are high priced. Asking for a ten months thorough bred Hereford bull calf $100, and older ones much higher. I forgot to mention in its proper place that on the south side of the lake there is quite a forest of black walnut timber from one to two feet in diameter. Until lately they have burning it for fire-wood. Yours &c.

The High Water.

The water on the flats has receded from its highest point about two feet, enabling one or two manufacturing places to partially resume operations. For several days large gangs of men have been at work near VanBuren's island endeavoring to remove the ice gorge and clear a channel to allow the water to go down. For this purpose dynamite has been used and a large number of half pound catridges have been exploded under the ice. A channel about 700 feet long and 40 feet wide has been made. It is expected that larger cartridges will soon arrive of two pounds each, and a number of these will be fired simultaneously by electricity. These cartidges have been ordered, but have not been received up to noon to-day.

At the People's.

There is not so very much pure wickedness about Peck's "Bad boy" as presented by the Atkinson Comedy company. There is certainly nothing prejudicial to oncoming presidents in the character. From beginning to end, as given last night, and for the last time to-night, it was a plotless lot of fun. And the bad boy is by no means the only mirth-provoker. The groceryman, Jimmy Duffy and the policeman help him out immensely. Really it is the place to go for a good laugh.—[The American, Waterbury, Conn.

Sunday afternoon four men drove down First street on a one-horse pair of bobs loaded with a hay rack. In attempting to turn into Cayuga street the runner struck the crosswalk and tipped the rack over, throwing the occupants out. One of them, Neddy Nolan, an aged man was thrown on the crosswalk striking on his hip and side. He was assisted to his feet and taken to his home in Granby where he was attended by Dr. Miller, who thinks his hip is broken. The other occupants escaped unhurt. This is the second tipover that has occurred on that corner in a few days.

The Bad Boy.

The Bad Boy as presented in the play of "Peck's Bad Boy" by the Atkinson Comedy Company is a character that all the boys in the land should see Although called a Bad Boy he proves he is only a little mischievous and has a good head and is withal one of the best boys in Milwaukee. If every boy was as good as the Peck's Bad Boy of the stage, there would be no bad boys in the world. The tendency of this character throughout is to produce a good influence. Let the children go and see "Peck's Bad Boy."

"Ring out the Ould and in the New."

As a number of the sufferers of the flood were seated around the grocery store stove, toasting themselves and telling how one had rescued Mrs. Rock from the fourth story of her mansion, another had saved a pig at the risk of his own life, only to have it taken from him by a stranger, and a third had barely time to get his clothes on. At last it came to Tim Conley to tell what he had done. "Phat did I do are yez asking, well devil a thing did oi be afther doin till me ould oman picked up the "TIMES" and sez to me, read phat the paper sez about the flood, the same ones are out now as was out then," "whin de yez mean sez oi, last year sez she last 'nary a flood did we have thin sez oi, the paper sez so sez she" "It don't sez oi, wid that we tuck it an looked an may the devil fly away with me coat tail if it wan't Jinnuary the tirteenth ateen aty foive an oim jist afther bein' on me way to tell the office bye to "ring out the ould and in the new," that's phat oim afther bein doin, an Tim started on his mission with the blessing of the sufferers on his head and pipe turned top side down.

Hoping that you will receive him with good grace and make a change in the date I am respectfully

A SISTER TO THE "WANDERING JEW."

We anticipated Tim a little in his errand. Possibly at the same time that the above sufferers were sitting around the stove at the "corner grocery" relating their hair-breadth escapes and adventures we had shaken off our lethargy, awakened from our "Rip Van Winkle slumber," removed the 5 and inserted another figure that raised us a peg higher toward 1,900 A. Too Slick with the Pen.

About two weeks ago Fred Harding, a young man of Volney, stepped into F. E. Goodjon's shoe store and presented what purported to be an order from H. C. Beals for a pair of boots. He was given the goods and a few days later the order was found to be a forgery. Officer Poole was given a warrant and Saturday went to Volney, arrested the young man and brought him to Fulton. Monday he was arraigned before Police Justice VanWagenen who allowed him to plead guilty to the charge of petty larceny. He was sentenced to three months in the Onondaga penitentiary and was taken there yesterday morning.

Fire at the Tannery.

About half past eight last Thursday evening a shed adjoining the tannery of Barrett & Hamburger in Oswego Falls was discovered to be on fire. An alarm was sounded and several members of Co. No. 1 started with their hose cart to the scene. Two streams were obtained from the hydrant of the new water works, which soon extinguished the flames. The shed was but a few feet from the new building and but for the promptness of the fire department and the excellent working of the water works, in all probability the entire building would have again burned. The loss was nominal.

The Grant Monument Lecture.

At the Opera House on next Monday evening, Gen. Geo. A. Sheridan will deliver his great oration and eulogy on Gen. Grant. The lecture is to be under the auspices of the G. A. R. Post of this village and the entire receipts go for the benefit of the Grant Monument fund. Similar meetings are being held in the larger places throughout the State. The cause needs no laudatory comments and it is to be hoped that the public will not only turn out, but, that those that are able, will otherwise contribute toward the monument of our illustrious dead.

"Peck's Bad Boy"

is said to be the funniest play on the stage and it certainly has the material to make it so. It is dramatized by Charles F. Pidgin from the famous Bad Boy sketches of George W. Peck, editor of the Milwaukee Sun. Atkinson's Comedy Co. will soon produce the piece here.

"Peck's Bad Boy, as produced at the Arch Street Opera House last night by Atkinson's Comedy Company, awakened unbounded merriment, throwing the large audience in convulsions at the very start, and never ceasing in its rattling, roaring fun until the fall of the curtain in the last act. Taken all in all, the piece is thoroughly amusing, interpreted as it is, by a cast of more than ordinary talent."—[Philadelphia Evening Bulletin.

The World.

This play was presented at the Opera House last evening before a large and enthusiastic audience. As produced by this company it proved to be one of the finest plays of its kind that has appeared in Fulton in a number of years. The actors seemed to be adapted to the particular role to which they were assigned, the scenic effects were excellent and in many instances simply grand. The shipwreck, the raft scene and the rescue at the end of the third act were especially worthy of mention.

[illegible] Bradway's Barn.

A[illegible] six o'clock yesterday morning [illegible] was discovered in a barn belonging to Mrs. H. Bradway on Second street. An alarm was given and in an incredibly short time Hose company No. 1 was at the scene, and attached a line to the hydrant near C. R. Nicholsbobes. Hose company No. 2 arrived soon after and another stream was put on from the same hydrant. Before the arrival of the department the fire had reached an adjoining barn owned by Mrs. J. Woodin, which was partially destroyed. Mrs. Bradway's barn was insured for $50 and is a total loss. The other building was considerably damaged. About seven o'clock after the department had reached the engine house, word was brought that the hay in Woodin's barn was smouldering and Asst-Chief Hews sent No. 2 back to the scene. A stream was thrown into the hay for some time and soon the weight of the water and hay caused the beam under the floor to give way, letting the floor settle a foot or more. A TIMES reporter, who was on the floor when it settled, made a great hustle for the ladder that stood in the door and reached the ground safely as did several others who were in the barn. The fire department is entitled to much credit for their promptness in responding to the alarm and for the efficiency of their work after reaching the fire. Asst-Chief Hews told the reporter that it was the most obstinate fire the department had fought in a long time, owing to the hay, etc. in the buildings. The efficiency of the water works over the steamers was full demonstrated, as it is very probable that before a stream could have been obtained from either of them, both barns and several neighbors buildings, including Mrs. Bradways house, would have been destroyed. The origin of the fire is unknown.

OBITUARY.

Benjamin Joseph Dyer was born Nov. 27th 1832 at Whitehall, N.Y. His father, Benjamin Joseph Dyer, died when the son was but 6 months old, leaving a widow and two children, a daughter and young Benjamin not very well provided for. The daughter died in 1853. At the age of seven years Mr. Dyer was obliged to go to work on a farm and do what he could towards his own support, going to school during the winter. When he was fourteen years of age, Mr Dyer's mother was married a second time, and he then left home and went to Troy as a clerk, remaining there three years, returning afterwards to Whitehall, filling similar positions in various places.

Mr. Dyer was married Oct. 31st 1845 to Aurelia Judd of Sandy Hill, N. Y. He came to Fulton in March 1854 and engaged in business in what was then known as Pond's block in the store now occupied by Snow & Loomis.

For a long time Mr. Dyer was the leading merchant in Fulton and a number of the younger business men of the town have been clerks in his employ, and received their training under him.

As the methods of doing business changed from year to year and competition became greater, Mr. Dyer could not fall in with the changes, and the new houses in the same line of trade adopting the new ways, gradually drew the trade from him. Added to this came the loss of health, and soon Mr. Dyer found himself unable to cope with his younger rivals.

Not until last July could he be persuaded that he must give up business and its perplexities, for a time at least, and go away in search of health. Accompanied by his wife he spent two months at Castleton, Vermont, returning to Fulton early in the autumn. That was probably the longest vacation he ever had and no doubt prolonged his life just about that length of time. With the approach of winter his strength began to fail more rapidly and it was evident to most of those who saw him that he could not survive the season. The end came a little sooner than was expected, He died at his late residence on Saturday, Jan. 16th, aged 63 years. Mr. Dyer leaves a widow and one daughter, the wife of Prof. Charles A. Colton, of Newark, N. J.

The above sketch would hardly be complete without some allusion to Mr. Dyer's sterling integrity and the esteem in which he was held by his fellow townsmen. Unassuming and retiring in his disposition, and delighting in the privacy of home life, he naturally shrank from everything that would give him prominence in the community, and only in the church of which he was a member would he consent to hold any office.

Knowing as we do the wishes of Mr. Dyer in regard to eulogies, we refrain from further comment, simply saying in closing what has been on the lips of many since his death, "A good man has gone." C. A. C.

Word has been received of the death at Brooklyn last Thursday; of Robert Eugene, youngest son of Charles E. and Elizebth Scouten, aged five years and three months. Death was caused by membranous croup. The remains were interred in the Lutheran cemetery Brooklyn Jan. 16th.

Word was received Monday announcing the death at the Willard asylum, of Geo. Brown son of Rufus Brown of this village. He has been afflicted with epilepsy for a number of years and his death was not unexpected. The body will probably be brought to this village for burial.

Professor Farnham Resigns.

Prof. A. W. Farnham has been compelled, on account of ill health, to resign his position as principal of the public school, District No. 2, to take effect at the end of the present term. Prof. Farnham came here from Westchester, Pa., at the beginning of the present school year, and, although he has been with us but a short time, has made many friends. He has shown himself to be an able instructor, an excellent disciplinarian and a thorough scholar, and the school under his supervision, has made good progress. Impaired eye sight and poor health has compelled Mr. Farnham to give up, for the present at least, work that is so confining and the trustees for this reason have reluctantly accepted his resignation. His successor has not yet been definitely decided upon.

Two Fires in one Night.

About 10:30 last Sunday evening, fire was discovered in the clothing store of Jacob David, in the Columbia Hall building, Oswego. An alarm was sent out and the fire department quickly appeared on the scene but owing to the meagre supply of water they were unable to save the building. The origen of the fire is unknown. The loss was about $30,000: insurance about $20,000, while this fire was in progress another broke out in the residence of city attorney O'Gorman, before the hose company, that had been detailed to attend to it, reached the place, the fire had gained such headway that it was impossible to save the building and it was soon in ruins. None of the furniture was saved. There was an insurance of $2,000 on the building and $1,500 on the furniture.

On motion of Mr. Gage the sum of $1.50 was allowed to W. S. Nelson & Co, in addition to the amount allowed on their bill presented Sept. 23, 1885.

Mr. W. D. Patterson came before the board, and the question of renting jail to the village was discussed.

On motion of Mr. Johnston the question of renting a jail in the future be referred to the Finance Committee to report at the next meeting of this Board.

Messrs. Nichols, Emerick, Gilbert and Piper appeared before the Board in behalf of the Fulton Water Works Co. and asked that a certificate of acceptance of the Works be given by the President of the Village, in pursuance of the contract between said Company and the village. After much discussion and explanation of the terms of the contract, Mr. Bradford offered the following resolution which was unanimously adopted.

Resolved, That the President of the Village be and he hereby is directed to execute an acceptance of the works in the following form to wit:

"To the Fulton Water Works Co. Gentlemen. I William Waugh, President of the Village of Fulton, N. Y., do hereby certify that the system of Water Works in the Village of Fulton, is complete (except the permanent crossing of the Oswego Canal and the pipe from the pump house to the Oswego River, suspended by resolution of the Board of Trustees of said village, Dec. 16, 1885,) and water furnished to the Fire Hydrants thereof according to contract between the Fulton Water Works Company and the Village of Fulton, dated the 23d day of July, 1885, and the same had been accepted by the Village of Fulton as of the 1st day of January, 1886. Nothing herein contained shall be construed to release said Water Works Company from restoring the streets to to their proper condition, or developing the springs on the Connors and Osgood farms according to the terms of said contract, or from performing any other act required by said contract. Also that this acceptance shall not prejudice any right the village of Fulton has to be first supplied, in preference to other villages, with water from said springs.—Dated Fulton, N. Y., January 13th, 1886."

The Village Treasurer reported that he had received from all sources the sum of $9,199.91 and paid out the sum of 9,071.31 leaving on hand the sum of $128.60.

The Clerk reported that since April 1st, 1885. Bills had been audited by the Board for the following purposes and amounts, to-wit:

AGRICULTURAL DEPARTMENT.

FACTS FOR FARMERS.

There is no better time to mow bushes than during the winter months, provided the ground is free from snow.

The capital invested in the dairy business of the United States is computed to be over $200,000 and to employ 700,000 men and 1,000,000 horses.

The New York Tribune says that mention is made of three cows poisoned by rotten potatoes. One died, the others "were saved with difficulty."

The breeders' Gazette reminds its readers that apartments into which the sun never penetrates are no more healthful for live stock than for their owners.

Now is the time to prune the grape vines; if done during the early winter there will be no loss of sap, as in the spring pruning. In pruning cut out all deadwood, and cut back the growth of last season.

The value of farm animals in the southern states is estimated to have increased from $326,000,000 in 1880 to $652,000,000 over 70 per cent. During the same period farm products are said to have increased $3,000,000, and pig iron from 210,000 to 640,000 tons.

The digestive apparatus of a chicken is so strong that grinding its food is a waste of labor. In fact, there is some evidence that entire feeding with ground grain is injurious to fowls. They need to give their digestive apparatus exercise to keep it in vigorous condition.

The Rev. D. D. Gilispie of Marlborough Ulster county, N. Y., is the possessor of an Alderney cow that since April 6 up to November 1, 1885, made 302 pounds of butter. This is remarkable. As near as can be ascertained it is the largest amount of butter made by any one cow for the same period of time on record.

The estimates of the Statisticians of the Department of Agriculture for 1885 for the principal cereals are computed, and the aggregate bushels are as follows, in round millions: Corn, 1,936; wheat, 357; oats, 629. The area of corn is 73,000,000 acres, of wheat 34,000,000, of oats, 23,000,000. The value of corn averages nearly 33 cents per bushel and makes an aggregate of $635,000,000, five millions less than the value of the last crop. The decrease in the product of wheat is 30 per cent. and only 17 in valuation, which is $275,000,000. The valuation of oats is $180,000,000. The production of all cereals is 53 bushels to each inhabitants and the aggregate volume is larger than any former year.

Dirt Floor for Hogs.

If a good dry clay bed cannot be secured at all times, better retain the plank floor. But the clay bed is the best, and if it can be of about the quality of dirt which will make good brick it is better than black soil, and if it is inclined to be reddish so much the better, as then there is an assurance that it contains the muriate of iron, which is healthy for hogs, applied outwardly or inwardly. Bennett says: It is one thing to read how a thing works and another thing to see it. We have noticed articles from such men as Clarkson and Brown saying that a dirt bottom is the best floor to the sleeping place for hogs if it is furnished with a roof and hogs allowed plenty of liberty. We suppose these men must know what they are talking about, our faith was about 50 per cent. doubt as to its working satisfactorily except in favored soils. But this fall we tried it. We left some thirty hogs in the pasture and fixed things so they could run under a cow shed to sleep. The result was that the ground was always dry and dusty under the shed, rainy weather and all, and not a particle of filth to be seen. We never had hogs do so well before nor enjoy their surroundings better, and we have noticed the difference in other cases where farmers have bedded their hogs on floor, the floor and bedding being damp and foul in rainy weather and the hogs chilled and rough coated. Provided that a space of eight or ten rods is put between the feeding place and sleeping place of hogs they will prove themselves the cleanest domestic animals we have, and the dirt floor surprises us entirely in its suitableness as a bed.

Fruit Orchards.

Fruit orchards should receive a generous top dressing at least once in every two years. Moderate applications of lime and generous ones of wood ashes are always profitable, and phosphates are useful if buried beneath the surface; also Peruvian guano, if slightly covered, late in the fall, so as to become thoro'ly divided by winter rains. Coarse organic manure should not be used in contact with the roots of young trees, but chip-dust, fish, flesh and the bones of dead animals, horn piths and hoofs, hair and old plaster, and all like articles, are good for growing trees. Pear trees that have not bourne fruit for twenty years, have been brought into full bearing by yarding two shoats beneath the trees in August and September, in an inclosure a rod square, having their beds close to the body of the tree. In this yard holes were made with a crowbar, into which kernels of corn were dropped, and the whole yard was rooted over and over to the depth of eight or twelve inches, and many of the roots were torn up. The next season every branch was filled with plump, luscious fruit, and for many years the trees continued to yield bountiful crops.

Rotary Milk Shelves.

A very convenient method of arranging the shelves in a shallow pan dairy is as follows: A strong post, six or eight inches square, is mounted on pins which are set into hard-wood sockets, one in the floor and one in the ceiling. Cross-bars are let into groves cut in the posts on each face, and barred shelves are built upon this foundation. The shelves need not be more than six inches apart, so as to slip the pans in upon them. The whole structure turns easily upon the pivots, and takes up very little room, besides avoiding one objection to this system of setting milk, while the pans are [illegible] with much less moving [illegible] than with any other kind of [illegible].—[American Agriculturist.

Threshing Corn.

We have a method of harvesting which we have never seen mentioned, but which we like ever so much: it beats a corn husker all out of sight. We put the corn in bundles as cut, and set it in pretty large shocks, and when well cured, on a bright day we draw it to the barns and run stalks, corn and all through on ordinary wheat threshing machine with the concave dropped down, and prepared on purpose. The machine is run by steam, the corn is fed butt end first, and is husked, shelled and cleaned all at one operation and in first class style. No corn is left among the stalks, and the big parts of these are so broken that they can be run with the straw carrier into the mows, and, mixed with a little straw, keep in the best condition. It is no large day's work to thresh from 500 to 800 bushels of shelled corn. In fact, when in good order, almost the only limit is the amount that can be got to the machine. We, last fall, threshed 600 bushels in a day easily. Try it and report.—[Rural New Yorker.

Marl.

Prof. Kedzie, chemist of the Michigan Agricultural college, has published an interesting bulletin on this topic. He says when at the bottom of muck beds and shallow ponds a white or yellowish white substance is found, that is marl. It consists, more or less, of lime and magnesia, and in proportion as these are large in quantity in it will be its value as a fertilizer. If it dissolves readily in common muriatic acid, with a fizzing effervescence, then it is composed largely of these constituents; if not, not.

It is an excellent fertilizer for light sandy soil containing a fair supply of vegetable matter. It helps open wet soils that run to moss and bunch grass. A dressing of fifty or seventy-five bushels to the acre is the proper amount. It wants to be finely pulverized and mixed with the surface soil. Freezing pulverizes it better than anything else. The effect of marl upon a soil is something similar to that of spent lime, except that it is milder, not so caustic.

Things to Know.

W. B. Kinnick husked 13½ bushels of corn in a day.

Don't let the cows drink from pools of stagnant water. It contains poison germs.

The Iowa State Agricultural college, at Ames, has had a brilliant and successful year.

Cut straw or cut corn stalks go very well once a day alternating with hay, and are a saving.

The Orange County Farmer says if you fill rubber boots half full of warm oats when they are taken off at night they will be nice and dry inside in the morning.

The grape yield in Ulster county, N. Y., this year was enormous. Not a few growers cut as high as 150 tons from their vines. Many tons were placed in old storage to be kept till Christmas.

Hints for the Family.

A wife can generally hide any small object from her husband by putting it in his Bible.

When twin babies are so very much alike that they cannot be readily distinguished apart, the difficulty can be overcome by slitting the ears of one with a pair of scissors. Another plan is to tattoo a lizard in the forehead of one baby and an elephant in the forehead of the other.

A wife may often be cured of a lack of animation and general tedium vitæ with a few poker chips and a photograph of a pretty actress carelessly worn in the husband's vestpocket.

A husband, in sewing a button on his trousers, will find that a small tack-hammer and a pair of tweezers, worked in scientific co-operation with his teeth, will serve as a practical subsitute for an ordinary thimble.

A good way to name a new babe is to write a great many names on a slip of paper, shake them up in a hat, and take the top paper. If the name thus obtained dosen't suit keep shaking the hat till you get a suitable one on top. If the baby is a boy let the wife manage the hat; but if it is a girl let the husband manage it. This precaution should be taken to prevent "stuffing" the hat or any unfair manipulation of the returns.

The best way to prevent the children from playing with the cat is to swap the cat off for a goat.

A Blind Spot in the Eye.

There is a spot in your eye that is not sensitive to light, a part of the eye with which you do not see. The following directions for finding it are going the rounds of the papers, and may be new to most of our boys and girls. Shut your left eye, and with your right one look steadily at the cross below, holding the paper ten or twelve inches from the eye.

X O

Now move the paper slowly toward the eye, which must be kept fixed on the cross. At a certain distance the other figure the letter O will suddenly disappear, but if you bring the paper a little nearer it will come again into view. You may not succeed in the experiment on the first trial, but with a little patience you can hardly fail; and the suddenness with which the letter O vanishes and reappears is very striking.

Nice for the Insides.

The butter consuming public will be startled by the recent testimony of a New York chemist the sixty different ingredients used in the manufacture of oleomargarine are sugar of lead, sulphuric acid and boracic acid. And yet these swindlers inform their patrons that these bogus compounds are made up only of harmless materials.

Sick Headache.

There is a great difference between this and the ordinary headache, which passes off quickly. Sick headache is accompanied with nausea and other bad feelings, which show that the stomach and liver are out of order. It is pleasant and yet astonishing, to see how quickly Sick Headache yields to a dose of Herricks Liver Pills. Begin with the first symptoms of Sick Headache. These pills, being sugar coated, are delightful to take, even by the most delicate ladies. 25w3

A young mother, traveling with her infant child, writes the following letter to her husband at home. "We are doing first-rate and enjoying ourselves very much. We are in fine health. The boy can crawl about on all fours. Hoping the same can be said of you, I remain, etc., Fanny."

A modern wit defines the difference between men and women: "A man gives forty cents for a twenty-five cent thing he wants, and a woman gives twenty-five cents for a forty-cent thing she does not want."

It is a mystery to many people how a fragile young girl, who wears a 17 inch belt, can sit down to a Christmas dinner and eat the larger part of a 16 pound turkey whose girth was 36 inches on the day of his death.

A New York rural editor rises to make this ought-to-be-sufficient correction: "Instead of being arrested yesterday as we stated, for kicking his wife down a flight of stairs and hurling a lighted kerosene lamp after her, the Rev. James Wellman died, unmarried, four years ago.

"Can't you drive faster, John!" said a farmer's wife, "we'll never git to the village at this rate." "Can't help it." replied John. "Them hosses has plowed all the week, an' I want to save what life they have got left for a dash past the tavern."

A Wealthy Dallas lady, just coming from church, was accosted by a ragged urchin, who begged her for a dime. "And what would you do with the dime if I gave you one?" asked the lady. "Please, ma'am, I'd buy bread," replied the lad. "Poor child," piously observed the lady, "you know not that man liveth not by bread alone. I have no dime with me, but if you will come to my house I'll give you a couple of tracts written expressly for little boys on the awfulness of gluttony.'

"100 Doses One Dollar" is true only of Hood's Sarsaparilla, and it is an unanswerable argument as to strength and economy.

Another Good Boy.

A Detroit grocer was the other day hungrily waiting for his clerk to return from dinner and give him a chance at his own noonday meal when a boy came into the store with a basket in his hand and said:

"I seed a boy grab up this 'ere basket from the door and run, and I run after him and made him give it up."

"My lad, you are an honest boy."

"Yes, sir."

"And you look like a good boy."

"Yes, sir."

"And good boys should always be encouraged. In a box in the back room there are eight dozen egg. You may take them home to your mother and keep the basket."

The grocer had been saving those eggs for days and weeks to reward some one. In rewarding a good boy he also got eight dozen bad eggs out of the neighborhood free of cost, and he chuckled a little chuck as he walked homeward.

The afternoon waned, night came and went, and once more the grocer went to his dinner. When he returned he was picking his teeth and wearing a complacent smile. His eyes caught a basket of eight dozen eggs as he entered the store, and he queried:

"Been buying some eggs?"

"Yes," got hold of those form a farmer's boy, replied the clerk.

"A lame boy with a blue cap on?"

"Yes"

"Two front teeth out?"

"Yes."

The grocer sat down and examined the eggs. The shells had been washed clean, but they were the same eggs that the good boy had lugged home the day before.—[Detroit Free Press.

WELLS, RICHARDSON & CO'S IMPROVED BUTTER COLOR

A NEW DISCOVERY.

For several years we have furnished the Dairymen of America with an excellent artificial color for butter; so meritorious that it met with great success everywhere receiving the highest and only prizes at both International Dairy Fairs.

But by patient and scientific chemical research we have improved in several points, and now offer this new color as the best in the world.

It Will Not Color the Buttermilk. It Will Not Turn Rancid. It is the Strongest, Brightest and Cheapest Color Made,

And, while prepared in oil, is so compounded that it is impossible for it to become rancid.

BEWARE of all imitations, and of all other oil colors, for they are liable to become rancid and spoil the butter.

If you cannot get the "improved" write us to know where and how to get it without extra expense. (46)

To-Day.

To-day there are sunshine and tinted sky;
To-day there are laughter and song;
There are fleecy clouds that are floating high—
But, ah! will they stay, and how long?

To-day there are sorrows and chill and gloom;
To-day there are weeping and woe;
And the yellow leaf, it whispers my doom—
"Down to your grave you soon must go."

To-day—so the morrow I'm sure must be;
To-day—like the days that are past;
There are song and dance, there are sights to see—
But how long, think you, they will last?

To-day had its morning all rosy red;
To-day had its glamour of youth;
There were fancies bright in the eager head—
We found but a mirage in truth.

To-day hath its twelfth hour's fierce glare and heat;
To day hath its high tide of life;
But the tide ebbs back on its ocean beat.
And soon will be ended the strife.

For nights sure will come to the brightest day;
High noon will sink low in the west;
From the trooping star, a glimmering ray
Shows the lone bird home to her nest.

But, oh! when we come to life's closing hour,
How, think you, with us will it be?
Will the mists come up and the black clouds lower;
And our sight grow dim that we cannot see?

To-day will our sunset be bright and clear?
Will our Day Star come with the night,
With His "peace" and "good will" and welcome cheer,
To guide us to the realms of light?

HER FORTUNE.

Don't be sorrowful, darling,
Don't be sorrowful, pray;
For taking the year together, my dear,
There isn't more night than day!

She is coming down the green lane in the golden summer weather, her sweet, clear voice filling the golden air.

The birds check their morning concert to listen, and then, jealous of the sweet sounds, subside into silence, and Lil has it all her own way. Such a patient young face peeping out from the big white sun-bonnet, the soft, brown eyes gentle and sad.

Not a pretty face! Truth obliges us to state that.

Lillian Aylmer, or Lil, as she was called, was far from beautiful.

Close behind her Jack trudges patiently along with fishing-rod and the usual etceteras over his shoulder.

Jack, the merry vagabond brother, who, wherever Lil may be, is sure to hover somewhere near. The group upon the shady porch of the old farmhouse catch a glimpse of the two, and directly a loud voice sounds a warning note:

"Lil! You, Lil! Come here—quick!"

The girl stops short, the song dies upon her lips, a red flush stains her cheek for a moment, and then sotto voce:

"Old Hateful! I knew he'd find some excuse to spoil our fun. I say, Jack, Uncle Abner is calling us."

Jack whistles ruefully. He knows too well that against Uncle Abner's decisions there is no appeal. And he and Lil have planned such a lovely time down at the creek, where the alders lean over to look at themselves in the water, and the pretty speckled trout lie waiting to be caught.

And they have so few holidays, these two. For they are the orphan children of Abner Benton's sister, and being dependent upon his bounty, have to "pay their way," as he tersely reminds them. And they do pay their way with interest. For poor Lil is the household slave; while Jack is "as good as a reg'lar hand on the place," the old man pronounces, "and costs nuthin."

Lil, standing in abject silence, hears her name once more.

"Lil! D'ye hear? Come back to the house."

She turns mournfully to Jack, who stands digging his bare feet into the sand, his brimless straw hat on the back of his curly head, his face full of woe.

"You go alone, Jack!" she says slowly; "they want me at the house."

Jack winks hard to keep back the tears, then, with a sigh of resignation, bravely conquers himself.

"No, indeed. If you've got to go back, Lil, I'm a goin' with you."

So they trudged back to the house together, a woe-begone pair, and come to a halt at the entrance of the big, shady porch.

Old Abner Benton is sitting in a great rush-bottomed armchair, his spectacles upon his nose, while a stranger—an elderly, grave looking man—is seated near, leisurely sipping a glass of Mrs. Benton's home-made wine.

Lil starts in surprise. Company is an unusual event at the farmhouse.

"Thar she is, sir!" says Uncle Abner, in a tone of repressed excitement; 'that's Lil Aylmer, my niece; the boy is her brother, Jack Aylmer. Lil, this is Mr. Latimer."

Lil has not the slightest idea who Mr. Latimer may be, but she executes a timid little salute.

"My dear," says the stranger, kindly, "I am the bearer of good news! Miss Aylmer, your father's estate was, at his death, found to be insolvent. But a chance venture of his, which being considered worthless, was not swept away with the rest, has proven successful. My dear Miss Aylmer, I congratulate you and Mr. Jack here, also! You and your brother have fallen heir to $50,000 each!"

How dark everything grows to Lil's bewildered eyes. Mr. Latimer's voice sounds far off, she starts suddenly to find herself, pale and breathless, seated upon the porch steps, while the gentleman bends over her.

"There, my dear," he says kindly. "Now you are all right. Mr. Benton"—he turns to the old farmer—"if you will allow me to take charge of these young people as their guardian, I——"

"No, you don't!"

Abner Benton's harsh voice is hoarse with anger.

"I should like to know who's got the best right," he storms furiously. "I'm the brother o' their dead mother! I'll [illegible] of the young ones myself, Mr. [illegible], if you please."

[illegible]

he'd be glad to get rid of the youngsters, except in harvest time, when Jack was worth his weight in gold. And Jack thinks how almost certain he would be of unlimited fishing excursions and good times generally with Mr. Latimer as their guardian. And he wonders vaguely why Uncle Abner has changed his mind so suddenly.

He and Lil, too, are destined to find out sooner than they expect. In the meantime Mr. Latimer takes his departure, with many kind words to the brother and sister; and save for the unusual deference which all the Benton's suddenly assume toward the two, the whole visit would seem a dream.

A few days later Uncle Abner summons Lil to his private sitting-room, a big, dusty barn of a room, where, at a tall pine desk, the old man is sitting, looking very grave.

"Lil," he begins, as she pauses meekly before him, "how old are you, child?"

He knows very well, of course; but Lil answers:

"Eighteen, Uncle Abner."

The old man removes his spectacles, fidgets a little upon his high, hard stool, then returns the spectacles to his nose once more.

"Wall it's about time for you to—to —Lil"—desperately—"you're young, I know, but I reckon 'twould be a prudent thing for you to git married!"

"Uncle Abner!"

The girl starts as though he had struck her a blow, all the color has faded from her cheeks, and her eyes are red and dilated.

"Bekase," the old man goes on decidedly, "you've come into a fortune, you see, Lil; and the world's full o' fortune hunters and sech; so I've made up my mind you shall marry our Joe, and a powerful good husband he'll make, too, will Joe! Wall what d'ye say?"

She is trembling with indignation, panting for breath. Her face has grown white and frightened, and the brown eyes are full of horror. Twice she tries to speak before she can find words.

"Uncle Abner! You must be mad! I have never thought of such a thing—and—Joe Benton is the last man on earth whom I would marry."

Purple with rage, Uncle Abner cannot speak; he glares into the girl's indignant face with small, scintillating gray eyes.

"And I say you shall marry Joe Benton!" he gasps at last. "I should like to know if he ain't good enough for you, my fine lady? But here he is to speak for himself."

Poor Lil turns to fly from her persecutor. But the door has opened, and a young man stalks into the room.

A tall, angular, awkward fellow of five-and-twenty, with smooth, yellow hair, nondescript features and ferret-like eyes.

"Yes, dear Lil," he begins at once, "I am here to speak for myself. Tell me, is there any particular reason why you will not consent to be my wife?"

The girl flushes crimson; her eyes flash; she turns upon her tormentor like a young fury.

"Because I hate you!" she pants angrily. "I dislike every one here! Not one of you has ever treated us kindly until that money came into our possession. I dislik the others, but you, Joe Benton, I hate."

"Ha, ha! Well, that is candid! All the same, my sweet coz, I am going to marry you."

"Never!"

Old Abner Benton has taken himself from the room.

It is a long, low room, upon the ground floor, one window opens upon a great, shady orchard, and, making his way through the clover, the tall form of a young man—dark and handsome—is coming slowly into sight.

But Lil does not see the approaching stranger; she is too intently occupied with the task in hand; determined to so peremptorily dismiss Mr. Joe Benton that he will not dare annoy her in this way again.

So she lifts her proud little head, and the brown eyes meet the ferret-like orbs of Joe defiantly, as she repeats that emphatic:

"Never!"

His face grows white.

"I swear that you shall never leave this room until you have promised to be my wife!" he said in low, hissing tones.

"I will die first!" she answered, firmly.

Her glance seeks the open window; a moment more she would have leaped through, but Joe Benton turns suddenly upon her, and seizing her two wrists in his strong hands, holds her fast.

In vain she struggles to get free. Oh, if Jack would only come.

"Jack!" she cries wildly. "Jack! Help! Oh, help!"

There is a rustling among the shrubbery without; another moment, and a tall form springs through the open window into the room.

A well-directed blow upon the head of Joe Benton knocks him senseless, and then the stranger turns to Lil and removes his hat.

"I thought it was Jack, my brother," she apologizes.

The stranger smiles.

"I am Jack Latimer," he says. "Hearing my name called first attracted my attention: and so that fellow got his just deserts. I trust you are not——"

He hesitates. Lil goes up to him and lays her hand in his.

"I thank you," she says simply.

The two step out into the shadowy orchard, and chatting pleasantly as they stroll about, are soon fast friends.

* * * * * * * *

When she meets Joe again he is sulky and unpleasant, and there is a look of triumph in his glance which tells its own story. Joe has found the road to vengeance.

"I was down at the hotel, to-day," he observed, addressing his father, but meaning Lil all the time, "and I met those Latimers. Bad lot, if the truth [illegible] Jack Latimer, who [illegible]

Imagine Lil's sensations, for that Jack Latimer's visits have had a deeper significance than those of an ordinary caller she cannot deny, but she would die sooner than allow Joe Benton to read her thoughts upon the subject, so she makes no comment, and soon after slips from the room.

She flies to her favorite retreat—the old orchard—and crouching down at the foot of a huge apple tree, cries a little. She cannot help it; for her dream has been such a beautiful one and the awakening so cruel.

And there Jack Latimer finds her a little later. "Lil!" he cries eagerly, as he laid his hand on the bowed head. "Good Heavens! has that brute been tor*menting you again?*"

She glances up, wiping her tears away furtively and forcing to her face a look of haughty disdain.

"You need not trouble yourself, Mr. Latimer," she returns freezingly; "besides, your wife might object."

Jack laughs heartily.

"My wife!" and he laughs again. "I thought Joe Benton's visit to the hotel register to-day meant mischief. Lil, he saw there the entry: 'John Latimer and wife.' But it is my Uncle John, for whom I was named, and who with my aunt, his wife, has just joined our party. Lil, I came here this evening to tell you that I am going away soon, and I want to take you with me. Will you go, Lil —as my wife?"

She glances up shyly, and as she makes no answer, Jack takes silence for consent.

He walks proudly up to the house with Lil upon his arm, and makes his intentions known to Uncle Abner.

Of course there is a storm, but the old man is utterly powerless.

There is a quiet little wedding a few days later at the village hotel, and Lil is united to the man of her choice, and with her brother removes to her new home in a distant town.

Brother Jack creeps to her side the first day of her arrival in their handsome new home (her husband's wedding gift to Lil, for he is very wealthy) and lays his curly head upon her shoulder.

"I say, Lil," he whispers, "it's jolly good luck, isn't it?"

She turns her head and kisses him fondly.

"Yes, dear," she answers softly, "we have ample reason to bless the day that brought us the news of our good fortune."

It Is Well To Remember

That every path hath a puddle.

That he is the richest who wants the least.

That a million dollars will not buy a ray of sunshine.

That the greatest of faults is to be conscious of none.

That the brightest thoughts sometimes come from the dullest looking men.

That Methuselch even, never complained of time hanging heavy on his hands.

That all the good things of this world are of no further good than as they are of use.

That a newspaper may be a sewer or a stream of clear water, according to its source.

That what a man gets for nothing he is very apt to value at just about what it costs him.

That we often unlock the door of fate with our own hands, and then throw the key away.

That compliments and congratulations cost nothing but pen, ink and paper, or —words.

That our homes are the instruments of music of which a single discordant string destroys the sweetness.

That the path of life is beset with thorns, and that they who are not afraid to encounter them, may gather the rare flowers that grow between.

How Not to Dance.

Allen Dodworth has published in a manual of dancing explicit instructions as to the proper attitude to assume towards your partner (feminine) in round dances. Many young gentlemen might profit by following Mr. Dodworth's rules, and by taking timely warning by these additional suggestions.

One arm is enough to put around the lady at one time; the ambidextrous position known in the West as the "double hug" is neither refined nor pleasing to the eye. Nor is it necessary; the young lady will not try to get away until the music stops, if her partner is respectably skillful.

You will notice, sometimes, at fireman's balls, that some of the gentlemen hold their partners much as if they were hose. That is not the way; the men that keep them at a distance, as if they were the fire, are nearer right.

Do not squeeze the young lady while dancing. If it is necessary to your happiness to embrace her, it is better taste to choose a retired part of the conservatory after the dance is over. The snapping of ribs around a ball-room irritates the musicians.

While avoiding undue compression of your partner, do not allow her to forget that you are there. Unless your rudder has been temporarily unshipped, it is your duty to steer. If she will not allow you to do so, it is proper to ask her to take you to your mother.

It is in this country the lady's privilege to stop waltzing when she is tired. The man may keep on until she stops. If he has a pedometer in his trousers pocket he should not look at the dial until after he has taken her to her seat. To pull it out at the end of a long waltz and announce the miles is bad form. Equally ill-bred it is to mop the brow ostentatiously and say "Gosh!"

THE PROPER THING.

Very little white neck-lingerie is worn.

American silks are growing in popular favor.

Large soft felt red hats for boys and little girls are popular.

Red cockades look well on hats of any color worn in sleighing.

French nainsook embroideries are used for trimming undergarments.

Children's pinafores must be ample now, quite covering the dress.

Honeycomb satin trimmed with swansdown is the proper thing for babies' capes.

Avoid buying cheap woolen materials as they are mixed with cotton and wil soon look shabby.

The serviceable, softly draping cashmeres are liked by middle-aged ladies for plain costumes.

The newest wrappers for morning wear are made in redingote shape with doublebreasted fronts and square sleeves.

Curly astrakhan or krimmer will be superseded by the soft wavy astrakhan. The galloons even are showing less curl.

Some of the new bag-muffs are fastened to the bonnet strings, which are long and pinned in at the waist with silver pins.

An entire suit of cloth for the street is considered more elegant than one which shows a mingling of some other fabric.

Fleece-lined silk gloves are growing in favor for winter. They are less cumbersome than woolen and less troublesome than kid.

New cloth jackets and redingotes made by tailors have the sleeves flowing open slightly at the wrists, instead of the close coat sleeves.

Notwithstanding the fact that the coiffure dressed very high is the leading style in hairdressing, the low Grecian coil is not by any means discarded.

The very latest fancy work craze is the scorching of artistic designs on wood. The work is done with a platina pencil and benzine, heated by a spirit lamp.

Pink, or rather rose color, which is a bluish pink will be very fashionable this winter, as it suits nearly all complexions and combines beautifully with silver.

In combining two materials in a dress the amateur dressmaker is advised to select a plain fabric for the most important parts and figured stuff or stripes for the accessories.

OFFICE HOLDERS.

The office held by the kidneys is one of importance. They act as nature's sluice-way to carry off the extra liquids from the system and with them the impurities both those that are taken into the stomach and those that are formed in the blood. Any clogging or inaction of these organs is therefore important. Kidney-Wort is Nature's efficient assistant in keeping the kidneys in good working order, strengthening them and inducing healthy action. If you would get well and keep well, take Kidney-Wort.

JUST AS BAD AS PAINTED.

Widespread Commotion Caused by the Terrible Confession of a Physician.

The story published in these columns recently from the Rochester, N. Y., Democrat and Chronicle, created a deal of comment here as it has elsewhere. Apparently it caused even more commotion in Rochester, as the following from the same paper shows.

Dr. J. B. Henion, who is well-known not only in Rochester, but in nearly every part of America, sent an extended article to this paper a few days ago which was duly published, detailing his remarkable experience and rescue from what seemed to be certain death. It would be impossible to enumerate the personal inquiries which have been made at our office as to the validity of the article, but they have been so numerous that further investigation was deemed necessary.

With this end in view a representative of this paper called on Dr. Henion at his residence on Andrews street, when the following interview occurred: "That article of yours doctor, has created quite a whirlwind. Are the statements about the terrible condition you were in, and the way you were rescued, such as you can sustain?"

"Every one of them and many additional ones. I was brought so low by neglecting the first and most simple symptoms. I did not think I was sick. It is true that I had frequent headaches; felt tired most of the time; could eat nothing one day and was ravenous the next; felt dull pains and my stomach was out of order, but I did not think it meant anything serious. The medical profession has been treating symptoms instead of diseases for years, and it is high time it ceased. The symptoms I have just mentioned or any unusual action or irritation of the water channels indicate the approach of kidney disease more than a cough indicates the coming of consumption. We do not treat the cough but try to help the lungs. We should not waste our time trying to relieve the headache, pains about the body and other symptoms, but go directly to the kidneys, the source of most of these ailments."

"This, then, is what you meant when you said that more than one-half of the deaths which occur arise from Bright's disease, is it Doctor?"

"Precisely. Thousands of diseases are torturing people to-day, which in reality are Bright's disease in some of its many forms. It is a hydra headed monster, and the slightest symptoms should strike terror to every one who has them. I can look back and recall hundreds of deaths which physicians declared at the time were caused by paralysis, apoplexy, heart disease, pneumonia, malarial fever and other common complaints, which I see now were caused by Bright's disease."

"And did all these cases have simple symptoms at first?"

"Every one of them and might have been cured as I was by the timely use of the same remedy. I am getting my eyes thoroughly opened in this matter and think I am helping others to see the facts and their possible danger also."

Mr. Warner, who was visited at his establishment on North St. Paul street, spoke very earnestly:

"It is true that Bright's disease has increased wonderfully, and we find by reliable statistics that from '70 to '80 its growth was over 250 per cent. Look at the prominent men it has carried off, and is taking off every year, for while many are dying apparently of paralysis and apoplexy, they are really victims of kidney disorder, which causes heart disease, paralysis, apoplexy, etc. Nearly every week the papers record the death of some prominent man from this scourge. Recently, however, the increase has been checked and I attribute this to the general use of my remedy."

"Do you think many people are afflicted with it to-day who do not realize it?"

"A prominent professor in a New Orleans medical college was lecturing before his class on the subject of Bright's disease. He had various fluids under microscopic analysis and was showing the students what the indications of this terrible malady were. 'And now, gentlemen,' he said, 'as we have seen the unhealthy indications I will show you how it appears in a state of perfect health,' and he submitted his own fluid to the usual test. As he watched the results his countenance suddenly changed—his color and command both left him and in a trembling voice he said: 'Gentlemen, I have made a painful discovery; I have Bright's disease of the kidneys.' And in less than a year he was dead. The slightest indications of any kidney difficulty should be enough to strike terror to any one."

"You know of Dr. Henion's case?"

"Yes, I have both read and heard of it."

"It is very wonderful, is it not?"

"No more so than a great many others that have come to my notice as having been cured by the same means."

"You believe that Bright's disease can be cured?"

"I know it can. I know it from my own and the experience of thousands of prominent persons who were given up to die by both their physicians and friends."

"You speak of your own experience; what was it?"

"A fearful one. I had felt languid and unfitted for business for years. But I did not know what ailed me. When, however, I found it was kidney difficulty I thought there was little hope and so did the doctors. I have since learned that one of the physicians of this city pointed me out to a gentleman on the street one day, saying: 'There goes a man who will be dead within a year.' I believe his words would have proven true if I had not providentially used the remedy known as Warner's safe cure."

"Did you make a chemical analysis of the case of Mr. H. H. Warner some three years ago, Doctor?" was asked Dr. S. A. Lattimore, one of the analysts of the state board of health.

"Yes, sir."

"What did this analysis show you?"

"A serious disease of the kidneys."

"Did you think Mr. Warner could recover?"

"No, sir. I did not think it possible."

"Do you know anything about the remedy which cured him?"

"I have chemically analyzed it and find it pure and harmless."

Dr. Henion was cured five years ago and is well and attending to his professional duties to-day in this city. The standing of Dr. Henion, Mr. Warner and Dr. Lattimore in the community is beyond question, and the statements they make cannot for a moment be doubted. Dr. Henion's experience shows that Bright's disease of the kidneys is one of the most deceptive and dangerous of all diseases, that it is exceedingly common, but that it can be cured if taken in time.

A CHAT WITH THOSE WHO READ NEW YORK NEWSPAPERS, AND OTHERS WHO DON'T READ ANY.—The newspaper is becoming more and more a necessity to intelligent men and women, and residents of Central and Northern New York will find upon trial that the

UTICA MORNING HERALD
AND

meet their wants as no other newspapers can succeed in doing. The UTICA MORNING HERALD since its recent enlargement, is able by means of its special wire connection with the Associated press to publish every morning the telegraphic news of the world in larger quantity, and of a later date than any New York newspaper, owing to the fact that the latter are compelled to go to press about two hours earlier than the HERALD. Containing all the general news, with complete market reports, the UTICA HERALD also supplies, with minuteness that permits no rivalry, the local news of all Central and Northern New York, carefully gleaned by an army of special correspondents. Thus it does for its patrons what no New York paper can do, supplies a general and local newspaper in one. More than that, it presents in each issue a wealth of reading matter of the choicest and freshest description, culled from every source; and so answers for a dozen newspapers and one or two magazines thrown in.

The same characteristics distinguish the UTICA WEEKLY HERALD, so long the favorite family journal of the rich agricultural section through which it continues to enjoy an unrivaled circulation. Its ten generous pages overflow with news, local and general, the latest markets, an admirably equipped agricultural department, and miscellany to enliven the long winter evenings. It is a healthy newspaper, that can be admitted into every family and read with genuine profit, in this respect differing widely from the flash publications that are offered in the guise of weekly newspapers, containing sensational and demoralizing reading which is poison to the young.

If you don't know this from actual experience, subscribe for the daily or weekly UTICA HERALD for a month, and you will be convinced. The Herald keeps its old friends, and welcomes new ones. A sample copy of either issue will be sent to any address, on receipt of a postal card asking it. The UTICA MORNING HERALD costs 67 cents a month, $2.00 for three months, or $8 a year.

JAS. R. FAIRGRIEVE - EDITOR

There is a possibility of war occurring between Greece and Turkey, but it is improbable that such an event will take place as it seems almost the height of absurdity for Greece to open hostilities and commence a war in which she will have plenty of sympathy but little or no aid. This fact seems to be realized and the people of Athens through a committee, have telegraphed to Mr. Gladstone as follows:—

"We place in your hands the Hellenic cause, with the firm hope that it will find in you a genuine champion."

Mr. Gladstone in response telegraphed:—

"Considering the authority attached to the action of the Powers, both on general grounds and by reason of their intervention in the formation of the Greek kingdom, I earnestly hope that Greece will pause before placing herself on this occasion in conflict with their deliberate and united recommendation."

The Utica Herald in an editorial yesterday morning sums up the matter thusly:—

If Greece possessed greater military and naval resources, her threats of war would cause more general alarm. She has ground for complaint in the loss of Greek people, by the union of Eastern Roumelia with Bulgaria. She is right, too, in the claim that the treaty of Berlin guaranteed the maintainance of the relations which that union changed. But how her rights could be better subserved with Rumelia directly dependent on Turkey, than in union with Bulgaria, it is hard to see. In both cases, the province is separated from Greece. Nor is it entirely clear why Greece should attack Turkey for assenting to the achievements of Bulgarian arms, which it could not prevent.

This is the Greek program: To send a fleet against Turkey, if possible to the seraglios and minerets of Constantinople. The world ought to approve any reasonable movement that would transfer Greek power to the Bosphorus. At some time, that hope will be fostered. But now all the great governments insist on peace with Roumelia attached to Bulgaria. England, as usual forbids attack on Turkey, and Germany sustains that veto.

The threats and proclamations of Greece cannot amount to more than verbal protests against the course of events. The great powers pay no attention to them and will brush aside any actual display of force. So little heed is given to any plea which a little state may urge, even if based on solemn and recent treaty stipulations.

THE death of Mr. David P. Morgan, in Washington, last Sunday morning removes another of the vastly wealthy and successful business men of our country. He had been suffering from diabetes for several years and had sought relief under the care of the most prominent specialists in Europe and America. While all his friends have known for some time that his days were numbered, the announcement of his death was a severe shock.

Mr. Morgan was a Southerner and began business in Mobile about forty years ago. In 1861, at the breaking out of the civil war, he having little sympathy and no confidence in the secession movement, sold out his cotton business in Mobile and moved to New York city where he resided until he moved to to Washington a few years ago. Last summer he purchased the palatial residence of Senator Cameron in Washington, for which he paid $95,000 and nearly as much more for refinishing and furnishing it.

It is an open question and one frequently discussed whether Mr. L. T. Leifer or he was the richest man in Washington. The riches of both were known to be so great as to make it difficult to decide.

Mr. Morgan has been during the past 25 years one of the largest and most successful dealers in stocks in this country. He leaves a wife, one son and several daughters, each of whom will have at least two millions.

THE business failures during last week, as reported by R. G. Dunn & Co., number for the United States 303, and for Canada 26. More than two-thirds of of the whole number are reported from the Southern, Western and Pacific States.

THE trial of General Shaler, a member of the armory board, was begun last Monday in New York city. The accused was indicted for bribery in receiving money from M. B. Wilson for his influence in persuading the board to purchase from him certain armory sites for which Wilson was agent.

THE annual dinner of the Yale College Alumni Association was held at Delmonico's last Saturday evening. Noah Porter, the retiring president, of Yale college was present and was enthusiastically received by the 125 alumni that had assembled. Speeches were made by Chauncey M. Depew, Hon. Wayne McVeagh and others.

A TERRIBLE mine explosion occurred in Newbury, West Virginia, last Friday in which forty-one lives were lost. Forty men composed the shaft, which went to work on Friday morning, of that number all but one are supposed to be dead. The man that escaped came up five minutes before the explosion occurred. Besides these miners two strangers who were visiting the works, were in the mine.

STATE AND VICINITY.

Hamer's foundry and machine shop at Lacona was burned last week. Loss $6,000; insurance $6,600.

At Sherburne, Chenango county, last Saturday, Russel Palmer, aged 45, and Charles Newton, aged 14, were killed by the explosion of a portable engine boiler while bailing hay.

The lecture recently delivered in Utica by Gen. Sheridan, for the benefit of the Grant monument fund, and the subscriptions received netted $246.95. This amount was forwarded Saturday, to the Grant monument association in New York.

George Loucks, a student in the school in the village of Theresa, near Watertown was seriously injured last week while coasting. His sled ran into a pile of tin and rubbish throwing him headlong into the pile and partly severing his jugular vein. His recovery is doubtful.

Michael Cherry, a man employed as trackman on the New York Central railroad, was run over and killed near the Central depot at Geneva last Friday night. The body was horribly crushed, the wheels having passed over it just below one shoulder and above the other causing instant death.

The thirty-first annual meeting of the New York State Association of School Commissioners and Superintendents closed in Ithaca last Friday. The papers read before this body of educators were carefully prepared and elicited earnest discussion. The next meeting is to be held at Syracuse.

James Rheubottom, a prominent business man of Weedsport, died Sunday morning, after a three weeks' illness. Mr. Rheubottom was an active member of the Weedsport Hoopskirt company, a concern which employs over a hundred hands. A widow and two sons survive the deceased.

Literary.

The St. Nicholas comes to us from the Century company and as usual it is full of beautiful engravings and interesting and instructive stories for the young.

We have received this week from the publishing house of D. Lothrop & Co. Boston, "Little Men and Women" and "Babyland" two magazines published monthly, the former at $1.00 per year and the latter at 50 cents. These numbers abound in instructive articles, short stories and beautiful pictures. They are just the thing for the little folks.

A Desperate Convict.

During the services in Auburn prison Sunday morning, John Daly, of N. Y., who is serving a sentence of three years and six months for burglary, stepped up to one of the keepers with a request to re[illegible]. This request the keeper refused and Daly raised his fist as if to strike the officer, when the principal keeper Boyle interfered. Daly turned upon the latter and yelled; "You're the man I want," and producing a clasp knife from his pocket began slashing at him. Maj. Boyle, fearful of arousing the thousand convicts in the room, attempted to grapple with the infuriated man and wrest the knife from his hands, but a gash on the hand and a desperate lunge at his abdomen convinced him of the necessity of extreme measures in this case. Three keepers then grabbed the unruly convict, but he struggled furiously and just as he was being taken through the door, yelled "murder" at the top of his voice, hoping, as he afterward said to incite the other convicts to an uprising. The other keepers, however, produced their fire arms and not a man arose during the scuffle. A woman in the visitors' gallery was seized with hysterics and her moans and screams added to the excitement. Daly attacked Boyle in May last and cut him badly about the legs. A steel button saved Boyle's life in the struggle Sunday.

Charles A. Roberts, of East Wilson, N. Y., had thirteen scrofulous ulcers on his face and neck. Hood's Sarsaparilla cured them.

ACCORDING to our Washington letter Congressman Beach, of New York, proposes that the Eulogies upon diseased members shall be delivered on Sundays and save all the week days for work.

THE Newark boys, who were alleged to have been bitten by a mad dog and who have recently returned from France where they were treated by the chemist Pasteur, are now said to be on exhibition at a museum in New York city.

THE new Croton aqueduct which is being built near New York city is a fruitful source of sensations. Last week the body of an Italian laborer who had been murdered with a hatchet by some of his compatriots was found near one of the shafts. Robbery was the supposed cause.

CALIFORNIA escaped the recent severe storm which visited the United States east of the Rocky mountains and almost froze the life out of the Gulf States. But California's turn has come later, and this week she had an experience almost as severe, in a storm of a magnitude and duration rarely if ever equalled on that coast. It extended from the northern boundary of Washington Territory to the southern boundary of California, and from the Rocky mountains to the Pacific ocean. There was an almost continuous fall of rain and snow, accompanied by wind, which on Wednesday reached a velocity of eighty-two miles an hour, one result of which was to cut off San Francisco entirely, for the first time in its history, from telegraphic communication with the outside world.

The Ross-Wigg litigation involving $160,000, which has been in the general term seven times, and three times in the court of appeals, has been settled by Ross' agent.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

[From our Regular Correspondent]

WASHINGTON Jan. 22d.—The skirmishing that was predicted for this week between the President and the Senate, is in progress, and there are prospects for more serious fighting all along the line. Mr. Cleveland instructed his Cabinet officers to furnish the information asked by the Republican Senators in regard to the removal, suspension, and appointment of certain Federal officials. The papers on file in these cases were sent to the Senate. Senators did not find in them satisfactory information; they have called for more and say it can and must come.

The Senate has been speech making on silver again this week. The President has made a law of the recently passed Presidential Succession bill by giving it his signature, and the House of Repsentatives has been blessed with the addition of six hundred more new bills. There are now about five thousand measures awaiting for the consideration of this slow-moving body, which has as yet disposed of but one important measure; the Succession-bill mentioned above. At this rate it is easy to predict what will be the fate of most of them. One of the reforms that has been proposed in Congress this session is in regard to eulogies. It was submitted by a New York Member, Mr. Beach, and it asks that the eulogies or or memorial services over deceased Senators and Representatives shall be delivered on Sundays. Whenever a death is formally announced in either end of the Capitol, that branch of Congress of which the deceased was a member, immediately adjourns, even if the body has been in session but five minutes. That is one day lost, and then another day is lost when the memorial services are ordered. Sometimes these memorial days come toward the close of a session, when there is a rush of work, and time can ill be spared.

Some have suggested that this obituary eloquence had better be voted out of order at all times, and others have expressed the opinion that it should be relegated to the Christmas vacation or the long summer vacation, when members should show their respect in a marked way by coming together in a special session solely for eulogistic purposes. If Congress would set a good example in this respect, the Departments might next drop their prenicious custom of shutting down on public business, and setting all their clerks at liberty, whenever some forgotten personage, who was at the head of the Department half a century ago happens to die. But even if they should not, the reform proposed in Congress would be a great gain of time, and would help to solve the problem, how Congress is to perform the sworn duty of members, specially imposed by an article in the Constitution "to legislate in all case; whatsoever."

The special memorial services of the present session will be over General Grant and the late vice-President Hendricks, and will probably take place in March.

The annual preparation for scattering seeds over the country may be witnessed now at the Agricultural Department. In the seed division all day long, heads and hands are busy doling out to the Senators and Representatives the usual gratuity of this parential Government to Agriculture. This doing up and labeling of seeds, always a large business, is unusually so this year, and expert packers and fillers complain of overwork.

But the seeds must be ready for Congress to distribute. How would they like to face their constituents if the latter had been deprived of their expected onion and potato germs? One Congressman did decline this proffered benefaction of the government last year, but his constituency was not agricultural.

Most of them are pleased at the prospect of sending out more seeds than ever before. Each Congressman is to get 6,500 packages of valuable seed and 500 packages of flower seed, in addition to field seed—wheat, corn oats and other grains. This 1,500 more packages than they have received other years, although there are seventeen more Congressmen than heretofore. Your correspondent does not charge the Agricultural Department any thing for this advertisement. If any of you fail to get your seed you will know who to blame for it.

Speaking of packages reminds us of one received on Wednesday last by the Secretary of the Treasury. It was a contribution to the Conscience fund and was post-marked New York. It contained one $1,000 bill, two $500 bills and five $100 bills. They were all cut in two, with a small piece clipped from the center, and the word "cancelled" marked with a pen across the face. The sender said: "Here are $2,500 U. S. bills, mutilated so as to insure the governments getting the money. Whatsoever a man sows that shall he also reap. I have sown to the wind, and am reaping the whirlwind." It was signed "Conscience."

Casts From Pompeii

A museum has been erected in Pompeii, in which are preserved plaster casts of some of the people who perished in the eruption. These people were covered up by the fine ashes just where they fell, and in the positions in which they died. These ashes hardened, and, although the bodies with the exception of a few bones, entirely disappeared in the course of ages, the hollow places left in the ashes, are exactly the shape of the forms and features of the persons who had been there. An ingenious Italian conceived the idea of boring into these hollow molds and filling them up with liquid plaster of Paris. When this become dry and hard, the ashes were removed, and there were the plaster images of the persons who had been overtaken and destroyed before they could escape from the terrible storm of hot ashes, which came down in quantities sufficient to cover a whole city from sight. In some of these figures the features are very distinct, and we can even distinguish the texture of their clothes and the rings upon their fingers. There are eight of these figures —men, women, and girls, besides the cast of a large dog. To stand and look upon the exact representation of these poor creatures who perished here seems still more to hasten the time between the present and the days when Pompeii was a lively, bustling city.—From "Personally Conducted," by Frank R. Stockton, in St. Nicholas for February.

The Three Americas' Exposition.

Special to THE TIMES.

NEW ORLEANS. Jan. 22, 1886.

Interesting exhibits of silk cocoons and silk in thread, hanks, and manufactured goods are in both the States and Main Buildings; the more interesting, too, that woman's industry, perseverance and taste are predominant in them, at least in the preliminary work.

Silk manufacture has long been a prominent and paying industry at Patterson, New Jersey; but the raw material had to be imported. In 1880, at Philadelphia, a wealthy ladies' association was formed expressly to develope silk culture as a new means of support for needy women. The result has been most gratifying, not only in its benevolent aspects, but in furnishing American raw silk.

The New Jersey silk mills have several looms at work, under steam power, in the Main Building; and the regular, clear click of the light and neat apparatus, when heard far out into the grounds, always draws a crowd of curious people, instructed and pleased to see the parti-colored, delicate threads woven by machinery into elegant tissues. Louisiana has, in her allotted space in the States Buildings, a large and very handsome display of the products of the looms of her Silk Manufacturing Company, woven from Louisiana silk.

And the women of Louisiana, Mississippi and Texas send large exhibits of their progress in raising the silk worm and the cocoons, and preparing the raw material for the factories.

In New England, interest in the matter was revived in 1884, by the efforts of a lady, who was connected with the Women's Department of the New England Institute. This was Mrs. M. A. McBride, who has charge of the Press Reception Room at this Exposition. Practical and progressive Massachusetts has introduced the silk-culture study into her schools; and last year 150,000 silk worms were raised by individuals in that State.

It is evident, from the various silk culture exhibits at the Exposition, that a special industry has been found for American women and children that requires but little pecuniary outlay, and that will exactly suit them. Its favorable pecuniary returns are undoubted.

The regular visitor to the Exposition is pleased to see the steadily increasing and large additions to the contents of the States and Main Buildings. Private parties, who had retained space, yet not filled it, are now fast making good their delinquency. Long-expected exhibits from Central and South America,—chiefly the latter,—are coming forward; more European exhibitors are hanging out their banners on the tall pillars; and a few States and Territories, that were absent, have at last decided to occupy the areas allotted them; whilst those already on the ground are every now and then placing new articles in line.

And, what is equally gratifying, the long-expected visitors from abroad are now coming in, by every train. In fact, the exposition, as a whole, is about where it was this time last year, when the other parts of the country began sending their thousands of people here. But the weather,—which was so persistently horrible last winter,—has been with the exception of the recent severe spell, delightful, and remains clear, bright and bracing. The avenues of easy access and rapid transportation from the heart of the city are more than doubled by the St. Charles Avenue asphaltum roads, and the new steam railroad from Canal street to the grounds.

The Exposition Races are attended by two hundred of the best blooded horses: there is, daily, fine music in the two Halls by a large and first-class orchestra: the Art Hall rejoices in beautiful European paintings and choice statuary and bronzes; the Horticultural Hall is a delightful resort; the Creole Historic Exhibit is unsurpassed in interest; and the brilliant pyrotechnic spectacle, "The Last Days of Pompeii," is of itself worth a long journey to see. GENERAL NEWS.

Kingston and Rondout are to have the electric light. The capital stock is $30,000.

The will of J. D. Farnsworth was filed Friday, it contains a bequest to Wellesley college of $100,000 for a college of fine arts.

Jewelry valued at $20,000 was seized Saturday by the custom officers at Montreal, on the ground that it had been smuggled from England.

While the average proportion of churches to the population in the United States is one church to every 516 people, it is in Boston one to 1,600, in New York one to 2,400, in St. Louis one to 2,800, while in some it is but one to every 5,000.

In a runaway of a sleighing party at Havana, Schuyler county, the daughter of Professor Ellis of Cook academy, was thrown from the sleigh against a telegraph pole and instantly killed. Several others of the party were slightly injured.

The richest men in Russia are two Swiss brothers named Noble. They bought up immense tracts af lands and now control, it is said, more petroleum than the Standard oil company. There is no way of computing their wealth, which has been estimated as high as $400,000,000.

Miss Anderson's pecuniary gains are extraordinarily large. She did what few American actors or actresses before her ever succeeded in doing—she brought back a large sum of money as the product of acting in England. She has now some $250,000, all prudently invested.

The annual emigration returns for the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland show that during 1885, 264,086 persons left British and Irish ports for places out of Europe, a decrease of 28,915 compared with the previous year. Five-sixths of the Irish emigrants proceeded to the United States, as did nearly two-thirds of those of Scotch nationality, while England contributed under 74,000 of a total of nearly 127,000.

Dennis Jackson, a farmer at Pilot Grove, severely whipped his 14-year-old son for disobedience. At 4 o'clock Friday morning the boy got out his father's gun, crept to his parent's room, placed the muzzle of the weapon against his father's side and fired. The father was not killed and attempted to get a pistol from under the pillow, The boy again fired at his father's head, killing him. His mother was slightly wounded. The murderer was arrested.

Recently at Woodstock, Ont., a girl named Callins died, it was supposed and was buried. A day or two ago the body was exhumed for removal to another burial-place, when the horrible discovery was made that the girl had probably been buried alive. Her shroud had been torn into shreds, her knees were drawn up to her chin, one of her arms was twisted under her head and her features bore evidence of dreadful torture.

MORTGAGE SALE.—Whereas default has been made in the payment of the moneys secured to be paid by a mortgage dated the twenty-sixth day of June, [illegible], executed by Winfred McClellan delivered to Hattie F. Nelson to secure the payment of the sum of Three hundred and fifty dollars and interest, recorded with the power of sale therein contained in the clerks office of Oswego county, on the tenth day of April, 1878, in Liber 108 of mortgages, at page 495, and whereas there is claimed to be due on said mortgage at the time of the first publication of this notice the sum of $419.85 and an action has not been brought to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof and said power to sell has become operative. Therefore notice is hereby given that by reason of the facts aforesaid and in pursuance of the statute in such case made and provided the mortgaged premises described in said mortgage as follows, to wit.: All that tract or parcel of land situate in the Town of Hannibal, county and state aforesaid, being a part of subdivision number three (3) of lot No. 60, and bounded as follows, to wit.: Beginning in the centre of the road at the south-east corner of a piece of land that Ezra W. Clausbury deeded to Mary Crositt, thence west along the centre of said road fifty (50) rods; thence south far enough to make ten acres in a square or rectangular form—will be sold at public auction at the law office of Giles S. Piper, in the village of Fulton, Oswego county, N. Y., on the 24th day of April, 1886, at 10 a. m. of that day and said mortgage thereby foreclosed.

Dated Jan'y 26, 1886.

MORTGAGE SALE.—Whereas default has been made in the payment of the moneys secured to be paid by a mortgage executed by Joel Chubb and Jane Chubb delivered to Eunice A. Pardee, dated the first day of Jan'y., 1877, recorded with the power of sale therein contained in the clerks office of Oswego county, on the seventh day of February, 1877, in Liber 111, of mortgages, at page 250, given to secure the payment of the sum of $1200. And whereas the sum of $121.67 is claimed to be due on said mortgage at the time of the first publication of this notice and to become due the further sum of $980, and an action has not been brought to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof and said power of sale has become operative. Therefore notice is hereby given that by reason of the facts aforesaid and in pursuance of the Statute in such case made and provided the mortgaged premises described in said mortgage as follows, to wit.: All that tract or parcel of land situate in the Town of Granby (formerly Lysander) and known and distinguished as the south half of survey fifty acres of Lot No. nine (9) in the town aforesaid. Also all that other tract or parcel of land situate in said Town of Granby, and being a lot of one and one half acres of land on Great Lot No. nine (9) of the original township of Lysander, now Granby, and being on the east side of the river road leading from the south line of said town to the city of Oswego. The said lot hereby intended to be conveyed being bounded on the north by lands owned by Smith Southard, on the east by the survey fifty acres of said lot No. nine (9), on the south by lands formerly owned by Nahum Chubb, and west by the centre of said river road and being the same premises conveyed by Nahum Chubb to Jane Chubb by deed dated Jan'y. 17, 1876. Also all that other tract or parcel of land situate in the Town of Granby aforesaid known as subdivision No. four (4) of Lot No. sixty-two (62) in the original township of Hannibal, now Granby, as subdivided by Barnet Mooney, Samuel Farnham and Asa Dudley commissioners in partition appointed by the Court of Common Pleas in and for the county of Oswego—will be sold at public auction at the law office of Giles S. Piper in the village of Fulton, county of Oswego, New York, on the 24th day of April, 1886, at 10 a. m. of that day and said mortgage thereby foreclosed.

Dated Jan'y 26, 1886.

MORTGAGE SALE.—Whereas default has been made in the payment of the moneys secured to be paid by a mortgage executed by Joel Chubb, delivered to Richard Smith, dated the twenty-fourth day of October, 1857, recorded with the power of sale therein contained in the clerk's office of the county of Oswego, on the twenty-sixth day of October, 1857, in Liber 46 of mortgages, at page 218, given to secure the payment of the sum of $706.86 duly assigned by said Richard Smith to Benjamin Smith and by said Benjamin Smith to Richard L. Smith, who is now the lawful holder and owner of the same, and whereas the sum of $1138, is claimed to be due on said mortgage at the time of the first publication of this notice being the whole amount unpaid secured by said mortgage and an action has not been brought to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof and said power of sale has become operative. Therefore notice is hereby given that by reason of the facts aforesaid and in pursuance of the statute in such case made and provided the mortgaged premises described in said mortgage as follows, to wit.: All that tract or parcel of land situate in the Town of Lysander (originally) but in the present town of Granby, in the county of Oswego, and state of New York, known and distinguished as the south half of the survey fifty acres of Lot number nine in the town aforesaid. Also all that other piece or parcel of land situate in the Town of Granby, county of Oswego and State of New York known and distinguished as subdivision Lot number four of the original Lot number sixty-two in the original town-township of Hannibal, in the state aforesaid as subdivided by Barnet Mooney, Samuel Farnham and Asa Dudley, commissioners appointed by the Court of Common Pleas in and for the county of Oswego, to make partition of said Lot number sixty-two, to wit.: Beginning at the north-east corner of Lot number sixty-two; thence south on the line of said lot to the north-east corner of States' hundred number six; thence west on the north line of States' hundred number six aforesaid to the south-east corner of Thomas Sanbarn's land; thence north on the east line of the said Sanbarn's land to the north line of said lot and thence east to the place of beginning containing eighty-nine acres be the same more or less.; the two parcels above described are the same premises conveyed to the party of the first part herein by the three following described conveyances to which conveyances reference is hereby made for a more full description to wit.; First deed Asa Phillips and wife to Joel Chubb, dated May 31, 1853, recorded in the clerk's office of Oswego Co. Aug 19, 1853, in Book 62 of deeds, page 559; Samuel Cogsdell and wife to Joel Chubb, dated November 25, 1854, recorded in the Oswego County clerk's office, February 19, 1854, in Book 68 of deeds, pages 87 and 88; Third Garrit Smith and wife to Joel Chubb April 7, 1852, recorded in Oswego county clerk's office, August 19, 1853, in Book No. 62, of deeds, pages 555 and 556, will be sold at public auction at the law office of Giles S. Piper, in the village of Fulton, Oswego county, New York, on the 24th day of April, 1886, at 10 a. m. of that day, and said mortgage thereby foreclosed.

Dated Jan'y 26, 1886.

The Howe Ventilating Stove warms the room and keeps the air pure. It Ventilates the room at the same time that it heats it. Cold, fresh air is taken into the Stove through a pipe from the outside of the house. Fresh air passes into the Stove, is heated and passes into the room through the open top, while the foul, impure air being heavier than fresh, pure heated air drops dead to the floor, is forced into a flue in the Stove and is drawn through a small pipe in the smoke pipe into the chimney and escapes with the smoke.

Frozen to Death.

A man named Archibald Forbes, who lives near the Lilly Pond in the southern part of the town of New Haven, was found dead near the town line Monday. On Saturday night Mr. and Mrs. Forbes had retired as usual, and about three o'clock in the morning he awoke and taking his wife by the hand told her to get up for the house was on fire. She arose and dressed herself quickly and went out, locking him in the bedroom. While she was engaged in building a fire he broke out the upper sash of the window and escaped. Mrs. Forbes discovered his escape soon after, but being aged and infirm herself and thinking that he would return she waited some time. She then went to the nearest neighbors, Mr. Lincoln Battles and looked around the barn without giving any alarm, thinking he might have returned. About 7 o'clock Monday morning, Mr. George Bracy on going to the house of Mr. Battles found him lying in the snow close to a stone wall, frozen to death. It is thought that when he escaped from the house he endeavored to go to the Battles house, but missed his way and endeavoring to climb the wall was overcome by cold. Mr. Forbes was one of the oldest citizens of New Haven and was in good circumstances. He had reached a very advanced age.

Coroner Matteson was notified Monday afternoon and held an inquest. A verdict of death from exposure was rendered.

A Model Building.

The Block recently erected in Oswego Falls by Mr. Geo. J. Emeny is in every respect a model building. The lower floor is now occupied by John Sullivan as post office. He is also putting in a stock of gents furnishing goods. The other part of the lower floor has been leased to Crahan & Carpenter, hardware merchants, and will be occupied by the first of March.

The second floor is to be used as Police Justice's and Town Clerk's offices. Mr. Maertens, Supt. of the Riverside and Oswego Falls Woolen Mills, is also to have private compartments on this floor. The third floor is occupied as an association rooms and private boarding house.

The Dada-Piper Libel Case.

The libel case of George S. Dada a Phoenix lawyer, against Giles S. Piper of this village, was moved for trial in the circuit court in Oswego. S. N. Dada appeared for the plaintiff and District Attorney Mead for Mr. Piper. The alleged libel grew out of a suit to set aside a judgement obtained in a justice's court, and which was transferred to defendant. Mr. Piper who was attorney for the defendant in that action stated in his complaint that the judgment was obtained by "gross and corrupt perjury" by the plaintiff in the action. In his answer Mr. Piper claimed that he was privileged in making this statement and the court so held and judgement was ordered for the defendant. An appeal will be made to the general term.

A Railroad Benevolent Society.

W. G. Gage & Co. have recently put into the cupola of their mill an eighteen inch gong, which is connected with the system of water works in the mill in such a way that if any of the automatic sprinklers should be opened anywhere in the mill, the gong will sound the alarm. The gong was tried yesterday afternoon and worked very satisfactorily.

About noon last Sunday a runaway horse came across the bridge and dashed up Oneida street. When it reached Darrow's photograph case it turned in toward the sidewalk, and after demolishing the glass in the case, continued on its way up the street on the walk. The animal was captured near the M. E. church but little damaged. The horse was owned by Doctor Gifford of Lower Oswego Falls, who had been out driving and the horse becoming unmanageable threw the doctor into the snow. Mr. Gifford has settled the damages with Mr. Darrow.

Conductor Shattuck of the Ontario & Western railroad is being pushed forward by the leading democrats of the central counties of the state for railroad commissioner to succeed Mr. O'Donnell. The conductor's brotherhood is eager for his appointment and at a recent meeting held in Binghamton a committee was appointed to memorialize Gov. Hill in his favor. He is endorsed by many prominent men, a majority of the delegates to the last Democratic State convention being strongly in favor of him. He has been in the railroad business a greater portion of his life.—[Oswego Times-Express.

General Sheridan's Lecture.

About 200 persons assembled at the Opera House last Monday evening to listen to General George H. Sheridan's Oration and Eulogy on General Grant, which was given under the auspices of the G. A. R. Post of this village for the benefit of the Grant Monument fund.

The speaker of the evening was introduced to the audience by H. E. Nichols Esq. The lecturer opened his address with a synopsis of Grant's life from his birth to his death, and then proceeded to elucidate the condition of this country previous to the war. He next minutely described General Grant's personal appearance and then traced his eventful career, especially the military part of it, through the long civil struggle and up to the time of his death. The lecture was clear and exhaustive, abounding in rhetorical figures and allusions and was well received by the audience.

It is said that about forty dollars were cleared for the fund.

Gilmoure's Band in Syracuse.

Early in March, Gilmoure's band will be at the Empire rink in Syracuse for a week's grand jubilee. Among the soloists will be the famous soprano Pauline L'Allemand, a former Syracusian and late of Europe. There will be a chorus of 300 voices. The orchestra will include 65 pieces. Excursion trains will be run on all roads leading into Syracuse.

Unclaimed Letters.

The following letters remain uncalled for in the post office at Fulton, Oswego county, N. Y. on January 27th, 1886: Horrace Ballou, Lizzie Bowman, Patrick Casey, Chas. Dupree, Cora Fuller, Mrs. B. C. Harding, Soloman Hicks, Dr. Geo. B. Parker, Mrs. D. B. Smith, Ann Van Wanen, Maria Ward.

Persons calling for the above please say 'advertised.'

Awaiting an Owner.

Between 1860 and 1870, there lived, in or near Syracuse, a man named William Magleton. Later he went west and became owner of a considerable tract of land. There now appears to be no owner of the property. Any one in Syracuse or vicinity who is interested, can learn something of value by communicating with E. W. Sargent, Atchison, Kansas.—[Syracuse Journal.

Cheap Enough.

Two thousand shares in the Liberty Gold Mining Co., of Colorado, which cost $4,000; 650 shares in the New York & Colorado Mining Co which cost $3,000; notes to the amount of $400, and accounts amounting to $650, belonging to the estate of the late H. H. Farmer, of Port Jervis, were sold at administrator's sale a few days ago. The whole lot aggregating about $11,000, brought $1.

River Improvements.

ALBANY, Jan. 26.—Assemblyman Parsons' bill appropriates $3,000 for the Superintendant of Public Works to maintain and keep in repair all the State dams across the Oswego and Seneca rivers, and to maintain at each dam a fishway at least one foot in depth and an angle of not more than thirty degrees.

Master Fred Warner entertained about 30 of his young playmates last Wednesday evening. A very pleasant time was had.

The Amusement Club will hold their next meeting one week from this evening at the residence of S. B. Mead on First street.

Mead & Stranahan have found their present quarters too small for their use and have leased the rooms in the Woodin block adjoining their office.

Several of the owners of fast steppers in town have scraped a double mile track on the ice below the village and each afternoon can be seen speeding their fast horses.

In the Dessum-Wadsworth case before justice Wright in Oswego Monday afternoon, a seventeen year old boy who was called as a witness, said he could neither read nor write, and did not know his age or the months of the year.

Mr. Knight, representing the Thomson-Houston Electric Co. of Boston was in town yesterday. It is his intention to return again and examine into the advisability and possibility of introducing this system of electric light into this village.

There will be a public installation of officers of the Fulton lodge of Good Templars at their hall next Monday evening, at which time the Lodge quilt will be disposed of. The meeting will be open to anyone desiring to be present, especially those interested in the quilt.

The congregations of the Baptist, Methodist and Presbyterian churches held union services at the Baptist church Moneay evening, The Rev. W. F. Markham had charge of the meeting. This evening union services will be held at the Methodist church.

The Philharmonic society of Syracuse, whose operatic representations for several seasons have been entirely creditable, gave the first of three performances of "The Mikado" at the Grand Opera House last evening. The opera will be repeated this and to-morrow evenings.

Peck's Bad Boy was presented by the Atkinson Comedy Company, at the Opera House last Saturday evening before a fair sized audience. The play is without a plot, but abounds in many laughable scenes and situations. The characters were well sustained and the play as produced by this company was considered to be the most laughable one of the season.

Summerville's new skating rink was opened to the public last night. A large number of skaters were in attendance, The Fulton band was present and furnished some fine music. The new rink, although somewhat small when compared with the one that burned, is very conveniently fitted up, the floor is an excellent one and the skates, which are new and of an approved pattern, give general satisfaction. The rink, in all probability will be largely patronized.

After the adjournment of the grand jury last Friday District Attorney Mead came in in a sly and suspicious manner with something apparently concealed in his sleeve and approached E. E. Frost, foreman of the jury and his mysterious movements attracted much attention and no one knew what he meant to do. Suddenly he paused before Mr. Frost and drawing from his sleeve a dilapidated looking cane, he presented it to Mr. Frost in a neat speech. The cane was stolen from the house of Enoch Mastin by two young burglars and was worth about ten cents. Mr. Frost received the gift with becoming modesty.—[Times-Express.

Last Saturday morning L. B. Babcock, who lives just east of this village, was driving around Syracuse, accompanied by a relative, a son of Seymour Skiff. When near the corner of North and Wolf streets, the horse became frightened at a boy sliding down hill and started on a run towards the canal. Just before reaching it Mr. Babcock was thrown or jumped from the cutter and broke both bones in his left leg. He arose to his feet and took a step on his broken limb before he knew the extent of his injuries. The boy, not being aware of any accident to his companion, had started after the horse leaving Mr. Babcock in the road. He was taken to the home of Mr. Skiff, where the fracture was reduced and he was made as comfortable as possible. He is still in Syracuse and will remain until he can be safely brought home.

Three "Mere-Sham" Pipes.

A smooth-tongued individual visited our village last week and to a prominent saloon-keeper told a pitiful tale of destitution. After his heart-rending story was finished he produced a meerschaum that had been but little used and after a few scalding tears had been shed, said that he lacked but five dollars of having enough to get to New York. He said that he had paid "three-pun" for the pipe in England and would never part with it unless compelled to do so by necessity. His offer was eagerly snapped at, the buyer thinking he had won a prize. He afterward visited several other parties and disposed of his best friend and consoler—more tears—for sums ranging from three to six dollars. The pipes are very handsomely colored and mounted and would deceive almost anyone. After leaving Fulton he sold several pipes to parties in Oswego, and when this was learned here the fortunate (?) buyers looked with some doubt on their new purchase. It was reported that the unfortunate man had a grip-sack full of pipes.

The New Railroad.

Work upon the extension of the Phœnix railroad from the junction to Broadway is being steadily pushed forward in spite of the recent adverse weather. The ties and track have been laid almost to Broadway. Ground has been broken for the site of the new passenger and freight depots. They will be built of wood in a very handsome and substantial manner. The passenger depot on the corner of Broadway and Second streets will be 20x40 feet. The freight house, which will be located on the corner of State and Second streets, will be 30x84 feet. The contract for these buildings has been let to John Ray of Phœnix. Mr. Ray told a TIMES reporter yesterday that if good weather continued, the depots would be finished in two weeks. If satisfactory arrangements can be made with the N. Y., O. & W. railroad, the new road will use their track to Oswego joining it at Broadway. If not a separate track, it is said, will be built to Oswego.

OBITUARY.

Died, at her home in Marne, Iowa, Jan. 8th, 1886, Almira C. wife of O. L. Horton, formerly of this village, at the age of 25. The deceased was a long sufferer from consumption, and for a few days previous to her death she was unable to take nourishment of any kind, actually starving to death in her already enfeebled condition. Still without murmuring she patiently awaited the final call and peacefully fell into that sleep that knows no awakening on earth. Besides her husband and a little child of three years, she leaves a father and three brothers, living in New York, to mourn her loss. She is the last of five sisters who have died of the same disease.

Mrs. Angelia Howard, widow of the late Cyrus F. Howard, died last evening at her residence on Utica street in this village, at the age of 66 years. She was born and brought up in this vicinity and was much respected. She leaves two sons and a daughter, Miss Libbie Howard a teacher in No. 2 school. Funeral services will be held Friday afternoon from the house, Rev. Mr. Markham officiating.

Grove G. Cook of Cohoctah Centre, Mich., for many years a resident of this village, died at his home in the West last Monday, aged about 60 years. Death was caused by a cancer. Mr. Cook had many friends in this vicinity who will be pained to learn of his death.

Mrs. Rhoda Burch died at her home in Granby in the Lewis district last Thursday, aged 73 years. Funeral services were held from the house on Saturday afternoon, Rev. W. F. Markham, officiating. The remains were interred in the Lewis cemetery.

VICINITY NOTES.

OSWEGO FALLS.

The work of cutting a channel through the ice has just begun.

E. M. Becker and A. B. Fletcher are putting water into their blocks.

J. W. Hoyt of Delaware county has just opened a new jewelry store here.

The funeral of the late Mrs. Chas. Tompson was attended at the Congregational church Sunday.

The trustees of Oswego Falls have accepted the system of water works furnishing water from Conners' spring by the Fulton water works company.

The factory is again running all departments and owing to the delay of the past two weeks an unusual amount of night work is having to be done to fill orders.

Potatoes are being shipped quite freely at present, the price being 50 cents for 60 pounds. Although the crop rotted so badly last fall, it is stated upon good authority that there is at present a surplus now in the grower's hands in Granby of eighteen thousand bushels.

The Oswego Falls Manufacturing company are going to build a boom above the piers built last fall for the purpose of keeping the floating ice from the water wheels. The boom will be 600 feet long and be made from oak timbers twelve inches square and eighteen to twenty feet long. The end will be fastened from the outside of the piers to the river bank, 600 feet above.

Palermo.

The Ladies' Aid Society which met at Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Lansing's on Wednesday afternoon and evening was well attended. An elaborate supper was provided for all present, and the offerings at ten cents each amounted to five dollars.

A donation for the benefit of the Rev. B. DeForest Snyder will occur at Hannan's hall in Palermo on Friday evening January 29th. A cordial invitation is extended to all to be present. Oysters and other refreshments will be served. A good time for all is anticipated.

The first lecture in the course at the M. E. Church at Vermillion occurred last Friday evening. Subject—"Cape Cod"—J. D. Phelps D. D., was greeted with a full house. The lecture was highly entertaining. The speaker was enabled from actual experience to give a graphic description of the people, their generosity friendliness, superstitions, etc. The audience was frequently convulsed with laughter and the speaker was frequently greeted with applause.

The second lecture of the course occurred last evening. The lecture was delivered by Rev. C. H. Guile of Mexico—Subject, "The Pyramids."

Mr. H. L. Craine is at Oswego this week being on the grand jury.

Mr. Butts of Woodchuck Hill, is able after a long illness to visit his friends at the Centre.

Mrs. William Howard is very low and can hardly turn herself in bed. She is a great sufferer.

North Hannibal.

There has been a good deal of excitement here for several days owing to the presence of a bear which has been making tracks in the woods and lots and even in the roads. Hunters have been out for several days attempting to capture bruin, but he has thus far evaded all search for him. It is also reported that an animal answering the description of a panther has been seen and heard in different places. Two or three persons claim to have seen the bear several weeks ago, and now that there is snow upon the ground he will probably be captured.

AGRICULTURAL DEPARTMENT.

Care of Animals in Winter.

The American Humane Association offers the following suggestions relative to fowls, hogs and cattle to persons having these in charge, in the northern latitudes, during the winter months.

Do not compel domestic fowls to roost in trees. Aside from danger from being captured by owls and other enemies, the swaying of the branches upon which they are sitting will prevent them from getting rest; while in the severely cold weather, thus exposed, feet and combs are frozen and the bird is so benumbed as to make it impossible for it to be of much profit on the farm. Securely sheltered from wind and storm, and allowed to sit on a broad roost, feet are thus kept warm, refreshing rest is obtained and the fowl is much stronger, healthier and more profitable to its owner.

Do not clip horses during the winter months. With the same propriety we might cut the hair from a dog or shear a sheep at this season of the year. The argument in behalf of the practice is that the horse in prespiration will dry more quickly if the hair is short. If the animal is thoroughly blanketed and kept in a sheltered or warm place, after being driven, no danger results from prespiration, whatever the length of hair; while the horse that has been deprived of its coat in the winter time suffers perpetually while being exposed to the cold.

It is a cruelty inflicted upon beautiful carriage horses for the purpose of style. Blessed is the ordinary work horse in the winter time, for, however much it may perspire, it is allowed to carry its full growth of hair during the cold weather.

Do not leave cattle to stand shivering, while extremities often freeze, in the snow storms and severe winds of winter, when a little time would suffice to construct of boards, rails or poles, a support upon and around which may be placed hay, straw or weeds, thus making a shelter that may comfortably protect them. Cattle kept in fairly warm condition throughout the winter will, as milkers, give a larger and better yield of milk, and as beeves will take on flesh much more rapidly than if left exposed to inclement weather.

Aside from a question of humanity, the more attention and care that is bestowed upon animals, with a view to their comfort, the more will they be of service and a source of profit to their owners.

FACTS FOR FARMERS.

Creamery butter owes its superior quality largely to the system, observed in its making.

A shed of boards or straw over the bee hives is desirable now to keep off both sun and winds.

Many members of the Elmira, N. Y., farmers' club agree that burying apples is the best way to keep them. Besides, they are much improved in quality.

Farmers should bear in mind the fact that the grass which grows on dry, rich soil, with free sunlight warming it, is much more nutritious than that grown on land filled with stagnant water.

Why do not farmers more generally plant sweet corn for fall feed? The cattle like the rich, sweet stalks and will eat them clean up. When other corn is fed they generally leave the coarse portions of the stalks.

Give pigs a dry, cosy place to sleep and you will be haunted with a dozen or so less of those complaints that are so handily dubbed "cholera." In a state of nature the pig builds a nest of dry material, and, when a storm threatens, builds it higher to keep dry.

Experiments have shown that if corn is thoroughly dried in the fall and kept dry, it will endure the severest cold without injury to its vitality. So important is dryness to the safe-keeping of seed corn that one must secure that rather than warmth. Corn will stand when dry a heat of 206 degrees, but if not dry its germinative power will be injured at 120 degrees. So corn that is not free from moisture is liable to injury both by heat and cold.

Winter Transplanting.

Large trees may be transplanted with tolerable safety by removing a large ball of frozen earth with the roots. A trench may be dug around the tree two or three feet from the trunk, late in Autumn, sufficiently deep to sever all the larger horizontal roots. The hole for the reception of the tree should also be dug before the ground freezes; then in winter, at a time when the soil at the base of the tree is frozen solid, back the forward truck of a farm wagon against the trunk, lift the tongue erect and strap it firmly to the body. Then loosen the tree at the base by digging under it sufficiently to cut the tap-root. Attach a rope near the top of the trunk, and by the aid of a team the tree may be lifted from its bed, and laid prostrate, the heavy base resting across the axle of the truck. Then hitch the team to the rear of the truck, and the tree may be readily dragged to its place. As a thorough trimming will be necessary to counterbalance the loss of roots, it is a matter of economy to cut away a considerable part of the top before the removal.—[Our Country Home.

McClellan's Farewell to His Army.

Taking leave of the Army of the Potomac in November, 1883, General McClellan with his staff rode rapidly along the front of his army drawn up in line to greet their commander for the last time. As the brilliant group swept by, the regimental colors of the Fifteenth Massachusetts caught his attention. They had been out in many a shower of lead and had suffered especially at Antietam. Only a few rags fluttered from the shattered staff, which was patched with a band of tin rudely nailed on where it had been broken by a shot. No other color, in that part of the line, at least, was so badly torn. Riding rapidly, McClellan had passed the regiment before he could check his horse but then he wheeled, returned and halted, saluted the color, pathetic symbol of valor and sacrifice, by slowly raising his cap. The thunder of cheers that acknowledged this act of courtesy revealed one of the secrets of McClellan's popularity with his army.—[illegible]

[illegible]

Pig Pen or Pig Pastures.

An exchange says there is "too much pig pen and not enough pasture." Of this it is remarked that in the main it is true. The difference in the quality and flavor of pork made in the average filthy pig pen, from filthy food, and that made from sweet grasses and clover, out in the open and pure air, is so great that it would seem as though consumers would insist on using none but the last kind. Good, clean and sweet pork can be made in pens, however, as has been demonstrated on Missouri College Farm. The pigs in traveling about the pasture after their food will not get nearly as much out of the grass as they will if it is cut and fed to them in the pen. It may be said that this would cost too much labor. But if it is shown that the labor is more than paid for by increased profit, that will be all that can be asked.

As before remarked, the pigs make more gain out of the same quantity of food fed in the pen than when gathered in pasture. More food can be grown on a given area when cut and fed to the animals, than when they are allowed to feed it off themselves. The manure of pen-fed pigs is where it can be saved. That of the pasture pigs is largely lost. When it is desirable, as it is almost always, to feed grain or other food in addition to the grass, it can be better done in the pen than in the pasture. While we thus advocate feeding pigs in pens, it is only with the idea that the pens are to be roomy, clean and healthful. To put pigs into small and filthy pens is cruel, and a disgrace to humanity, and makes a quality of pork which has created merited prejudice against a healthful and palatable food.—[Our Country Home.

The Senate and Assembly

In the senate of 1886-7 the lawyers have sixteen representatives. There are also five merchants, four manufacturers, one compositor, one broker, one banker, and a senator who places himself "on the list," as a "politican." Thirteen members of the senate have seen previous service in that body, while nineteen have been members of the assembly. Nine have no legislative experienc whatever. Three of the senators were born in Ireland, and the remainder in this country, but of Irish, Scotch or German ancestry. The youngest senator is Edward F. Reily of the sixth district of New York. He is not yet thirty

Over 100 members of the present assembly were born in the United States, three were born in Scotland six in Ireland and two in Germany'. Of those born in this country some thirty are of Irish parentage, ten of German extraction, and sixty are native born citizens of the state of New York. Thirty-seven lawyers are in the lower house, together with twenty-two merchants, eight manufacturers, twenty-five farmers, seven clerks, five machanics, three journalists, six liquor dealers, one cigar dealer, one banker, two insurance agents, one surveyor, one steamboat captain and one traveling salesman.

Seventy-two members have had no previous ligislative experience. Fifty-six have previously served in the assembly.

The youngest member of the house is Norton Chase of Albany, who is in his twenty-fourth year. He is a lawyer. The oldest member is Dr. Isaac C. Edson of Broome, who has passed his sixty-second year.

Directions to Speakers.

1. Don't talk too much.
2. Don't talk unless you are posted.
3. Give the best you have.
4. Don't talk when people are asleep. Wake some one man and you will hold the rest.
5. Don't try to show off your learning.
6. Get hold of the most stupid man and you'll hold the rest.
7. Don't try, but don't be afraid to make people laugh. Milk that slops one way will the other.
8. Be natural, don't try to be some one else.
9. Avoid cant and pulpit tones.
10. Don't talk too long. A man in London who preached until the people all left, said he thought it was a pity to stop when there was anybody to listen.
11. Don't hesitate to repeat what God uses.
12. Don't keep on talking just because you are holding the audience. Send them away hungry.
13. While the people are gathering use the time with song.
14. Shoot where people stand. As the old Quaker said to the burglar: "Friend, I am going to shoot where thee stands. Thee had better get out of the way."
15. Don't gesture and move around too much, and don't talk with your hands in your pockets. [Address by Evangelist Moody.

Secretary of War, Endicott, says a New York World report er, does no look very warlike. He is a short, thickset figure, heavy gray moustache that entirely conceals his mouth, and long gray hair that is allowed to hang whither it listeth over his forehead. His eyes are blue, and have a very pleasant expression. While Mr. Endicott has a very peaceful appearance and dose not look as though he could be easily disturbed, his friends say he has quite a temper hidden beneath the exterior, and one would find it no easy matter to run over him.

DAIRYMEN GETTING RICH.

Progressive dairymen who are only satisfied with the best results, are adding to their wealth and conferring a benefit on society, by the rapid improvements they are making in the art of butter making. This class use Wells, Richardson & Co's. Improved Butter Color, and know by actual test that it fills every claim made for it.

Sick Headache.

There is a great difference between this and the ordinary headache, which passes off quickly. Sick headache is accompanied with nausea and other bad feelings, which show that the stomach and liver are out of order. It is pleasant and yet astonishing, to see how quickly Sick Headache yields to a dose of Herricks Liver Pills. Begin with the first symptoms of Sick Headache. These pills, being sugar coated, are delightful to take, even by the most delicate ladies. 35w3

WATCH

THE KIDNEYS.

They are the most important secretory organs. Into and through the Kidneys flow the waste fluids of the body, containing poisonous matter taken out of the system. If the Kidneys do not act properly this matter is retained, the whole system becomes disordered and the following symptoms will follow: Headache, weakness, pain in the small of back and loins, flushes of heat, chills, with disordered stomach and bowels. You can thoroughly protect the Kidneys by BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS, and when any of these symptoms manifest themselves you can quickly rid yourself of them by this best of all medicines for the Kidneys. BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS are sold everywhere at $1 per bottle, and one bottle will prove their efficacy.

Folded Hands.

Folded 'neath the waving grasses, on the starlit, westward hill,
Free from life and all its clamor, they are resting white and still;
Little hands that knew no labor, wrinkled hands that knew no rest,
Ere they drifted from the river to the haven of the blest.

Dimpled hands, like waxen lilies, folded with a baby grace,
'Mid the blossoms that were scattered o'er the little form and face;
And, mayhap, for some lone mourner who their gentle touch doth miss,
They are beckoning in their beauty to the portals bright with bliss.

Fair white hands, like snowy daisies, folded o'er a youthful heart,
Fairer far than sculptured marble or the fairest dream of art;
Oft, within the peopled pathway toiled they with a gladness gold,
But the toiling all is over, and they rest in silence cold.

Weary hands, like withered roses, folded o'er an aged breast,
And the hands that long have labored have at last found perfect rest;
Long they toiled with weary weaving while the storms around them raged,
'Till they wove the silv'ry colors woven only by the aged.

As I look from out my casement when the stars are all abright
O'er the silent sleeping city with its spires so tall and white,
Think I of the hands long folded in a strange and mystic spell,
And I would that some bright angel might to me their story tell.

Did they weave their web of living with a gold and silver thread
Till a Christly light from Heaven o'er the garment bright was shed?
Or in hues of somber blackness did they sit in sin apart
Weaving only from the fancy and the weakness of the heart?

Tell me, O! some white-winged angel if the story thou dost know;
But no answer breaks the silence o'er the weaving long ago.
So I ponder, half forgetting that full soon all white and still Shall my hands, like theirs, be folded on the starlit, westward hill.

THE DAMP STRAW OF THE CELL.

BY JEAN RICHEPIN.

He passed his first ten years of imprisonment without doing anything: just time to turn himself round, settle down and get into the ways of the place.

Then as he had still twenty years to serve out, he said to himself one fine morning that it was shameful to lead so lazy a life, and that he must find some occupation worthy—not of a free man, for he was a prisoner—but simply of a man.

He devoted a year to reflecting, to weighing the different ideas which passed through his head, and examining what should be the definitive object of his life.

To train a spider? That was very old, well known! Copy Pellison, peugh! flat plagiary!

To count on his fingers the wrinkles on the wall! What! that was a ridiculous and useless amusement; nothing worth while.

He said to himself: "I must find something which would be at once curious profitable and gratifying to my desire for vengeance, I must invent a task which will make the time pass, which will produce some benefit and which will have the value of a protest."

A fresh year was spent on this discovery, and finally success rewarded so much perseverance.

The prisoner lived in a veritable dungeon, where the sun entered only for half an hour a day, and then only by a thin line like a single hair of light. The wretched pallet on which the unfortunate man rested his cramped limbs was literally nothing but a heap of damp straw.

"Now then," he cried with energy, "I shall bother my jailors and bluff the law. I will dry my straw!"

He first of all counted the stalks that formed his bundle. There were one thousand, three hundred and seven. A poor bundle.

He next made an experiment to find out how much time it needed to dry one of the straws. It needed three-quarters of an hour.

This made then altogether, for the one thousand three hundred and seven straws, a sum of nine hundred and eighty hours and fifteen minutes; or—taking it at half an hour sunlight a day—nineteen hundred and sixty-one days.

Assuming that the sun shone, on an average, only one day in three, he arrived at a total of sixteen years, one month, one week and six days.

At the end of six months this was what remained for him to do.

He set to work then.

Every time that the sun shone the prisoner held one of the straws in the ray and thus utilized all his sunlight. The rest of the time he kept warm beneath his clothes what he had been able to dry.

Ten years passed away. The prisoner had now only a third of his damp bundle to sleep on, and had his chest stuffed with the other two-thirds which had gradually been dried.

Fifteen years passed. Oh! joy, only one hundred and thirty-six stalks of damp straw left! Four hundred and eight days more and the prisoner would be finally able to stand erect, proud of his work, victor over society and cry with the vengeful voice and satanic laughter of insurgents:

"Ha! ha! You condemned me to damp straw in your dungeon? Then [illegible] I lie on dry straw!"

Alas! cruel fate was waiting in ambush for its prey.

One night when the prisoner was dreaming of his future happiness, in his [illegible] he made furious gestures, [illegible] the pitcher and the water [illegible] all the straw was wetted.

[illegible] to be done now? Begin [illegible] lucky ones of the world, who give up a pleasure if you have to take twenty-five steps to get it, dare you throw the first stone at him?

But, you will say, he had only a year and a half to wait!

And do you reckon for nothing his wounded pride, his abortive hopes? What! this man shall have worked fifteen years in order to sleep on a bundle of dry straw, and then consent to leave his prison with bits of damp straw on his hair? Never! There is nothing between self-respect and lying down in the gutter.

Eight days and eight nights he debated in anguish, struggling with despair, trying to find a footing again in the annihilation which overwhelmed him.

He ended by surrendering and confessing himself vanquished. He had lost the battle.

One evening he fell on his knees, crushed, despairing.

"My God," he said with tears, "I ask thy forgiveness for being without courage to-day. I have suffered for thirty years. I have felt my limbs decay, my skin wither, my eyes wear away, my blood become pale, my hair and teeth fall out. I have fought against hunger, cold, solitude. I had one desire which sustained my efforts, I had one object in my life. Now my desire can not possibly be satisfied. Now my object has fled forever. Now I am dishonored. Pardon me for deserting my post, for leaving the battle, for running away like a coward. I can no more."

Then in a fit of indignation, he resumes:

—"No," he cried, "no, a thousand times, no! It shall not be said that I have lost my life for nothing. No; I am not conquered! No; I shall not desert! No; I am not a coward! No; I will not lie a minute longer on the damp straw of the dungeons. No; society shall not get the better of me!"

And the prisoner died during the night, vanquished like Brutus, grand as Cato.

He died of an heroic indigestion. He had eaten all his straw.

THE PROPER THING.

Some of the most elegant bonnets are now exceedingly plain.

The finest silk or cashmere garments are shown in tiny vests for infants.

Long fur boas are revived suddenly, and are seen in all the the dark long-fleeced furs.

Dresses with borders are made with collar, cuffs, revers and two back breadths of velvet.

The spring plushes will be in stripes, blocks, bars and figures of plush on canvas grounds.

The fancy at present is for colored under wear in pale shades of pink, blue, or flesh color.

Dog collars, collarettes, fichus, plastrons and looped scarfs are features in dress at the moment.

Ribbed under-vests of silk or wool or a mixture of both, are among the luxurious garments of winter.

The frames of the bonnets now most in favor are short and narrow in the back with very closely fitting fronts.

For evening dress, no matter what the occasion, gloves must reach the sleeve, or the shoulder strap if there is no sleeve.

A decided novelty for spring consists in open-work Scotch plaids, which are to be cut into bands and used for trimming plain wools.

Fur is largely used in millinery this winter; serving not only as trimming, but in some instances for the whole brim of the bonnet and for the entire crowns of round hats.

Among the promised novelties for spring are dress fabrics of etamine, with hard twisted wool cords about the size of a No. 8 cotton, making cross-bars about one-eighth of an inch apart. This fabric will be combined with plain etamine.

Worth has decreed that even the palest blonde may wear yellow, but brown is considered a fitting accompaniment for the Titian-colored haired in current vogue. Gray hair should always be brightened by pale blue and black by orange, crimson or scintillating jets.

An Anecdote of Robert Toombs.

In General Longstreet's account of "His March against Pope," in The Century War series, in the February number, occurs the following: "General Toombs, our Georgia fire-eater, was given to criticising pretty severely all the officers of the regular army who had joined with those of the Confederacy. He was hot-blooded and impatient, and chafed at the delays of the commanders in their preparations for battle. His general idea was that the troops went out to fight, and he thought that they should be allowed to go at it at once. An incident that occurred in the second Manassas campaign will serve to illustrate his characteristic hot-headedness. As we were preparing to cross the Rapidan, Stuart sent me word that he had cut off a large cavalry force and had all the fords guarded except one. He asked that I detail a force to guard that point of escape. The work was assigned to the command under General Toombs, who was absent at the time. He had met a kindred spirit in the person of a wealthy Virginian named Morton, whom he had known in Congress, and was out dining with him. They were both good livers and loved to have their friends with them. In going back to his command General Toombs came upon his troops on the road and inquired what they were doing there. The explanation was made. Toombs had had a good dinner and felt independent. He said he would give the general to understand that he must consult him before sending his troops out to guard a ford, and thereupon ordered them back to camp. As the mystified troops marched solemnly back, the matter was reported to me and I ordered Toombs under arrest. I allowed him to ride with his command as we marched against Pope and expected that he would make some explanation of his conduct. He did not do so, and the next I heard of him he was stopping along the route making stump speeches to his troops and referring in anything but complimentary terms to the commander of his division. I sent him back to Gordonsville, with instructions to confine himself to the limits of that town in arrest until further orders. He obeyed the command and went to Gordonsville. Just as I was leaving the Rappahannock I received a long letter of apology from him, and directed him to join his command. As we were preparing for the charge at Manassas, Toombs got there. He was riding rapidly, with his hat in his hand, and was much enthused. I was just sending a courier to his command with a dispatch.

"'Let me carry it!' he exclaimed.

"'With pleasure,' I responded, and handed him the paper.

"He put spurs to his horse and dashed off, accompanied by a courier. When he rode up and took command of his brigade there was wild enthusiasm, and everything being ready, an exultant shout was sent up, and the men sprang to the charge. I never had any more trouble with Toombs. We were ever afterwards warm personal friends."

Literary Note.

Bob Van Slyck is not only a dude, but he is also addicted to writing poetry. At a social gathering on Fifth Avenue he asked Miss Flora McFlimsy, of Madison Square, if she had read his last poem.

Society in the New South.

CHARLES DUDLEY WARNER.

The historian who writes the social life of the Southern States will be embarrassed with the romantic and picturesque material. Nowhere else in this levelling age will he find a community developing so much of the dramatic, so much splendor, and such pathetic contrasts in the highest social cultivation, as in the plantation and city life of South Carolina. Already in regarding it, it assumes an air of unreality, and vanishes in its strong lights and heavy shades like a dream of the chivalric age. An allusion to its character is suffcient for the purposes of this paper. Persons are still alive who saw the prodigal style of living and the reckless hospitality of the planters in those days, when in the Charleston and Sea Island mansions the guests constantly entertained were only outnumbered by the swarms of servants; when it was not incongruous and scarcely ostentatious that the courtly company, which had the fine and free manner of another age, should dine off gold and silver plate; and when all that wealth and luxury could suggest was lavished in a princely magnificence that was almost barbaric in its profusion. The young men were educated in England; the young women were reared like helpless princesses, with a servant for every want and whim; it was a day of elegant accomplishments and deferential manners, but the men gamed like Fox and drank like Sheridan, and the duel was the ordinary arbiter of any difference of opinion or of any point of honor. * * *

The agricultural life of Virginia appeals with scarcely less attraction to the imagination of the novelist. Mr. Thackeray caught the flavor of it in his Virginians from an actual study of it in the old houses, when it was becoming a faded memory. The vast estates—principalities in size—with troops of slaves attached to each plantation; the hospitality, less costly, but as free as that of South Carolina; the land in the hands of a few people; politics and society controlled by a small number of historic families, intermarried until all Virginians of a certain grade are related—all this forms a picture as feudal-like and foreign to this age as can be imagined. The writer recently read the will of a country gentleman of the last century in Virginia, which raises a distinct image of the landed aristocracy of the time. It devised his plantation of six thousand acres with its slaves attached, his plantation of eighteen hundred acres and slaves, his plantation of twelve hundred acres and slaves, with other farms and outlaying property; it mentioned all the cattle, sheep, and hogs, riding horses in stables, the racing steeds, the several coaches with the six horses that drew them (an acknowledgement of the wretched state of the roads,) and so on in all the details of a vast domain. All the slaves were called by name, all the farming implements were enumerated, and all the homely articles of furniture down to the beds and kitchen utensils. This whole structure of unique civilization is practically swept away now, and with it the peculiar social life it produced. Let us pause a moment upon a few details of it, as it had its highest development in Eastern Virginia.

The family was the fetich. In this high social caste estates were entailed to the limit of the law, for one generation, and this entail was commonly religiously renewed by the heir. It was not expected that a widow would remarry; as a rule she did not, and it was almost a matter of course that the will of the husband should make the enjoyment even of the entailed estate dependent on the non-marriage of the widow. These prohibitions upon her freedom of choice were not considered singular or cruel in a society whose chief gospel was the preservation of the family name.—[The New Princeton Review for Jan.

General Ignorance.

I notice some of the newspapers are making no end of fun of a Harvard graduate who could not tell who discovered America. Oh, well, my son, that is one of the things that you do not learn in college. I am like the Harvard graduate, I do not know who discovered America. If you know, or think you know a man who does know, I wish you would tell me. I would give some money to know just that much. I am also away down in the spelling class. I cannot spell Shakespear as Shakspere himself spelled it. I wish you would tell me the proper way of spelling that great man's name. I do not know why there are so many gray horses and no gray colts. I do not know whether the egg began with the hen or the hen started with the egg. I can't understand why we can't find the North Pole when we know right where it is. I don't know why a man wears buttons on the tail of his coat. I can't see what earthly use an elephant's tail is to him. I don't know why a matinee should come in the afternoon. I don't understand why people in town are always wild to go to the country and people in the country are crazy to come to town. Why don't they change places at once and be done with it? I do wish I could somewhere hear of a wise man who would devote a few hours every century to teaching me a few simple things that everybody ought to know, and that everybody except myself, seems to know already.—[Robert J. Burdette.

HARD TO BELIEVE.

It is hard to believe that a man was cured of a Kidney disease after his body was swollen as big as a barrel and he had been given up as incurable and lay at death's door. Yet such a cure was accomplished by Kidney-Wort in the person of M. M. Devereaux of Ionia, Mich., who says: "After thirteen of the best doctors in Detroit had given me up, I was cured by Kidney-Wort. EXCITEMENT UNABATED.

Proof that that Physician's Terrible Confession is True.

[Cleveland, O. Herald.]

Yesterday and the day before we copied into our columns from the Rochester, N. Y., Democrat and Chronicle, a remarkable statement made by J. B. Henion, M. D., a gentleman who is well known in this city. In that article Dr. Henion recounted a wonderful experience which befell him, and the next day we published from the same paper a second article, giving an account of the excitement in Rochester, and elsewhere, caused by Dr. Henion's statement. It is doubtful if any two articles were ever published which caused greater commotion both among professionals and laymen.

Since the publication of these articles, having been besieged with letters of inquiry, we sent a communication to Dr. Henion and also to H.H. Warner & Co., asking if any additional proof could be given, and here it is:

GENTLEMEN: I owe my life and present health wholly to the power of Warner's Safe Cure, which snatched me from the brink of the grave. It is not surprising that people should question the statement I made (which is true in every respect) for my recovery was as great a marvel to myself, as to my physicians and friends * * *

J. B. HENION, M. D.

ROCHESTER, N. Y. Jan. 21.

SIRS: The best proof we can give you that the statements made by Dr. Henion are entirely true, and would not have been published unless strictly so, is the following testimonial from the best citizens of Rochester, and a card published by Rev. Dr. Foote.

H. H. WARNER & Co.

To Whom it May Concern:

We are personally or by reputation acquainted with Dr. Henion, and we believe he would publish no statement not literally true. We are also personally or by reputation, well acquainted with H. H. Warner & Co., proprietors of Warner's Safe Cure, (by which Dr. Henion says he was cured) whose commercial and personal standing in this community are of the highest order, and we believe that they would not publish any statements which were not literally and strictly true in every particular.

HIRAM SIBLEY, (Capitalist and Seedsman.
JOHN VAN VOORHIS, (ex-Member of Congress.)

To the Editor of the Living Church Chicago, Ill.

There was published in the Rochester (N. Y.) Democrat and Chronicle of the 31st of December, a statement made by J. B. Henion, M. D., narrating how he had been cured of Bright's desease of the kidneys, almost in its last stages by the use of Warner's Safe Cure. I was referred to in that statement, as having recommended and urged Dr. Henion to try the remedy, which he did, and was cured. The statement of Dr. Henion is true, so far as it concerns myself, and I believe it to be true in all other respects. He was a parishioner of mine and I visited him in his sickness. I urged him to take the medicine and would do the same again to any one who was troubled with a disease of the kidneys and liver.

AFTER DIPHTHERIA.

Diphtheria is a terrible disease, requiring the greatest medical skill to effect a complete cure. Even when its power is broken, it clings to the patient with great persistency, and often leaves the system poisoned and prostrated. Just here Hood's Sarsaparilla does a vast amount of good, expelling impurities from the blood, giving it richness and vitality, while it renovates and strengthens the system.

Mrs. Louisa Lee Bayard, wife of Secretary Bayard, died at her residence at half-past eight o'clock Sunday morning of congestion of the brain, which was brought on by the shock of her daughter's sudden death two weeks ago. For the first week following that event she stood the strain and excitement quite well, but a week ago last Friday she was compelled to take her bed, and gradually grew worse from day to day. On Thursday congestion of the brain made its appearance. She was unconscious for 24 hours before her death. With the exception of her daughter, Mrs. Warren of Boston, and her son who is in Arizona, the family were present when she died.

The President was immediately notified of Mrs. Bayard's death, and he at once sent Col. Lamont with a note of condolence to the Secretary and later in the day Miss Cleveland called at the house.

Cabinet officers, Senators, Representatives, diplomats and public men generally called at the Bayard mansion to express their sympathy with the Secretary in his affliction. The President recalled invitations for the dinner to the Supreme Court which was announced for next Thursday night, and a number of social events which were to have taken place this week are postponed.

Mrs. Bayard was born in Baltimore in 1835. Her father, Josiah Lee, was one of the leading business men in that city 35 years ago. She met the Secretary while his father was Senator from Delaware, and they were married in 1856. There were twelve children born to them, seven of whom are still alive. Up to seven or eight years ago Mrs. Bayard was a leader of society at the National Capital.

Mrs. Bayard's remains were conveyed to Wilmington, Delaware, last Monday. They were entombed in the same spot where the remains of Miss Bayard rested two weeks ago.

The death of Mrs. Bayard has given a fresh impetus to the rumors plentifully circulated some time ago that the Secretary of State would choose an early opportunity to quit the Cabinet. It is an open secret that although stoutly supported in his acts by the President, Mr. Bayard has found the burdens of his office far in excess of its rewards and has retained it only to avoid embarrassing the administration. His double bereavement, besides having taken all the joy out of his daily life and making Washington distasteful to him as a dwelling place, operates of coarse to his exclusion from the social duties of his office. Although reluctant to assent to such a change, it is not probable that Mr. Cleveland would have the heart to oppose the Secretary's purpose, if his retirement should be placed on personal grounds.

On Friday last Hon. H. C. Howe introduced into the Assembly a bill providing that in cases where a town or ward line divides a farm or lot, the latter shall, if occupied, be assessed in the town where the occupant lives; if it is not occupied, each part must be assessed in the town or ward where it is situated. Another bill introduced by Mr. Howe which is intended to correct a serious abuse of the jury exemption law, has received commendation through the press. At present volunteer firemen who have served five years are exempt from jury duty on presentation in court of their certificate of discharge from such five year's service. Mr. Howe's amendment is to the effect that the certificates of discharge from the local fire duty should be filed with the county clerk, and after due notice to the persons exempt, their names shall be stricken from the role of eligible jurymen, unless they interpose objection to being barred out. Mr. Howe says Oswego county paid $2,000 to such jurymen in the Carpenter murder trial. The following bill was also introduced by Mr. Howe last Monday in regard to fixing the salaries of officers in Oswego county as follows: County judge $2,000; surrogate, $2,000; district attorney, $1,500; assistant district attorney, $500; and, clerk of the surrogate court, $500.

The resignation of Lord Salisbury, the refusal of Lord Hartington to form a new ministry and the return to power of Mr. Gladstone seems to have placed all the leaders of England in rather a peculiar position in this political crisis.

The Troy Times in an editorial Jan'y. 30, says: Queen Victoria has finally been subjected to the humiliation of being obliged to send for Mr. Gladstone, whom she cordially hates, on both personal and political grounds, for consultation in regard to the formation of a new ministry. Lord Salisbury evidently could see no hope in the policy of retaining office, dissolving parliament and appealing to the country in an election. Many of his supporters in the existing parliament were chosen through aid afforded by the Irish nationalists, and would probably lose their seats in the event of a dissolution, owing to the withdrawal of Mr. Parnell's favor. The tories and conservatives prefer to "stick," even though in a minority, rather than be left out in the cold altogether. Mr. Gladstone will have a task of no small magnitude on his hands in trying to run the government with the incongruous elements that went to make up the liberal majority which broke down the Salisbury administration. If he go too far in concessions to home-rule demands, a considerable number of moderate liberals will probably desert him and coalesce with the tories. If he fail to meet the demands of the Parnelites fully they are likely to turn against him. He will stand between two fires. But the poor old queen is in a still more unfortunate predicament. The Salisbury ministry suited her exactly, and she went to the trouble of making a show of herself in opening parliament, in the vain hope of rallying strength to it. Her disappointment and vexation must be extreme to find that the display of her sympathy was of no avail. But she has no recourse other than submission. British sovereigns are not of much account nowadays. They reign but do not rule. Although possessing nominal authority, they are subordinate to the will of parliament—or rather the house of commons—in all matters of government concern. For example, they are theoretically clothed with the veto power, but neither Queen Victoria nor any of her immediate predecessors on the throne has dared to attempt its exercise. The crown itself might be endangered by such a step, and no ministry would [illegible] anything of the sort.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our [illegible] Correspondent.)

Washington, Jan. 29th, 1886.—Eulogies on Vice President Hendricks, debates on the coming commonwealth of Dakota and the executive sessions have consumed most of the time in the [illegible] this week. An opportunity to do some much needed scolding was also taken advantage of by several aggrieved Senators. One of them lectured the Senate for adjourning over from Thursday to Monday, as has been its habit of late, when there was so much important business on hand. He supplemented his remarks with a resolution that hereafter the yeas and nays shall be called on motions to adjourn over a legislative day, thus putting the people's representatives squarely on record when they vote to waste time.

Another Senator scolded the engraving clerks of the House of Representatives for sending over to the Senate, bills made up of bad spelling. It was an offense, an insult to the latter august body that could not be forgiven. He congratulated the Senate upon the good spelling of its employes, and the affair was a kind of love-feast at the expense of the House.

The debate that has been inaugurated in the Senate over the admission of Dakota, promises to be long and interesting. The question has become a party one, and the bill will pass the Senate by the Republican vote. The Democrats count upon beating the bill in the House. They claim not to base their opposition upon a denial of the right of Dakota to statehood. They admit that in population, wealth, etc., the territory is entitled to become a state; but they assert that the people of Dakota have not complied with the legal preliminaries. It is probable a compromise will be proposed in the Senate looking to the admission of Montana, which is a Democratic territory, along with Dakota. One plan suggested is to admit Dakota, Montana and Washington Territories. Dakota is Republican, Montana Democratic, and Washington is doubtful politically.

The proceedings of the lower House of Congress so far this week, have not been marked by any legislation of importance, nor by any important debates. Routine business and petty wrangles have filled its record.

The demands upon the time of Congressmen made by their constituents are such that most of them are under the necessity of employing clerks. The duties of these clerks are, mainly, to look after pension and other claims. It is now proposed to employ 325 extra pension clerks, (there are just three hundred and twenty five members in the House) one to be assigned to the business of each Congressional district under the direction of the Representative of that district. Many members do not favor this plan, however, and prefer to deal with the matter in the old way.

A Congressman's lot is not a perfectly easy one, as will be seen by some samples of information they are expected to furnish their constituents. A Western member remarked, holding some freshly opened letters in his hand, "If there is anything in the world that my people do not write to Congressmen about, I would like to know what it is. Here is a letter from a citizen in my district, who requests me to write to the American minister at Rome to send him an Italian queen bee. Here is another from a woman whose husband left her seven years ago, and she has not heard from him since. She asks that I find out his present address at the census office and send it to her.

The question of abolishing secret session has again been up in the Senate, and again met with opposition. The opinion outside of the Senate is that very little business is transacted there in secret that might not as well be considered and acted upon in the presence of full galleries. A minor, but not a trivial consideration is the convenience that open executive sessions would to the thousands of people from all parts of the United States who come to Washington to see Congress. Hundreds of them at a time, aggregating hundreds of thousands in the course of a year, are hustled out of the Senate galleries every day because a Senator desires to stop legislative business in order that his friend Jones, perhaps, may be confirmed as postmaster at Jonesville. The people feel disappointed, of course, and Senators themselves acknowledge that there is a great deal of unnecessary interference with the comfort and convenience of visitors for very inadequate reasons. Business seldom comes up that could not be attended to before all the world without injury to public or private interests.

Several hundred almanacs are issued every year, but for the politician and public-spirited citizen the one issued by The Tribune is probably of the most value. A copy of the number for 1886 has just been received by us. The Tribune has given a great variety of information about gold and silver, the President's inaugural address, the popular vote for President since 1864, and the financial reports of the government. The figures are official and have been complied with great care. The statistics as to the general operations of the Government are elaborate. The almanac has the new postage rates, a list of the new Congress and its committees, showing the operations of the new tariff law. A great variety of political and statistical information is contained in this useful almanac. The price per copy is 30 cents.

A Terrible Plot.

One of the most diabolical plots ever planed to overthrow a government has just been discovered in Guatemala. It was a scheme to set fire to the Grand hotel and theatre when both were filled with people.

In the panic that would have ensued the conspirators intended to take possession of the barracks. President Barrillas and his family were to be murdered, all foreigners were to be attacked and [illegible] was to be sacked.

The plans of the conspirators were revealed in time to prevent what would have been a terrible calamity. Fifty [illegible] in the [illegible] are now [illegible].

Literary.

The New Princeton Review.

The first issue of the new Princeton Review is a substantial and admirably printed magazine of 15[illegible] pages, with a title and cover in keeping with the high character of its contents. A glance at the table of contents, makes it clear that this is distinctively a new departure in the field of higher periodical literature; the new Review recalls its predecessor, only to emphasize the the wider range of topics, the freedom from theological discussion, and its catholic spirit of scholarship which it will hereafter associate with the honored name of Princeton. The new Review is evidently the medium through which the best writers will be brought in contact with the best readers on all topics of scholarly and general interest; educated men in all departments of life, will find here dispassionate discussion of political, social, philosophical, literary, religious, and art questions; together with editorial summaries of the latest results of investigation and work, here and abroad, in these various fields. Nor will elements of popular interest be overlooked; the topics discussed will be, for the most part, of vital interest, and will be presented with the charm of the best literary form. The initial number of the New Princeton Review opens with an extremely thoughtful and interesting study of "Society in the New South," by Mr. Charles Dudley Warner; under the title "What an American Philosophy Should Be" Dr. McCosh surveys the field of contemporaneous philosophical work and indicates the directions in which philosophy may advance in this country; "The True Christian Conception of Property" is a clear and forcible discussion from a Christian standpoint of one of the most pressing questions of the day by the Rev. Dr. C. H. Parkhurst; Prof. C. A. Young states with characteristic definiteness and lucidity the Lunar Problems now Under Debate," dealing with his theme so broadly and with such clearness of style that no technical knowledge is necessary to follow his discussion; intelligent students of our politics will read with pleasure so thoughtful and dispassionate a paper as "The Political Situation;" Mr. John Bach McMaster, in his historical sketch of "A Free Press in the Middle Colonies," displays those qualities of patient research and picturesque description which came to light so effectively in his extended historical work now in course of publication; the first installment of " "Monsieur Motte," which appears anonymously, is a very vigorous piece of writing, and strikes a high level in a department which is a new departure in a review. One of the most valuable features of the New Princeton Review, is the editorial discussion of current events and movements under the title of "Criticisms, Notes and Reviews;" the scope of this condensed resume is indicated by such sub-titles as "The English Elections," "The English Protectionists," "Speculative Biology," The New Star," "The Drift Towards Universities," "Speculative Philosophy in Germany," "The Scientific Movement in German Philosophy."

The Review will be published six times a year. Terms: $3.00 a year in advance, postage free. A. C. Armstrong and Son, Publishers, 714 Broadway, New York.

The February Wide Awake is full of excellent short stories, all true ones, brilliant pictures, valuable articles and beautiful poems. The frontispiece, a picture in three scenes, by Taylor, illustrates a piece of musical verse, "The Nest in the Wind," by Mrs. Mary Bradley. A delightful Kentucky story follows, by Sally E. Young, entitled "The Eliotsdale Punishment." with a capital picture by Sol. Eytinge. Next in order comes a story of Indian times in New Hampshire, "How Daniel Abbott outwitted the Indians." "Saved by a Kite," by Edmund Collins, is a thrilling story of the Newfoundland coast. E. S. Brook's story this month is "Mr. Pepys' Valentine," in which figure two historic persons, Sir William Penn and Mr. Samuel Pepys. Mrs. Sherwood's "Royal Girls and Royal Courts" this time treats of "The Spanish Court," giving much interesting matter about the late King Alfonso, and a young sister of his, the Princess Pilar. Mrs. Fremont, in her "Souvenirs of My Time," writes of Louis Napoleon, both as Prince-President and Emperor. Nora Perry also has a very racy article, "Autograph Hunting and Autographs," giving some amusing experiences of her own, and some witty autograph verses of Whittier's and Mrs. A. D. T. Whitney's. There is a beautiful Ballad by Mrs. Harriet Prescott Spofford, "The Story of the Chevalier," with beautiful illustrations by Garrett. The three serial stories stories "A Girl and a Jewel," "Dilly and the Captain," and "A Midshipman at large," move on interestingly. There is, beside all this, a charming miscellany—poems by Clinton Scollard, Abigail Adams Foster, Harriet Trowbridge and Mary E. Wilkins, natural History articles about spiders and chameleons, literary papers about Milton and Hawthorne and Horace, directions how to make snow-shoes and calendars, besides Music and Puzzles.

Vick's Floral Guide for 1886, the pioneer seed annual of America, comes to us this year a real gem, not a dry list of hard botanical names, but over thirty pages of reading matter, among which are articles on roses, house plants, cheap greenhouses, onion culture, mushrooms, [illegible], young gardeners, and very interesting reading, followed by about [illegible] pages containing illustrations, descriptions and prices of seemingly everything the heart could desire in the line of seeds, plants, bulbs, potatoes, &c. It is a mystery how this firm can afford to publish, and really give away this beautiful work of nearly 200 pages of finest paper with hundreds of illustrations and two fine colored plates, all enclosed in an elegant cover. Anyone desiring seeds in this line cannot do better than send 10 cents for the Floral Guide, to James Vick, Seedsman, Rochester, N. Y. Deduct the 10 cents from first order sent for seeds.

Finances of the Empire State.

Comptroller Chapin's annual report was received in the legislature last week. The capital of the principal state funds is shown to be as follows: Common school, $3,880,657.30; United States deposit, $4,017,220.71; literature, $271,980.76; college land scrip, $174,407.12; sinking, $4,663,188.61. The rate of taxation is 2.96 mills, which will produce $9,160,405.11. The receipts from taxes on corporations were $1,673,879.09, being $238,871.79 from insurance companies, $1,032,460.70 from transportation companies, $125,339.54 from telegraph and telephone companies, $244,626.35 from gas, mining and miscellaneous companies and $32,574.71 from foreign banks and bankers.

At the close of the fiscal year, which was June 30th, 1885, there were on the pension rolls 2,945 survivors of the war of 1812, and 17,212 widows of American soldiers who served in that war. The war closed 71 years ago. These survivors must average at least 92 years of age. It is impossible to estimate the age of the widows.

STERLING, Ala. Jan. 30.—A great landslide took place on Thursday at Scraper Mountain, five miles from Sterling. About a mile of the mountain broke loose, and with a tremendous roar rushed to the valley below. About one-quarter of a mile of the slide went across the Cattago river, making a complete dam and causing the water to back a distance of several miles. About 7 o'clock the water broke around the slide and rushed with terrible force into its regular channel below. At the place where the slide left the mountain-side there is a perpendicular wall of about 300 feet, and about fifty feet from the top there is a great hole twenty feet in diameter, which is supposed to be an entrance to a cave. The slide is a wonderful sight, and hundreds of people come from all sections to view it. It is said the noise made by the sliding was heard a distance of ten miles, but there was no loss of life or property.

The Howe Ventilating Stove warms the room and keeps the air pure. It Ventilates the room at the same time that it heats it. Cold, fresh air is taken into the Stove through a pipe from the outside of the house. Fresh air passes into the Stove, is heated and passes into the room through the open top, while the foul, impure air being heavier than fresh, pure heated air drops dead to the floor, is forced into a flue in the Stove and is drawn through a small pipe in the smoke pipe into the chimney and escapes with the smoke.

Mrs. Louise Lee Bayard, wife of Secretary Bayard, died at her residence at half-past eight o'clock Sunday morning of congestion of the brain, which was brought on by the shock of her daughter's sudden death two weeks ago. For the first week following that event she stood the strain and excitement quite well, but a week ago last Friday she was compelled to take her bed, and gradually grew worse from day to day. On Thursday congestion of the brain made its appearance. She was unconscious for 24 hours before her death. With the exception of her daughter, Mrs. Warren of Boston, and her son who is in Arizona, the family were present when she died.

The President was immediately notified of Mrs. Bayard's death, and he at once sent Col. Lamont with a note of condolence to the Secretary and later in the day Miss Cleveland called at the house.

Cabinet officers, Senators, Representatives, diplomats and public men generally called at the Bayard mansion to express their sympathy with the Secretary in his affliction. The President recalled invitations for the dinner to the Supreme Court which was announced for next Thursday night, and a number of social events which were to have taken place this week are postponed.

Mrs. Bayard was born in Baltimore in 1835. Her father, Josiah Lee, was one of the leading business men in that city 35 years ago. She met the Secretary while his father was Senator from Delaware, and they were married in 1856. There were twelve children born to them, seven of whom are still alive. Up to seven or eight years ago Mrs. Bayard was a leader of society at the National Capital.

Mrs. Bayard's remains were conveyed to Wilmington, Delaware, last Monday. They were entombed in the same spot where the remains of Miss Bayard rested two weeks ago.

The death of Mrs. Bayard has given a fresh impetus to the rumors plentifully circulated some time ago that the Secretary of State would choose an early opportunity to quit the Cabinet. It is an open secret that although stoutly supported in his acts by the President, Mr. Bayard has found the burdens of his office far in excess of its rewards and has retained it only to avoid embarrassing the administration. His double bereavement, besides having taken all the joy out of his daily life and making Washington distasteful to him as a dwelling place, operates of coarse to his exclusion from the social duties of his office. Although reluctant to assent to such a change, it is not probable that Mr. Cleveland would have the heart to oppose the Secretary's purpose, if his retirement should be placed on personal grounds.

ON Friday last Hon. H. C. Howe introduced into the Assembly a bill providing that in cases where a town or ward line divides a farm or lot, the latter shall, if occupied, be assessed in the town where the occupant lives; if it is not occupied, each part must be assessed in the town or ward where it is situated. Another bill introduced by Mr. Howe which is intended to correct a serious abuse of the jury exemption law, has received commendation through the press. At present volunteer firemen who have served five years are exempt from jury duty on presentation in court of their certificate of discharge from such five year's service. Mr. Howe's amendment is to the effect that the certificates of discharge from the legal fire duty should be filed with the county clerk, and after due notice to the persons exempt, their names shall be stricken from the role of eligible jurymen, unless they interpose objection to being barred out. Mr. Howe says Oswego county paid $2,000 to such jurymen in the Carpenter murder trial. The following bill was also introduced by Mr. Howe last Monday in regard to fixing the salaries of officers in Oswego county as follows: County judge $2,000; surrogate, $2,000; district attorney, $1.500; assistant district attorney, $500; and, clerk of the surrogate court, $500.

THE resignation of Lord Salisbury, the refusal of Lord Hartington to form a new ministry and the return to power of Mr. Gladstone seems to have placed all the leaders of England in rather a peculiar position in this political crisis.

The Troy Times in an editorial Jan'y. 30, says: Queen Victoria has finally been subjected to the humiliation of being obliged to send for Mr. Gladstone, whom she cordially hates, on both personal and political grounds, for consultation in regard to the formation of a new ministry. Lord Salisbury evidently could see no hope in the policy of retaining office, dissolving parliament and appealing to the country in an election. Many of his supporters in the existing parliament were chosen through aid afforded by the Irish nationalists, and would probably lose their seats in the event of a dissolution, owing to the withdrawal of Mr. Parnell's favor. The tories and conservatives prefer to "stick," even though in a minority, rather than be left out in the cold altogether. Mr. Gladstone will have a task of no small magnitude on his hands in trying to run the government with the incongruous elements that went to make up the liberal majority which broke down the Salisbury administration. If he go too far in concessions to home-rule demands, a considerable number of moderate liberals will probably desert him and coalesce with the tories. If he fail to meet the demands of the Parnelites fully they are likely to turn against him. He will stand between two fires. But the poor old queen is in a still more unfortunate predicament. The Salisbury ministry suited her exactly, and she went to the trouble of making a show of herself in opening parliament, in the vain hope of rallying strength to it. Her disappointment and vexation must be extreme to find that the display of her sympathy was of no avail. But she has no recourse other than submission. British sovereigns are not of much account nowadays. They reign but do not rule. Although professing nominal authority, they are subordinate to the will of parliament—or rather the house of commons—in all matters of government concern. For example, they are theoretically clothed with the veto power, but neither Queen Victoria nor any of her immediate predecessors on the [illegible]

OSWEGO, Feb. 1.—Weed and Knickerbocker and A. K. Miller of the Syracuse Sunday Times went before Recorder Bulger to-day and gave bail in the sum of $500 each for the action of the grand jury on the charge of criminal libel preferred by H. B. Savage.

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 31.—The will of the late Kasper Auch was probated today. He left an estate valued at $900,-000. After bequeathing $38,000 to relatives and friends, he wills the balance to the several incorporated religious associations of New Orleans connected with the Presbyterian church, for the care of the poor of this city.

QUEBEC, Jan. 29.—John C. Eno, the New York bank embezzler, and his wife attended the annual ball of the Aurora snow-shoe club on Wednesday night. This is one of the social events of the season, the lieutenant governor and the ministers generally being present. Eno's wife fairly glittered with diamonds and was looked upon as one of the belles of the evening. The lieutenant governor did not attend, it is said, on account of the presence of Eno. The circumstance has caused no end of gossip, and several leading members of the club have resigned.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

[illegible] 1886. [illegible] eulogies [illegible] Hendricks, debates [illegible] Dakota [illegible] executive sessions have consumed [illegible] this week. An opportunity to do some much needed scolding was also taken advantage of by several aggrieved Senators. One of them lectured the Senate for adjourning over from Thursday to Monday, as has been its habit of late, when there was so much important business on hand. He supplemented his remarks with a resolution that hereafter the yeas and nays shall be called on motions to adjourn over a legislative day, thus putting the people's representatives squarely on record when they vote to waste time.

Another Senator scolded the engraving clerks of the House of Representatives for sending over to the Senate, bills made up of bad spelling. It was an offense, an insult to the latter august body that could not be forgiven. He congratulated the Senate upon the good spelling of its employes, and the affair was a kind of love-feast at the expense of the House.

The debate that has been inaugurated in the Senate over the admission of Dakota, promises to be long and interesting. The question has become a party one, and the bill will pass the Senate by the Republican vote. The Democrats count upon beating the bill in the House. They claim not to base their opposition upon a denial of the right of Dakota to statehood. They admit that in population, wealth, etc., the territory is entitled to become a state; but they assert that the people of Dakota have not complied with the legal preliminaries. It is probable a compromise will be proposed in the Senate looking to the admission of Montana, which is a Democratic territory, along with Dakota. One plan suggested is to admit Dakota, Montana and Washington Territories. Dakota is Republican, Montana Democratic, and Washington is doubtful politically.

The proceedings of the lower House of Congress so far this week, have not been marked by any legislation of importance, nor by any important debates. Routine business and petty wrangles have filled its record.

The demands upon the time of Congressmen made by their constituents are such that most of them are under the necessity of employing clerks. The duties of these clerks are, mainly, to look after pension and other claims. It is now proposed to employ 325 extra pension clerks, (there are just three hundred and twenty five members in the House) one to be assigned to the business of each Congressional district under the direction of the Representative of that district. Many members do not favor this plan, however, and prefer to deal with the matter in the old way.

A Congressman's lot is not a perfectly easy one, as will be seen by some samples of information they are expected to furnish their constituents. A Western member remarked, holding some freshly opened letters in his hand, "If there is anything in the world that my people do not write to Congressmen about, I would like to know what it is. Here is a letter from a citizen in my district, who requests me to write to the American minister at Rome to send him an Italian queen bee. Here is anotner from a woman whose husband left her seven years ago, and she has not heard from him since. She asks that I find out his present address at the census office and send it to her.

The question of abolishing secret session has again been up in the Senate, and again met with opposition. The opinion outside of the Senate is that very little business is transacted there in secret that might not as well be considered and acted upon in the presence of full galleries. A minor, but not a trivial consideration is the convenience that open executive sessions would to the thousands of people from all parts of the United States who come to Washington to see Congress. Hundreds of them at a time, aggregating hundreds of thousands in the course of a year, are hustled out of the Senate galleries every day because a Senator desires to stop legislative business in order that his friend Jones, perhaps, may be confirmed as postmaster at Jonesville. The people feel disappointed, of course, and Senators themselves acknowledge that there is a great deal of unnecessary interference with the comfort and convenience of visitors for very inadequate reasons. Business seldom comes up that could not be attended to before all the world without injury to public or private interests.

Several hundred almanacs are issued every year, but for the politician and public-spirited citizen the one issued by The Tribune is probably of the most value. A copy of the number for 1886 has just been received by us. The Tribune has given a great variety of information about gold and silver, the President's inaugural address, the popular vote for President since 1864, and the financial reports of the government. The figures are official and have been complied with great care. The statistics as to the general operations of the Government are elaborate. The almanac has the new postage rates, a list of the new Congress and its committees, showing the operations of the new tariff law. A great variety of political and statistical information is contained in this useful almanac. The price per copy is 30 cents.

The only reliable catarrh remedy on the market to-day is Ely's Cream Balm, being free from poisonous drugs and offensive odors. It has cured thousands of acute and chronic cases where all other remedies have failed. It quickly cures cold in the head and catarrhal headache. Price fifty cents. 39w4

A Terrible Plot.

One of the most diabolical plots ever planned to overthrow a government has just been discovered in Guatemala. It was a scheme to set fire to the Grand hotel and theatre when both were filled with people. [illegible]

Literary.

The New Princeton Review.

The first issue of the new Princeton Review is a substantial and admirably printed magazine of 15[illegible] pages, with a title and cover in keeping with the high character of its contents. A glance at the table of contents, makes it clear that this is distinctively a new departure in the field of higher periodical literature; the new Review recalls its predecessor, only to emphasize the the wider range of topics, the freedom from theological discussion, and its catholic spirit of scholarship which it will hereafter associate with the honored name of Princeton. The new Review is evidently the medium through which the best writers will be brought in contact with the best readers on all topics of scholarly and general interest; educated men in all departments of life, will find here dispassionate discussion of political, social, philosophical, literary, religious, and art questions; together with editorial summaries of the latest results of investigation and work, here and abroad, in these various fields. Nor will elements of popular interest be overlooked; the topics discussed will be, for the most part, of vital interest, and will be presented with the charm of the best literary form. The initial number of the New Princeton Review opens with an extremely thoughtful and interesting study of "Society in the New South," by Mr. Charles Dudley Warner; under the title "What an American Philosophy Should Be" Dr. McCosh surveys the field of contemporaneous philosophical work and indicates the directions in which philosophy may advance in this country; "The True Christian Conception of Property" is a clear and forcible discussion from a Christian standpoint of one of the most pressing questions of the day by the Rev. Dr. C. H. Parkhurst; Prof. C. A. Young states with characteristic definiteness and lucidity the Lunar Problems now Under Debate," dealing with his theme so broadly and with such clearness of style that no technical knowledge is necessary to follow his discussion; intelligent students of our politics will read with pleasure so thoughtful and dispassionate a paper as "The Political Situation;" Mr. John Bach McMaster, in his historical sketch of "A Free Press in the Middle Colonies," displays those qualities of patient research and picturesque description which came to light so effectively in his extended historical work now in course of publication; the first installment of " "Monsieur Motte," which appears anonymously, is a very vigorous piece of writing, and strikes a high level in a department which is a new departure in a review. One of the most valuable features of the New Princeton Review, is the editorial discussion of current events and movements under the title of "Criticisms, Notes and Reviews;" the scope of this condensed resume is indicated by such sub-titles as "The English Elections," "The English Protectionists," "Speculative Biology," The New Star," "The Drift Towards Universities," "Speculative Philosophy in Germany," "The Scientific Movement in German Philosophy."

The Review will be published six times a year. Terms: $3.00 a year in advance, postage free. A. C. Armstrong and Son, Publishers, 714 Broadway, New York.

The February Wide Awake is full of excellent short stories, all true ones, brilliant pictures, valuable articles and beautiful poems. The frontispiece, a picture in three scenes, by Taylor, illustrates a piece of musical verse, "The Nest in the Wind," by Mrs. Mary Bradley. A delightful Kentucky story follows, by Sally E. Young, entitled "The Eliotsdale Punishment." with a capital picture by Sol. Eytinge. Next in order comes a story of Indian times in New Hampshire, "How Daniel Abbott outwitted the Indians." "Saved by a Kite," by Edmund Collins, is a thrilling story of the Newfoundland coast. E. S. Brook's story this month is "Mr. Pepys' Valentine," in which figure two historic persons, Sir William Penn and Mr. Samuel Pepys. Mrs. Sherwood's "Royal Girls and Royal Courts" this time treats of "The Spanish Court," giving much interesting matter about the late King Alfonso, and a young sister of his, the Princess Pilar. Mrs. Fremont, in her "Souvenirs of My Time," writes of Louis Napoleon, both as Prince-President and Emperor. Nora Perry also has a very racy article, "Autograph Hunting and Autographs," giving some amusing experiences of her own, and some witty autograph verses of Whittier's and Mrs. A. D. T. Whitney's. There is a beautiful Ballad by Mrs. Harriet Prescott Spofford, "The Story of the Chevalier,' with beautiful illustrations, by Garrett. The three serial stories stories "A Girl and a Jewel," "Dilly and the Captain," and "A Midshipman at large," move on interestingly. There is, beside all this, a charming miscellany—poems by Clinton Scollard, Abigail Adams Foster, Harriet Trowbridge and Mary E. Wilkins, natural History articles about spiders and chameleons, literary papers about Milton and Hawthorne and Horace, directions how to make snow-shoes and calendars, besides Music and Puzzles.

Finances of the Empire State.

Comptroller Chapin's annual report was received in the legislature last week. The capital of the principal state funds is shown to be as follows: Common school, $3,880,657.39; United States deposit, $4,617,220.71; literature, $271,980,-76; college land scrip, $474,407.12; sinking, $4,663,188.61. The rate of taxation is 2.96 mills, which will produce $9,160,-405.11. The receipts from taxes on corporations were $1,673,879.09, being $238,-871.79 from insurance companies, $1,-032,466.70 from transportation companies, $125,339.54 from telegraph and telephone companies, $244,626.35 from gas, mining and miscellaneous companies and $32,574.71 from foreign banks and bankers.

At the close of the fiscal year, which was June 30th, 1885, there were on the pension rolls 2,945 survivors of the war of 1812, and 17,212 widows of American soldiers who served in that war. The war closed 71 years ago. These survivors must average at least 92 years of age. It is impossible to estimate the age of the widows.

STERLING, Ala. San. 30.—A great landslide took place on Thursday at Scraper Mountain, five miles from Sterling. About a mile of the mountain broke loose, and with a tremendous roar rushed to the valley below. About one-quarter of a mile of the slide went across the Cattago river, making a complete dam and causing the water to back a distance of several miles. About 7 o'clock the water broke around the slide and rushed with terrible force into its regular channel below. At the place where the slide left the mountain-side there is a perpendicular wall of about 300 feet, and about fifty feet from the top there is a great hole twenty feet in diameter, which is supposed to be an entrance to a cave. The slide is a wonderful sight, and hundreds of people come from all sections to view it. It is said the noise made by the sliding was heard a distance of ten miles, but there was no loss of life or property.

A PERFECT VENTILATOR.

☞A good Base Burner of any kind will heat a room, but it also destroys and burns up the life principle of the air. Foul air if hot will not keep a person warm. The Howe Ventilating Stove warms the room and keeps the air pure. It Ventilates the room at the same time that it heats it. Cold, fresh air is taken into the Stove through a pipe from the outside of the house. Fresh air passes into the Stove, is heated and passes into the room through the open top, while the foul, impure air being heavier than fresh, pure heated air drops dead to the floor, is forced into a flue in the Stove and is drawn through a small pipe in the smoke pipe into the chimney and escapes with the smoke.

STATE AND VICINITY

E. H. Darmaul's large dry goods and carpet store in Elmira was burned on Friday. The loss on goods is $40,000 and on building 8,000.

The New York State inter-collegiate base-ball association met at Syracuse on Friday and awarded the pennant for last year's games to Cornell university.

The Schaefer-Vignaux billiard match which terminated in New York city last Saturday night Schaefer was violorious with a total of 8,000 points. Vignaux made 2,888 points.

Seymour Strader, aged 22 years, a fireman on the Lackawanna railroad was killed by falling between the cars at Mount Morris last Sunday morning. He had been married but six months.

The Brooklyn city railroad company on Friday reduced the hours of conductors and drivers to twelve hours per day and fixed wages uniformly at two dollars per day, with 16⅔ cents per hour for overtime.

About $200 was raised in Oswego for the benefit of the Grant Monument fund all of which was raised by subscription. The sum realized by the sale of tickets to Gen. Sheridan's lecture was barely sufficient to pay expenses.

The trustees of Syracuse University report that the productive funds of the institution has been increased during the year $75,685. $25,000 was recently given to the college by a friend who refused to have his name made public. There are now in the university 391 students, three more than at any previous time.

Henry J. Mowry of Syracuse shipped to Washington Saturday the seal-brown coach horse recently purchased by him for President Cleveland. The car in which the horse was shipped was carefully padded and was attached to the day express. Mr. Mowry also purchased for the President the coach team used by him in Washington.

Special arrangements have been made by the medical profession of Albany for the eighteenth annual meeting of the State medical society which is being held in Albany this week. Papers will be presented by Drs. Lawson Tait, of Birmingham, England; C. R. Agnew, F. N. Otis, A. Jacobi, Arthur M. Jacobus and others, of New York; J. C. Shaw and Walter B. Chase, of Brooklyn, W. W. Potter, H. R. Hopkins, Lucien Howe, F. S. Crego and W. F. Hinkel, of Buffalo; ex-President C. F. Sherman, of Ogdensburg; J. A. S. Grant, of Carlo[illegible]; John O. [illegible] Smith, [illegible], who moved his family from Oswego to Cleveland a few years ago murdered his wife and her companion [illegible] Wilson, on Friday night, and then attempted suicide by cutting his own throat. Mrs. Smith was a clairvoyant. She was thirty-five years old. The pair had two children, a girl of sixteen years and a boy of ten years. Smith was a worthless fellow and has compelled his wife to support him. Lately he has been very brutal, it is said, and his wife on Friday applied for a divorce. During the night or early in the morning he entered the room by means of a window and killed the women by beating them over the head with a carpenter's hammer.

Smith was born in Texas, this county, where he married his wife. He served in "B" company, Twelfth New York cavalry, Capt. Simeon Church. His wife practiced clairvoyancy while they lived here. Smith's father, two sisters and a brother live at Parish, this county. He also had a brother living in Oswego and one in an adjoining town. His wife lived near Texas. Her father was drowned in 1863, while fishing. Both are well connected. Mrs. Smith's maiden name was Althadine Fisk.

A later dispatch from Cleveland says that Smith has so far recovered from his wounds that the physician at the hospital thinks he will be able to be out in a few days. Smith sullenly refuses to give any reason for his act, but jealousy is generally accepted as being the prime factor in urging him to commit the horrible deed. The charge that he was a drinking man, and was drunk when he committed the murder, is refuted, both by himself and those that knew him. His victims are now lying at the morgue, where an inquest is to be held. They present a sickening sight, and the verdict of the coroner's jury can be easily anticipated.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Lucy M. Howard, wife of William B. Howard, died at her home in this town last Thursday after a long and painful illness, aged 47 years. Mrs. Howard was a member of the Congregational church at Bristol Hill, and during her long illness has borne her sufferings with a patient resignation, longing for her release. Her disease was of a peculiar kind being a throat difficulty complicated with lung disease, and for many months she was unable to take any nourishment but liquids. For a number of weeks she has been very low, her death being expected almost any moment. Funeral services were held Sunday from her late residence. The remains were interred in Mt. Adnah.

William A. Rude, of Lower Oswego Falls, died at his home in that village Monday, of consumption, aged 25 years. He was a young man of sterling integrity and was honored and respected by all who knew him. His affable and genial ways had won for him many friends, who will be pained to learn of his untimely demise. Funeral services were held this afternoon at 2 o'clock from the M. E. church, Rev. W. F. Markham officiating.

Marital.

The following item, clipped from the Albany Journal of January 28, will be of interest to our readers, concerning as it does a former well-known Fulton boy:

Miss Almer Margureite La Rose, daughter of Mr. Anthime F. La Rose, and Mr. C. James Tyler Lusk were married last evening at the residence of Mr. La Rose, on Madison place. The bride wore a robe of white satin, en train with duchess lace trimming, duchess lace shawl and diamond ornaments, and was attended by Miss Grace Maud La Rose, her sister, and Miss Cornelia Whitaker Lusk of Fulton. The best man was Mr. A. W. La Rose, and the ushers, Messrs. Charles La Rose, D. W. Hamil, Edward Comestock and Fred Sterry. The floral decorations of the parlors were profuse and artistic. In the back parlor a large floral bell was suspended, beneath which the Rev. Dr. J. Livingston Reese performed the ceremony. A bountiful supper was furnished by caterer Clark. The wedding trip will be quite extended, east and west.

Muggs Landing.

The seats for Muggs Landing which is to be presented at the opera house next Friday evening are selling very rapidly at Watson's, and the indications are that the house will be filled to overflowing. A Baltimore paper of recent date says it is a play of exceptional strength, and Miss Frances Bishop's impersonation of of the leading role is one of the most delightful pieces of acting imaginable. As occasion and propriety require, Miss Bishop is vivacious almost to hilarity, and in emotional parts she is full of pathos and feeling in her voice and expression, a peculiar commingling of the meritorious characteristics of Clara Morris, Lotta and Mitchell. She will no doubt develop into an artist of the Clara Morris or Mary Anderson school.

Failure at Phœnix.

Charles P. Kimball, grocer and general store-keeper at Phœnix, has made a general assignment to J. Charles Meldram, of the law firm of James & Meldram of Syracuse. The Syracuse creditors preferred are C. E. Crouse & Co., $359.95 in schedule A. In schedule C, Ackerman & Skinner, $579.77; D. McCarthy & Sons, $348.92; G. N. Crouse, $546.52; C. A. Peters $480; George Young, $54.42; Thompson & Byington, $52.75; S. P. Pierce & Sons, $181.42; Charles J. Johnson, $80.89; Smith & Clark, $54; John P. Heir, $55.55, and Richard H. Palmer, $23.70. The total indebtedness is about $6,800. The class in schedule C will realize about fifty cents on the dollar. The main cause of the trouble was the indebtedness of the Syracuse Oil Stone company to him, which burned out some time ago and has been unable to pay its indebtedness. The assignment papers were filed in the office of the county clerk of Oswego county Monday.

A house on Sixth street now occupied by J. Fairbanks caught fire yesterday morning from the overturning of a lamp. The flames were extinguished before much damage was done.

The water on the flats has so far receded as to enable S. C. North to partially resume operations at the gas house. The opera house will be lighted with gas Friday night for the first time in several weeks.

For several days past James Wilcox has had hanging in his market on Cayuga street, one of the largest hogs ever brought to Fulton. It is of the Yorkshire breed, nineteen months old and weighed 820 pounds dressed.

Mr. W. D. Wells has brought to our notice the prospectus of The Silver Springs Park Florida Land Co., in which he is somewhat interested. It is Mr. Wells intention to visit Florida soon with his wife.

Bishop's Muggs' Landing Company has been greeted with full houses in all the large Western cities having played one and two weeks each in Chicago, St Louis, Cincinnati, Detroit, Cleveland and other cities. Prices there one dollar, reduced here—best seats only 50 cents.

Invitations are out for another party to be given at the Palermo Centre house on February 22d—Washington's birthday—to which old and young are cordially invited to attend.

The committee of arrangements are S. L. Remington, C. E. Sampson, A. J. Bonnett, M. C. Wells and John Kennedy. Floor Manager, E. T. Babcock; music by Bogue's band; tickets $1.50. Mr. Hannan always gives a first class party and we are positive that this one will be no exception.

Jay Lynch of Constantia Center, was found dead Monday in the woods, where he had been at work. He was last seen alive going into the woods on the morning of Jan. 22. It is thought that a tree fell on him striking his head, fracturing the skull. He had evidently been dead some time, as he was nearly covered with snow. From the fact that his face was badly swollen it seems that he must have lived some time after the accident. Lynch had a wife living at New York Mills. He was of unsound mind and had been in the Utica asylum. Coroner Potter was notified and an inquest was held. A verdict was rendered in accordance with the foregoing facts.

The Postoffice Change.

It is expected that Mr. Samuel B. Whitaker will take possession of the postoffice shortly, as his appointment has been confirmed and nothing is now awaited but the necessary papers authorizing him to assume the duties of the position to which he has been appointed.

Mr. N. H. Gilbert, the retiring postmaster, has held the position during the past four years, and has given universal satisfaction.

During his incumbency he employed none but able and courteous assistants. The capacity of the office has been increased by the addition of boxes which was an important and extremely gratifying item to the people of this village and without compensation the office has been kept open on Sunday mornings.

Mr. Gilbert, by the regularity and businesslike manner in which he has performed his official duties has made a host of friends and THE TIMES wishes him all the success that he may desire in his new enterprises.

A Divorce Case.

Oswego people are considerably interested in a divorce suit that is being tried in Youngstown, Ohio. The plaintiff is Mrs. Grace D. Lane, twenty-three years old, and a handsome brunette, who is a student at the Normal school in Oswego. The defendant is W. R. Lane, and she was married to him, according to her testimony on May 8th, 1883, at her home in San Francisco. The plaintiff alleges extreme cruelty on the part of the defendant. At one time it is said, he threatened to kill her and drew a revolver from under his pillow. Mrs. Lane began attending school at the Normal in October last. She has also attended schools in San Francisco, Montreal, and Burlington, Vt.

Indicted for Perjury.

In the trial of Murtaugh Murphy of this village for highway robbery, which occurred recently in Oswego, Andrew Dwyer, a brother of James Dwyer, one of the principals in the affair, testified that his brother James was at home and in bed at the time of the alleged robbery. On this evidence the case was brought to the notice of the grand jury, and as a result Andrew Dwyer was indicted for perjury. He was taken to Oswego on a bench warrant and gave bail in the sum of $1,000.

The Mechanical Fair.

The Mechanical Fair which is being held in Oswego under the auspices of the citizen's corps proved such a success last week that, at the request of many citizins, it was decided to continue it for three evenings of this week ending to-night. A new and elegant Davis sewing maching will be given away this evening to the person holding the lucky number. Quite a number of Fultonians have attended the fair, all of whom pronounce it to be a great success.

A Cohoes Boy Cured by Being Smothered to Death.

COHOES, Feb. 2.—George Waterhouse, a boy 14 years of age, residing on Watervliet avenue, six years ago was bitten by a dog in Lansingburg. For the past week the boy has shown signs of hydrophobia. His condition became alarming and Dr. McLean of Troy, was called and administered all the medicines usually used in such cases, but to-night it was deemed advisable to smother him.

Unclaimed Letters.

The following letters remain uncalled for in the post office at Fulton, Oswego county, N. Y. on February 3d, 1886:

Warren H. Althouse, Miss Jennie Brooks, Mr. Budlong, Mrs. M. L. Clark, Box 571, Mr. Smith T. Congden, Mr. James Courey, John Cryan, Chas. L. Dunning, Ada M. Keeler, Earnest Mahannah, Mrs. Annie Nickett, J. F. North, J. Rigley, Miss Agnes Robinson, Chas. Taylor, Mrs. Fred Wilson.

Persons calling for the above please say 'advertised.'

N. H. GILBERT, Postmaster.

Let the Battle Proceed.

I aim to reach the young and growing element in Fulton and vicinity. The older heads have passed the boundary of business ambition and seemingly have forgotten they were once boys and girls. So far as I am interested in affairs, my experience shows me that we have little or nothing to gain by catering to persons who won't like us anyway. Therefore, I aim to gain the good will of the young people. For example:

1st. I sell a full set of silver plated violin strings for 15c. I warrant these to be superior to the strings others ask 75c. for. This will be a direct saving of 400 per cent.

2d. I sell a handsome well made ebony-trimmed violin, fine toned, with nice bow, piece of rosin, extra set of good strings and a brass-trimmed, flannel lined violin trunk (or case) for $735. These goods have been sold in town for $20 and I know it. How is this, neighbors?

3d. I will give a fine violin to any young man who will purchase of me a sufficient supply of strings, a trunk, a bow, and a book. I can supply all you require for $3 and will actually give you a beautiful fiddle, free. Look here! I pay cash for my stock and don't you fail to remember it.

[illegible] up [illegible] street on a run. [illegible] of Howard's milk sleigh struck Post's [illegible] into [illegible] for a few moments, a sadly mixed up mess of Post's horses, [illegible]. The team finally worked themselves out of the heap and went on about a mile, where they were captured. Post eventually extricated himself from the demoralized pile, and after wondering if the cyclone had struck anybody else, in a dazed sort of a way began to take an inventory of stock on hand of which he had all that stuck to the cans. The only serious damage sustained in the fracas was the loss of the milk.

In the afternoon, as Dwight Edo another milkman, was going his rounds, he left his team in the road near the Division street crossing, while he delivered some milk to a customer near by. While he was gone the 2 o'clock R. W. & O. train from Syracuse came along and frightened the horses, causing them to run toward the track, and turn into the road running parallel with, and close by the track. The engine soon struck [illegible] and [illegible] injuring [illegible] the other. [illegible] load [illegible] cans [illegible] was badly demolished.

The Present Condition of the Flats.

The Flats are in about the same condition that they were two weeks ago and not before spring, when the river becomes cleared of ice, can it be expected that this part of our village will assume its former appearance of activity and the people return in safety to their homes.

The [illegible] flooded region presents a woe-begone appearance, chairs, couches, bed-steads and other household articles that were left in the houses at the time of the flood, still remain there, embedded in the solid masses of ice. Ice two or three feet thick is clogged up against the lamp-posts and fences, leaving only the tops exposed, while a few of the houses, which have been knocked from their foundations, look as though they were ready to float down the river when the ice moves away.

The parties interested, by constant cutting and blasting have made a channel between forty and fifty feet wide and nearly a mile long through the middle of the river. This has assisted in lowering the water, it being at the present time about four feet lower than it was when at its highest point, but at anytime the force of the current or a thaw is liable to detach vast cakes of ice from the edges of the channel or from the banks above, choke up the channel and again cause the water to rise rapidly as it did on Saturday last.

If this ice gorge has been due to the Battle Island dam, as many suppose, or to any other than natural causes it is to be hoped that some steps can be taken to exclude the possibility of another flood occurring from the same cause and doing the great damage that it has this winter to manufacturing interests and property.

THE EDITOR.

A Very Easy Business.

Editing a newspaper is a very nice business, says a contemporary, and those who know nothing about it consider it a very easy business. If we publish jokes people say we are rattleheaded, and if we omit jokes, we are an old fossil. If we publish original matter, they blame us for not giving selections, and if we publish selections, folks say we are lazy for not writing something they had not read in some other paper. Ignorant of what good editing is, people imagine the getting up of selected matter to be the easiest thing in the world to do, when it is really the nicest work on a paper. If they find the editor with scissors in hand, they're sure to say, "Eh, that's the way they get up original matter, eh?" accompanying their new and witty questions with an idiotic wink or smile.

The facts are, that the interest, the morality, the variety, and usefulness of a paper depend in no small degree upon its selected matter, and a few men are capable of the position who would not be able to write many of the articles they select. A sensible editor desires considerable selected matter, because he knows that one mind cannot make as good a paper as five or six. If we give a man a complimentary notice, we are censured for being partial, and if we fail to give complimentary notices, we are informed that we are a hog.

If we insert articles that please the ladies the men are jealous, and if we do not cater to the wishes of the ladies the paper, in the one's opinion, is not fit to make a bustle of. If we remain in our office and attend to our business, folks say we are too proud to mingle with our fellows, but if we go out they say we never attend to our business. If we wear old clothes it is insinuated that business is bad, and if we wear good ones they say we are extravagant.

A newspaper and a newspaper editor that people don't talk about are sometimes above, are rather poor concerns. The men and business that an editor [illegible] at the risk of making enemies of another [illegible] gratitude. A fracas occurred last night at Tyler's hotel on First street, between the bartender and Will Murty, in which the latter had his head cut open. He was assisted to his home in a rather demoralized condition. No arrests have been made as yet.

Dudley M. Irwin of Oswego, nephew of L. T. Miller of this village, was a passenger on board the steamship Servia, of the Cunard line, which sailed from New York last Saturday. He will be absent several months visiting cities and places of interest in Europe.

This evening at 8 o'clock occurs the wedding of J. E. Cary of Cortland and Miss Hattie Rector of this village. The ceremony will take place at the home of the lady's parents on Ontario street. Rev. W. F. Markham will officiate. They will leave at once for Cortland, their future home.

The bear, according to his time honored custom, made his appearance yesterday with a view to prognosticating the weather. The one that came out near North Hannibal, was remorselessly set upon by all the fighting population armed with guns, pitchforks, etc., aided by dogs and before he had time to see his shadow was captured and killed. The people of that section are consequently in a terrible state of uncertainty as to what the weather will be for the next six weeks.

VICINITY NOTES.

Oswego Falls.

A birthday surprise party was given to Mrs. E. M. Baker late last Wednesday evening.

Mr. Parker has started a new barber shop on Broadway between 3d and 4th streets.

Water has been taken from the main pipe into the blocks of B. R. Howe, A. B. Fletcher and E. M. Baker.

Editor Bradt of the Observer, who has been quite sick during the past week with the jaundice is slowly recovering.

Dr. Frank Marsh and wife started last Monday for Albany to attend the State Medical Society which is being held this week.

James Ellis formally of this village, but late of Providence, R. I., has returned, to his old position as "over looker" in the factory.

Arthur North, late of this village and at one time employed by the Oswego Falls Manufacturing company as boss in the finishing department, has been appointed assistant superintendent in a manufacturing concern in Philadelphia, Pa.

Broadway street in Oswego Falls looks more like an oil well territory than a thoroughfare. A ditch from eighteen to twenty-five feet deep and twenty feet across the top is being dug through to the lake. With thirty or forty men at work it takes two days to remove enough earth to allow the men to lay a length of pipe twelve feet long. The bottom of the ditch is a mass of quicksand and water. It is necessary, in order to keep the ditch free from water, to keep men bailing and pumping day and night. A pile of dirt a quarter of a mile long and from ten to twenty-five feet high adorns the street. The street has been nearly impassible most of the winter.—Fulton Correspondent Syracuse Herald.

Parish.

A number of hard maple logs are being collected at our station to be shipped to England.

This week our school had its half term examination. It was thorough and showed great progress.

A Juvenile Temple was organized here Thursday named "The Golden Star," with 25 members. Mrs. D. L. Rider is Superintendent.

F. H. Dakin has sold his undertaking and part of his cabinet wares to "Pat" Edick. He intends soon to remove to New Berlin, Chenango county.

Rev. O. C. Lathrop has sold his farm east of this village, where he has lived for many years to Wm. E. Taylor. During the present year Mr. Lathrop will occupy Mr. Taylor's house on Fourth street.

Homer Jocelyn of the mercantile firm of Edick and Jocelyn of this place died Friday aged 48 years. Mr. Jocelyn has been a sufferer by disease about two years and for the past year has been unable to attend to business. He had numerous friends.

The vital statistics of Parish shows that there has been 20 deaths. 10 males and 10 females. Only one death under 10 years of age. 5 deaths occured in March, 1 in April, 3 in May, 2 in June, 3 in July, 1 in August, 1 in September, 8 in November, 1 in December. There were 12 deaths of over 60 years of age. The average duration of these lives were 63 years 6 months and 18 days, which is 18 years more than the average in the world. There was only one accidental death.

Palermo.

Mrs. O. P. Jennings is on the sick list. Dr. Loomis is attending her.

J. W. Rigley and Miss Frankie Wood of Oswego Falls were in town on Sunday.

E. Ure and son have rented their grist mill for the coming year to a man in Mexico.

William Ingersoll went on Friday to Syracuse to work for Moyer in a wagon factory.

A sleigh load of young people of Palermo went to Oswego Falls and made Mr. and Mrs. S. P. Wood a surprise. They were well entertained and had a fine time.

The donation at the Palermo Centre house for the benefit of Rev. B. DeForest Snyder on Friday evening was well attended and he received sixty-five Dollars after paying expenses.

The school at Palermo Centre will close this week. Lee Remington the teacher, has made many friends while here and has taught a good school. He can be called a number one teacher.

Geo. M. Tooley and Mrs. Emily Klock were married at Gilberts Mills on Wednesday last by the Rev. B. DeForest Snyder. On their arrival home they were treated to an old fashioned horning. Mr. Tooley was expecting it and had the cigars and cider ready for the boys.

Gilberts Mills.

Mr. Homer Willard is very sick.

Mr. Harvey Carrier is in quite poor health. He is over 85 years old.

Mr. A. T. Mason of Phœnix spent Sunday here with his father. His wife and son are visiting at Constantia.

Mr. A. T. Mason is suffering from rheumatism.

Mrs. George Kelly is visiting Mrs. H. C. Beals of Fulton.

The funeral of Mr. Ruben Smith was largely attended at the Baptist church last Friday. An impressive sermon was delivered by the Rev. B. D. Snyder. The remains were interred in Pennellville cemetery. Mr. Smith leaves a wife and mother who have the sympathy of all their neighbors in their great bereavement.

South Granby.

SOUTH GRANBY, Jan.—A series of meetings are being held at the school house in this place, conducted by Truman Showers of South Hannibal.

A social dance was held at Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Lewis' last Friday night. About 70 were present and a good enjoyable time was had.

Mrs. Orrin Hall of Fulton has been visiting several days with friends here.

We have a ticket office now at this station, and Harlow [illegible] is the agent. [illegible]

Italy supplies England with about 50,000,000 eggs annually. The average price received by the Italians is about 9 cents per dozen.

There is danger in feeding corn stalks cut in inch pieces, especially in cold weather. They freeze dry, and the points are as sharp almost as wood.

The total amount of wheat raised last season in all the wheat producing contries of the world is estimated at from 1.927,000,000 to 1,969,200,000 bushels.

Farmers, who have a few hams to cure for home consumption, will find dry corn cobs among the best materials that can be obtained for furnishing the smoke.

California probably beats the world in the size of its potatoes. Two of the pink eye variety grown there last season weighed respectively 18½ and 10½ pounds. About five such tubers would fill the requirements of a legal bushel.

See that poultry is free from vermin when put up for winter. A thorough washing of all the parts of the henhouse will accomplish this, as the fowls will clean themselves if allowed a dust-bath. It is the vermin on fowls more than any other cause which prevents fall and early spring laying.

Never be tempted to put coarse manure close around young trees in the supposition that such material might be useful as mulch and for winter protection. Mice will congregate there and certainly girdle the trees.

Fowls will do very well in winter if fed only twice a day, but the last feeding should be late and of whole grain that it may not be digested too easily or quickly. No soft food should be given at night, during cold weather.

Apples and other fruits, says the Cultivator, should be gathered and saved, however low the price, since they are at least worth gathering for their feeding value. If left on the ground they are positively injurious, the acid of the fruit poisoning the soil and destroying all vegetation beneath them. A dressing of lime will correct the acidity and restore fertility.

One of the chief conditions to success in caring for horses and cattle is "regularity in feeding and watering. Another is to learn just the amount that each animal can digest and assimilate. It is better to keep stock a little short, so that their appetites may be keen, than to over feed so as to cloy them. No more should be given at once than will be eaten up clean. When the hay is of good quality three fodderings a day probably answers as well as more."

Sussex Cattle.

The valuable breed of cattle, native to the mountain pastures of East Sussex in England, seem, until quite recently, to have been ignored by American breeders. The breed is in a sense intermediate between the Devons and the Herefords, with both of which breeds they have been somewhat crossed. Like other pure breeds (and we have reason to suppose this to be one of the pure or original breeds of ancient Britain), we believe it will take an infusion of foreign blood to completely absorb it, so that after a few generations not a trace can be discovered. This quality is remarkable in the Devons, and is the cause of the remarkable fixedness of the type. We have had for a long time in this country the Devons, the Herefords, the Shorthorns among the peculiarly beef breeds of British cattle. More recently the Polled Angus and Galloways, and the West Highlanders, and it might well be asked: "What more do beef raisers or the markets want!" Nevertheless we welcome the Sussex cattle as one of those "Good gifts of God," which American farmers cannot ignore, and for which we ought to be duly thankful. Well placed, well bred, and well cared for, they may prove themselves better adapted to some sections than any other breed we have. As will be seen from the portrait of the supurb animal, which we select as showing the characteristic points of the breed; there is strong resemblance to the Devons. The color is very similar; the general style, carriage, and, in many points, the form, strikingly so. At the same time there is less delicacy of bone, of head; and horn. In the carcass there is a resemblance of "the broad-backed Hereford—great width of loin, full flank and twist, with fair crops, deep brisket, and broad breast. There is a certain coarseness, which is in marked contrast to both the breeds with which we institute a comparison, but this is well offset by the hardiness for which the breed is famous. In fact it really seems strange, that cattle concerning which Youatt wrote as long ago as 1834, that the oxen "had all the activity of the Devon, with the strength of the Hereford, and the propensity to fatten, and the beautiful fine-grained flesh of both," should have been so nearly overlooked by our wide-awake breeders. Youatt adds: "Experience has shown, they possess as many of the good qualities of both as can be combined in one frame." Their hardiness seems to render them especially adapted to the north-western parts of our country, and we hope they may there develop beef qualities, which will be of great advantage to that magnificent grazing section. Drainage of Land.

Drainage of land, does it pay? Emphatically, yes. Look at the experience of all the countries of Europe for these last fifty years. The amount of farm drainage carried out in Great Britain, France, and Holland alone, is enormous. In Great Britain it has been done chiefly by tenants or occupiers of land under [illegible] [illegible] pays in drainage, and they will invariably show you, that were it not for good drainage, they could not continue to pay such large rents. [illegible] the tenant undertakes to do all the drainage, borrowing the money, which is to be paid in six installments, within a limited period, with half yearly interest added, so satisfied is he that he gains far more by the increased value of crops than he pays for the drainage works. Such is the faith on the other side of the Atlantic in the thorough drainage of land, that you may see even large outfalls made by tunnelling under rivers to obtained a proper level to drain farming land. During the past fifty years, all well managed farms have been more or less drained. In Holland, so enterprising and entergetic have the landowners been that specially extensive drainage works have been carried out to reclaim the land, that is below the sea level at high water. There some of the richest pasture land is reclaimed by embankments from the sea, and at the inside and at the foot of these embankments are cut large canals, or water courses, for the retention of the surface water of the adjacent lands, until the sea ebbs to such a point that it can be discharged. The bottoms of these canals are sometimes below low water, and to empty them large engines and pumps are required to raise the water from the canal, and discharge it into the sea at and near the low water. It is from this once submerged, but now reclaimed land, that we obtain in this country that famous breed of cows called "Holsteins." With all this expenditure of capital to keep back the sea, and retain so much of the water of the enclosed tracts as is needed for the land, the Dutch consider that the investment has paid well. Here we have comparitively little land depressed below sea level, which needs great embankments to keep out the encroachments of the sea. Ours is for the most part simply the getting rid of water of ordinary springs, and the surplus of surface water in times of excessive rainfall. Land that is thoroughly drained, produces a finer grade as well as a greater quantity of of wheat, corn, turnips, etc, etc. It yields much superior grass, and consequently carries more of and a heavier description of cattle. For all uses that the farmer wants land, drained land is much superior to that which is undrained. Upon drained land, cold, subterranean waters that retard vegetation are removed, air and heat that promote the growth of all plants penetrate the soil, crops ripen better and mature faster. In certain seasons, crops that will not ripen at all on undrained land, are upon well drained land fully developed.

Where She Drew The Line

"Yes, I have been visiting some friends down near Bosting," said a lovely looking girl, with the bloom of the prairies on her cheeks. "I used to say Boston before I went down east, but they have taught me better. Yes, I like Bosting very well, and my cousins down there are such nice girls. But they are so prudish and delicate about everything they do, you know. They tried to teach me good manners, and I did my best to learn. I learned to say Bosting, and to tell fibs, and to eat meals so I wouldn't have an appetite before folks, and—and to use a double hitch around the bed post in tightening my—ah—my corsage lace; but there was one thing they couldn't teach me. They coaxed and tried and begged and shamed, but it was no use. I was willing to become lady-like and refined and all that, but I just wouldn't ride in one of those hateful side-saddles. I told 'em there culture was a good thing, and I liked it, and would take home a few samples of it to show the girls out in Nebraska, but I would have to drew the line on side-saddles. If I couldn't ride the way I wanted to I wouldn't ride at all. They couldn't make no side-saddle jigger out of me, not if I know myself, and I do most of the time."[Chicago Herald.

TWENTY-FIVE PER CENT STRONGER THAN ANY OTHER BUTTER COLOR.

BURLINGTON, VT., May 3d, 1882.

I hereby certify that I have examined the Butter Color prepared by Wells, Richardson & Co., and that the same is free from alkili or any other substance injurious to health; that I have compared it with some of the best of the other Butter Colors in the market and find it to be more than twenty-five per cent. stronger in color than the best of the others. I am satisfied that it is not liable to become rancid, or in any way to injure the butter. I have examined it after two months free exposure to the air in a place liable to large changes of temperature, and found no trace of rancidity, while other kinds similarly exposed became rancid. A. The World Challenged

The liniment has been manufactured and used for twenty-five years, and our innumerable certificates of cure prove it to be an unparalleled success. We do not offer it as an Internal Remedy, positively asserting that any liniment that can be taken into the Stomach without injury can have little efficacy in acting as a specific when externally applied. You will find a trial of it the best certificate of its value. It is the only Lade entirely of Oils and we challenge the world for its equal. Warranted to give satisfaction or money refunded. WELLS, RICHARDSON & CO'S IMPROVED BUTTER COLOR

A NEW DISCOVERY.

For several years we have furnished the Dairymen of America with an excellent artificial color for butter; so meritorious that it met with great success everywhere receiving the highest and only prizes at both International Dairy Fairs.

But by patient and scientific chemical research we have improved in several points, and now offer this new color as the best in the world.

It Will Not Color the Buttermilk. It Will Not Turn Rancid. It is the Strongest, Brightest and Cheapest Color Made,

And, while prepared in oil, is so compounded that it is impossible for it to become rancid.

BEWARE of all imitations, and of all other oil colors, for they are liable to become rancid and spoil the butter.

If you cannot get the "improved" write us to know where and how to get it without extra expense. (46)

My Friends up in the Attic.

I wish that I might tell you
All the tales that I've been told;
By the mystic spirits dwelling
There, up in the attic old.
There among the cobwebs,sweeping
From the grim old rafters brown
Dwell a curious old people
From a quaint old-fashioned town.

Oft I've listened to the rythm
Of a strain that long has fled,
Breathing life into the spinet
By some spirit of the dead;
And I've felt a sweetness causing
Ev'ry throb of heart to cease,
Tho'gh no mortal fingers wandered
There along the yellow keys

All my pulses thrill to sweetness
When the music swells to bliss,
And I stand me there in rapture
So each strain I may not miss.
'Tis a quaint old fashioned spirit,
There among the spinet's strands
Wafting music to my senses
From the realm of foreign lands.

There from dusty garments hanging
From the pegs upon the wall,
They assume the garbs of living—
Though enshrouding spirits all.
There I stand in blissful musings,
Like some being in a trance,
Gazing on the quaint, old figures of a long forgotten dance.

Now the spirit's music rising
High above the dancer's glee,
Seems to draw the bondage closer
That has now surrounded me.
I engage an airy dancer
And I tread the trippling toe,
Till I feel my pulses bounding
With a blissful overflow.

Faster, Faster am I spinning
'Neath the rapture of the charm;
Closer, closer do I clasp the
Airy creature on my arm.
Then tho' music ceases sudden,
And the spell as sudden falls;
Only spinet silent standing!
Only grim old attic walls!

NED SPRUCINGTON'S UMBRELLA.

"Name?"

"Charles Blank."

"Occupation?"

"Civil engineer."

"Address?"

"501 Great George street, Westminster, and 6 Verbena Villas, Hammersmith."

"Verbena Villas, Hammersmith," repeated the police sergeant slowly, as he entered the foregoing particulars in a big book.

"Well, you know the charge—stealing this gentleman's umbrella. Have you anything to say in addition to what you have already stated?"

"Nothing whatever," I answered; "I can only repeat that it was entirely a mistake upon my part."

"Just so," was the grim reply. "You'll have an opportunity of proving that in the morning. You are by no means the first person we have had to deal with here who has mistaken other people's property for his own. Take him to the cells." And then I was marched off.

The circumstances which had brought me into this scrape were as follows:

Myself and my friend Sprucington were in the employment of a railway contractor, whose offices were situated in the locality already mentioned. The duties of our department were shared by some half-dozen other young gentlemen of our own age, who, like us, were qualifying themselves for the survey of ground and construction of lines in any part of the world which their genius should call them to. But plans and specifications are not particularly exhilareting in themselves, apart from their professional interest; so it is not to be wondered at, that among several young fellows, full of animal spirits, a little practical joking should have been at times indulged in.

Ned Sprucington and I were old Carthusians. When we met, therefore after some year's separation, at the office in George Street, we had only to renew our friendship, The great dandy of our room nay, of the entire house, was Ned. I honestly believe, to, that he was one of the most guileless, simple-hearted fellows alive, He had, however, one conspicuous weakness—which was to be taken for a man of fashion. He dressed, I admit, exceptionable; and to aid him in producing the impression which he desired upon beholders, he carried about with him, in all weathers, a beautiful silk umbrella, scarcely bulkier than a lady's parasol, though, of course, considerably longer. Judging from the cut onyx handle, mounted in gold, it must have cost him a mint of money.

Well, this umbrella of Ned's we tried all we could think of to get hold of. But he was too wary for us—it was always left in some safe place. If we had succeeded in gaining possession of it, it would at once have taken a conspicuous position in society, such as covering the old apple-woman at the corner, but it was unapproachable. At last we became so desperate that I accepted a heavy wager from one of the other fellows that I would present myself at the office the next morning, at all hazards, the proud possessor of Ned Sprucington's umbrella.

On that particular day, work being slack, every one was enabled to leave unusually early; so that by four o'clock in the afternoon the house was cleared of all save myself, my brother-conspirator, and the old soldier who lived with [illegible] on the premises. My friend [illegible] as was his custom [illegible] such times, [illegible] his intention of going [illegible] Ladies' Mile, there to air [illegible] and—his [illegible] upon following him [illegible] were not two hours [illegible] I could [illegible] the [illegible] map of a "seat of war." He was so wedged in among other gazers, that I could not get at him to speak or even to have a clear view of his face. But I knew him by his height, by the neatly braided coat, the delicately tinted trousers, the well-poised hat, and last but not least, the umbrella. He was holding his hands behind his back, and in one of them the precious article was firmly clasped.

Yes, there it was, onyx handle, gold mounting, and all. As I looked, a sudden idea took possession of me—a foolish idea, I admit, as it could hardly lead to a practical result. But I thought if I could only get the umbrella out of his hand in some way, and run off with it, that he, seeing it in the possession of a friend, wolud give up the chase, knowing that he would recover his property the next day. At the worst, the result would only be a day or two's coolness between us, on account of my freak.

No sooner thought than done. On the pavement, I espied a piece of clean straw, well adapted for the purpose I had in view. Picking it up, I proceeded to tickle with it Sprucington's right ear. Thinking it, I suppose, to be a troublesome fly, he raised his hand to brush off the assailant. But to do this he was compelled to shift the umbrella from his right hand to his left. The moment of the transference was enough for me. Before the fingers of his left hand could close, I had seized the umbrella, and the next instant was dashing madly across Trafalgar Square in the direction of the Haymarket.

There was a sudden commotion behind me, a commotion which soon swelled into an uproar; I heeded it no further than to turn half round, in order to let Sprucington see who I was, and to flourish in the air my umbrella—I mean his umbrella. But the uproar did not relax; on the contrary, it began to shape itself into words. Hoarse shouts of "Stop thief!" followed me as I flew up the steps at the further end of the square. The cries still ringing in my ears, I dashed helter-skelter past the College of Physicians and Colnaghi's print shop till I came to the corner of Suffolk Street. Here I was brought up "all standing" by an iron grip upon my collar from behind. Turning round, I found myself in the custody of a policeman.

In the usual brief space of time, the inevitable London crowd assembled about us. I was regarded with curiosity, loaded with reproaches, and favored with wit of an extremely personal nature, all at the same moment. This I bore with patience, if not with good-humor, convinced that on the arrival of Sprucington I should get clear of my tormentors. Presently a lane was made for the approach of the owner of the stolen property. Judge of my horror on perceiving that the panting individual was a total stranger to me!

Of course all my protestations of innocence were of no avail, and I was treated in the manner described in the commencement.

Clatter, clash, rumble, bang! The cell door closed upon me, and I was a prisoner.

The gloom was so great, that though it was daylight, I could at first distinguish nothing. Gradually I became aware that I was in a narrow vaulted room, as strong as iron and brick could make it. Halfway up the wall was a wooden wainscoting, and round two sides I could dimly see a low bench, barely two feet from a floor which was an inch deep in sawdust. The iron door of this delightful apartment was of great thickness, disclosing—about five feet from the ground—a small grating of round holes. By pressing my face against this grating, I could see into the corridor without. But the only view obtainable was a round glass window opposite, illuminated by the last rays of the setting sun. It was altogether a most depressing place. The flavor suggested to me was a combined one, made up of the condemned cell in Newgate, the dungeons of the Bastile, and the Spanish Inquisition. Occasional gruff voices and heavy footsteps in the corridor deepened the impression. A mouse in a trap was a king to me.

Then I began to think seriously of my situation. That I had committed felony there could not be the least doubt, though with no felonious intention. Would the magistrate believe my explanation? Surely my manner and appearance were not those of a pick———. But my heart sank within me as I remembered that the London swell-mob are known to be the cleverest actors in the world—in fact, can imitate to perfection any class of society. My only hope was in Sprucington. He would be of material assistance in clearing up the mystery. And yet that umbrella—I could have sworn it to belong to none other but him! However, I had despatched messengers to him, my employer, and my friends; therefore, the only thing to be done was to wait patiently 'til the morning.

I spare you a description of that night of horror, for such it was to one who had never before suffered an hour's deprivation of liberty; how the monotony of the long, long hours was only broken at intervals by the appearance at the grating of a stern, helmeted visage, demanding whether "all" was "right"—how at four o'clock, a. m., two fellow-prisoners, in the shapes of a drunken scavenger and a deserter from the Royal Artillery, were thrust into the cell; or how in the morning all the cells were emptied, and we, the occupants, with [illegible], unwashed and unkempt, [illegible] through the streets in a [illegible] to an adjacent police [illegible] burly, bald-headed, gilt buttoned person, placed me in the dock. At the same moment the prosecutor entered the witness box to be sworn. He was a priggish looking man of about forty-five, and no more like Ned Sprucington in front than I was like the Monument.

In a few calm, well-chosen words, he described the whole occurrence. When he had finished, I was told that I could put any questions to him that I thought proper. I declined to do so. Then,after his evidence had been confirmed by the constable who arrested me, the magistrate—an amiable looking old gentleman—asked me;

"Well, my friend, what have you to say to this?"

In reply, I gave the same simple and unvarnished statement which I had already given at the police station.

"That is all very well as far as it goes; but have you any witness to character?"

"Yes, sir—Mr. Edward Sprucington."

"Call Edward Sprucington."

Then I could hear the crier shouting the familiar name through the passages of the court.

After a few minutes' suspense the official returned, accompanied, to my great delight, by Ned. The good fellow looked so distressed to see me in such a predicament, that I felt convinced he would have given a dozen umbrellas to have got me out of the scrape. As soon as he made his appearance, I noticed that the prosecutor changed color; I also noticed that while taking the oath, Ned kept one hand behind his back; I could not have told you why, but somehow I derived encouragement from both those trifling circumstances.

To shorten matters, I may say, that if I had been a seraph I could not have received a better character than that given me by Ned. At last came the question: "Then you think the prisoner incapable of stealing this umbrella?"

"Well, sir," said Ned, who had recovered his self-possession, "if, as I understand, stealing means taking property from the owner, it is impossible, the prisoner could have committed the theft."

What a first-rate advocate Ned was becoming!

"Impossible! Why?"

"Because that umbrella was first stolen from me!"

"It is an infamous falsehood!" cried the prosecutor, starting up.

"Is it?" replied Ned. "That person need not be so particular about words, for this is all he left me in exchance—at the Cigar Divan."

With that he produced, amid the laughter of the court, what he had hitherto concealed behind his back, namely, a wooden-handled umbrella much the worse for wear, of silk certainly, but no more to be compared with the glories of the onyx-handled one than a costermonger's wide-awake with the Archbishop of Canterbury's best "shovel."

An attempt at bluster by the late possessor of his umbrella, was quietly met by Ned with a request that an officer of the court should examine the initials upon the handle. This was conclusive. The stranger's initials were "T. W.," and he had not had time to take notice of the minute "E. S." cut into the onyx stone.

Of course my immediate release followed upon this discovery, accompanied by the assurance that I left that court without any stain upon my character, etc, My late prosecutor was glad to slink crestfallen away, yet not before he had received a severe rebuke administered by the magistrate.

As for Ned, he was overflowing with gratitude. He declared with tears in his eyes, that I had been the means of restoring to him his lost treasure. What was more, he insisted upon paying the wager I had lost, and also of performing the part of Amphitryon at a capital dinner in the evening.

For Wives Only to Read.

Don't impose on your husband because he is good enough to assist you a little in your housework. Don't leave the stove handle in the red hot stove, and don't ask him to empty the ash hod. Draw a line on the ash hod, and don't run a free horse to death.

Don't monopolize every hook in the closet. Generously tender him one nail for his very own—and then, in mercy hang your "Mother Hubbard," your pelerine, your shopping bag and your bonnet some other place.

Don't be inexplicit in giving directions When you ask him to go up stairs for your portemonnaie tell him it is either on the table, or in the further corner of the left hand side of the upper bureau drawer, or in the pocket of your brown dress in the closet. He will have no trouble in finding it—if you can tell him just where it is, especially the pocket.

Don't ask him where he has been the moment he enters the house, or where he is going if he starts out for a walk before breakfast. It nettles him, and men hate to have such pointed questions sprung upon them. Besides that, we live under a free flag.

Don't ask him to walk the floor with the baby half the night. A man who tramps industriously around a billiard table three nights in a week can't be expected to be on duty at home the other three nights. Have mercy on him and give the man an opportunity to recuperate.

Don't leave hair in the comb or your neck curls where they will stick to his hair brush.

Don't mend his hosiery with cotton having knots in it larger than a pea.

Don't scold him because he leaves ashes in his pipe. One of the privileges of a maried man is to leave an old pipe full of ashes in just the position to empty the contents on the window sill or the mantelpiece the moment it is touched.

Don't indulge in flights of temper when your husband suggests how his mother did. If he objects to having eggs boiled in the tea kettle, and prefers them washed previous to cooking, endeavor to please him by indulging in his fancies. In the meantime bring your sons up as carefully as you can, and when they are married, you yourself will doubtless be held up as an example of virtue; and revenge is sweet.

Don't be too prodigal in the use of kindling wood. There is no fruit of his toil that man guards as jealously as he does his kindling wood. He would fain put it where thieves break not through and steal. So, just because you have free access to it, don't burn up enough to last a week in one day.—[Chicago Herald.

THE PROPER THING.

China crape is a popular fabric.

Buttons were never so handsome as at present.

Cashmere remains in favor for plain dresses.

Jersey, polo, and Scotch caps are all worn by small girls.

The most becoming sleighing hoods are of plush or seal skin.

All new under clothing is made closer fitting than formerly.

Wool corset covers are made of finely woven Jersey webbing.

Bright hues and scarlets are the favorite hues for toboggan suits.

Stripes for parts of the dress are shown with nearly all the plain goods.

Black trimming is now considered fashionable on all colors, even brown.

Flannel skirts are worn in colors and are trimmed with wool lace to match.

The earliest hints of spring goods point to the continued use of homespun, boucle and diagonal woolens.

The new order of combination for silk or woolen fabrics is black watered silk with small waves, antique or striped.

Many of the new imported dresses have fine side-plaited gauze ribbon, with thin satin stripes set in the neck and sleeves.

For invalids, blanket wrappers are made of fine colored blankets, with the woven border serving as the only trimming.

The most elegant of bodices and that which makes the figure look the most graceful, is the plain peaked bodice, trimmed with fancy galloon or beading.

Elegant cloth costumes have bands of black Astrakhan around the bottom of the skirt, on the jacket and also on the turban and muff, which are now considered necessary accompaniments.

The new shades in gloves are dark browns, garnets and gray for day wear, with silver grey, mauve, putty, and flesh color for evening wear. The mousquetaire is still the favored shape, but long wristed buttoned gloves are worn by ladies with plump arms and wrists.

SCIENTIFIC TRUTH!

REGARDING THE FUNCTIONS OF AN IMPORTANT ORGAN.

Of which the Public Knows but Little, Worthy Careful Consideration.

To the Editor of the Scientific American:

Will you permit us to make known to the Public the facts we have learned during the past eight years, concerning disorders of the human Kidneys and the organs which diseased Kidneys so easily break down? You are conducting a Scientific paper, and are unprejudiced except in favor of TRUTH. It is needless to say, no medical journal of "Code" standing would admit these facts, for very obvious reasons.

H. H. WARNER & CO.
Proprietors of "Warner's Safe Cure."

That we may emphasize and clearly explain the relation the kidneys sustain to the general health, and how much is dependent upon them, we propose, metaphorically speaking, to take one from the human body and place it in the wash-bowl before us, and examine it for the public benefit.

You will imagine that we have before us a body shaped like a bean, smooth and glistening, about four inches in length, two in width, and one in thickness. It ordinarily weighs in the adult male about five ounces, but is somewhat lighter in the female. A small organ? you say. But understand, the body of the average size man contains about ten quarts of blood, of which every drop passes through these filters or sewers, as they may be called, many times a day, as often as through the heart, making a complete revolution in three minutes. From the blood they separate the waste material, working away steadily, night and day, sleeping or waking, tireless as the heart itself, and fully of as much vital importance; removing impurities from 65 gallons of blood each hour, or about 49 barrels each day, or 9,125 hogsheads a year! What a wonder that the kidneys can last any length of time under this prodigious strain, treated and neglected as they are!

We slice this delicate organ open lengthwise with our knife, and will roughly describe its interior.

We find it to be of a reddish-brown color, soft and easily torn; filled with hundreds of little tubes, short and thread-like, starting from the arteries, ending in a little tuft about midway from the outside opening into a cavity of considerable size, which is called the pelvis or, roughly speaking, a sac which is for the purpose of holdnig the water to further undergo purification before it passes down from here into the ureters, and so on to the outside of the body. These little tubes are the filters which do their work automatically, and right here is where disease of the kidneys first begins.

Doing the vast amount of work which they are obliged to, from the slightest irregularity in our habits, from cold, from high living, from stimulants or a thousand and one other causes which occur every day, they become somewhat weakened in their nerve force.

What is the result? Congestion or stoppage of the current of blood in the small blood-vessels surrounding them, which become blocked; these delicate membranes are irretated; inflamation is set up then pus is formed, which collects in the pelvis or sac, the tubes are at first partially, and soon are totally unable to do their work. The pelvic sac goes on distenting with this corruption, pressing upon the blood vessels. All this time, remember, that the blood which is entering the kidneys to be filtered, is passing through this terrible, disgusting pus, for it cannot take any other route!

Stop and think of it for a moment. Do you realize the importance, nay the vital necessity, of having the kidneys in order? Can you expect when they are diseased or obstructed, no matter how little that you can have pure blood and escape disease? It would be just as reasonable to expect, if a pest-house was set across Broadway and countless thousands were compelled to go through its pestilential doors, an escape from contagion and disease, as for one to expect the blood to escape pollution when constantly running through a diseased kidney.

Now, what is the result? Why, that the blood takes up and deposits this poison as it sweeps along into every organ, into every inch of muscle, tissue, flesh, and bone, from your head to your feet. And whenever, from hereditary influence or otherwise some part of the body is weaker than another, a countless train of diseases is established, such as consumption, in weak lungs, dyspepsia, where there is a delicate stomach; nervousness, insanity, paralysis or heart disease in those who have weak nerves.

The heart must feel the effects of the poison as it requires more pure blood to keep it in right action. It increases its stroke in number and force to compensate for the natural stimulus wanting, in its endeavor to crowd the impure blood through this obstruction, causing pain, palpitation, or an out-of-breath feeling. Unnatural as this forced labor is, the heart must soon falter, becoming weaker until one day it suddenly stops, and death from apparent "heart disease" is the verdict!

But the medical profession, learned and dignified, call these diseases by high sounding names, treat them alone, and the patients die, for the arteries are carrying slow death to the affected part, constantly adding fuel [illegible] these suppurating [illegible] which [illegible] putrefaction itself, [illegible] have [illegible]

But this [illegible] kidneys can not be expected [illegible] vital an organ is [illegible]. No wonder some writers say they are degenerating. Don't you see the great, the extreme importance of keeping this machinery in working order? Could the finest engine do even the fractional part of this work without attention from the engineer? Don't you see how dangerous this disease is? It is lurking about us constantly, without giving any indication of its presence.

The most skillful physicians cannot detect it at times, for the kidneys themselves cannot be examined by any means which we have at our command. Even an analysis of the water, chemically and microscopically, reveals nothing definate in some cases, even when the kidneys are fairly broken down.

Then look out for them, as disease, no matter where situated, to 93 per cent, as shown by after-death examinations, has its orgin in the breaking down of these secreting tubes in the interior of the kidney.

As you value health, as you desire long life free from sickness and suffering, give these organs some attention. Keep them in a good condition and thus prevent (as is easily done) all disease.

Warner's Safe Cure, as it becomes year after year better known for its wonderful cures and its power over the kidneys, has done and is doing more to increase the average duration of life than all the physicians known. Warner's Safe Cure is a true specific, mild but certain, harmless but energetic and agreeable to the taste.

Take it when sick as a cure, and never let a month go by if you need it, without taking a few bottles as a preventive that the kidneys may be kept in proper order, the blood pure that health and long life may be your blessing.

JAS. R. FAIRGRIEVE - EDITOR

We have received during the past week, from J. E. Childs Esq., General Superintendent of the New York, Ontario and Western Railroad, the sixth annual report for the fiscal year ending September 30th, 1885.

Many things appear in it that cannot fail to be otherwise than interesting to the readers of The Times. It shows that the passenger earnings have increased 5.66 per cent.; freight 5.36 per cent., while earnings from express, mail, "news" privileges and telegraph have increased 16.38 per cent.

The operating expenses including terminals and exclusive of rentals, interest, taxes and insurance were 82 per cent. of the gross earnings, a decrease in the operating expenses of 5.5 per cent. as compared with the proceding year. The charges for construction and improvements amounted to $139,773.59. The total number of miles run by trains of all kinds was 1,786,381.

During the year 23.6 miles of steel rails were laid in place of iron ones. Since September 30th, 17.6 more miles have been put in. The number of locomotives owned by the company is 73. The number of passenger, baggage, mail and express cars is 80. The number of freight and other cars is 1,875. The revenue received for the transportation of milk has constantly increased since the construction of the road. It amounted during the fiscal year of 1879 and 1880 to $28,706, while during the past year it brought $182,405. The coal handled from Sidney to Oswego for lake shipments was 98,992 tons which was an increase on the previous year, but the rail shipments to other points have been generally decreased. The amount received from the emigrant business has been $17,663.91. Up to July 31, 1884, the Western Union Telegraph Company operated the telegraph wires at an annual rental of $1,000. It was then leased to the Baltimore and Ohio Telegraph Company at an annual rental of $6,000, for a period of ten years.

The Syracuse, Phœnix and Oswego Railroad which was opened last September now run their trains form this village to Oswego over their tracks—three trains daily each way—for which they pay $36 per day for trackage rights, or $11,258 per annum. No passengers were killed or injured during the year. The total earnings and income of the road were $1,979,637.40. The total expenses were $1,563,960.40. The amount paid for taxes, rentals and interest on first mortgage bonds was $385,741.25, leaving a net income of $29,935.77. The revenue from freight forwarded from Fulton to other stations was $12,926.17, while the revenue from passenger traffic out of Fulton amounted to $4,925.00.

The intentions of England's new government, the actions of her new Prime Minister and the question of the restoration of Ireland's legislative independence furnish topics for discussion and food for the newspapers. Mr. J. Chamberlain, President of the Local Government Board.

Mr. G. O. Trevelyan, Secretary for Scotland.

Mr. A. J. Mundella, President of the Board of Trade.

Mr. John Morley, Chief Secretary for Ireland.

The following appointments have also been made under the new administration: Earl Sydney, Lord Steward of the Queen's household; Mr. Arnold Morley, Patronage Secretary; Mr. Charles Russell Attorney-General.

Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, Edward Heneage.

Lord Chancellor of Ireland, John Naish.

Attorney-General of Ireland, Samuel Walker.

Nelson VanOrden, living on West Hill, in Ithaca, had a narrow escape from death Friday night. Feeling thirsty, he drank what he supposed to be cider, but which proved to be carbolic acid, to the extent of an ounce and a half. The fiery liquid burned his mouth and throat terribly and threw him into spasms. Through the prompt administration of mustard and water his death was prevented.

The state superintendant of public instruction has given a decision of some interest in the case of Miss Belle Doherty, an Essex county school teacher, who had engaged to teach school for thirty-two weeks, but who taught for a much shorter term, owing to the school being closed on account of sickness. The teacher was refused compensation for the full term, but the superintendant says that when a school is closed by order of the trustees or board of health, the district is liable for the teacher's wages.

The pension appropriation bill sent to the House on Friday appropriates $75,754,200, an increase of about $15,000,000 over last year. It is made up as follows: For army and navy pensions, $75,000,000; for fees and expenses of examining surgeons, $500,000; for salaries of eighteen pension agents, $72,000; and for miscellaneous, including clerk hire, rents, etc., $182,000.

United States District Attorney Dorsheimer has tendered his resignation to the President. His reasons for resigning he said, were purely personal, and without any political influences whatever. His private business, growing out of his management of the New York Star, demanded so much of his time and attention as to entail too much work on him when taken in connection with his duties as District Attorney.

Henry M. Stanley, the African explorer, relates that when he started on his tour through the "dark continent" he took in his baggage a large collection of books. But as the number of his men was lessened, the books had one by one to be left at the wayside, until finally, when less than 300 miles from the Atlantic, he had left only the Bible, Shakespeare, Carlyle's "Sartor Resartus," "Norte's Navigation" and the nautical almanac. At Zinga the Shakespeare was abandoned, and afterward Norte, the almanac, and last, "Sartor Resartus" was thrown down, only the Bible going through to the end.

The United States Senate occuppied most of Friday's session discussing the bill for the admission of Dakota, and the bill was passed, ayes 33, nays 22. The bill divides the territory on the line of the 46 parallel of latitude; provides for the admission of the southern portion as a state under the title of Dakota and the organization of the northern section into a separate territory under the name of Lincoln.

Gov. [illegible]

[illegible] Gen. Winfield Scott Hancock [illegible] in Montgomery county, Pa., Feb. 14, 1824, and would have been sixty-two years old had he lived until next Sunday. He graduated at West Point at the age of 20 and two years afterward entered the Mexican war. For his bravery and gallant conduct at the battles of Contreras and Cherubusco he was brevetted as first lieutenant. He entered the war of the Rebellion as brigadier general of volunteers and took a prominent part in the battle of Williamsburg, Frazier's Farm, South Mountain and Antietam. He was made Major General in 1862, and commanded a division at Fredericksburg and Chancellorsville. He was severely wounded in the battle of Gettysburg and for his conduct in this battle received the thanks of Congress. He was unable because of his wound to take the field again until 1864, when he bore a prominent part in the battles of the Wilderness, Spottsylvania Court House, North Anne, Cold Harbor, Petersburg and several other battles. Since November 1872 he has been in charge of the department of the East with head-quarters at Governor's Island, N. Y. He was the Democratic candidate for President in 1880 against Garfield.

It is probable that General Hancock's body will be taken to Norristown, Pa., for burial and there placed in the family mausoleum beside his daughter. By the death of General Hancock, Major General Schofield, now commanding the division of the Missouri, will become Senior Major General and will ultimately take command of the department of the East.

LITERARY.

It is rumored that Mr. C. B. Patten of State St., Boston, is the "American Banker" whose "England" is attracting so much notice at present.

Rose G. Kingsley, a daughter of Canon Kingsley will have an Alpine paper in the March Wide Awake, "Stoned by a Mountain," that botanists will enjoy.

D. Lothrop & Co. issue this month Mrs. Sarah K. Bolton's Social Studies in England. The volume is rich with facts and data for political economists in America.

Mrs. Sherwood, in her "Royal Girls" for the March Wide Awake, will give the romantic first meeting of the beautiful Empress of Austria with Franz Joseph.

Elizabeth Stuart Phelps will have an illustrated ballad, "The Tenement House Fire," in the March Wide Awake.

Frank Demster Sherman whose graceful poems in The Century and The Atlantic have gained him so wide a popularity as a writer of vers de societe is at present living in Peekskill, N. Y. In "February," which D. Lothrop & Co. publish, appears as an original contribution to the volume a poem entitled "In February," which is conceived in Mr. Sherman's best vein.

Harvard men should take peculiar interest in "February," which D. Lothrop & Co. publish in their series of monthly volumes, "Through the Year with the Poets," for the reason that several of their number past and present are represented as contributors to the volume. Among the former is Mr. Charles Turner Dazey, and among the latter is Mr. Charles Miner Thompson, one of the editors of The Harvard Advocate, and a young man of much promise.

The February Century.

The mid-winter Century is at hand, containing an appetizing table of contents, and considerable space is given to the war articles. The illustrations are particularly fine. Mr. Howells commences a new story entitled "The Minister's Charge." The February Century will number 200,000 copies. Each month exceeding the former one.

A Free Copy of either Babyland or Babies, Our Little Men and Women for Youngest Readers, or the Pansy for boys and girls, will be sent to any one desiring some periodical for their little ones, who will write for it, mentioning this paper. Address D. Lothrop & Co., Boston.

A Sample copy of Wide Awake will be sent and receipt of five 2-cent stamps Interesting announcements and full premium List will be sent, if desired.

GENERAL NEWS.

Snowden of Boston and Fern of Scranton, Pa., are to be matched to skate five miles at Boston for $500 a side.

D. A. Clark of Montana went to the range in 1864 with about 25 cents, and he now has an income of $2,000 a day.

J. Kettleman, the champion sprint runner, is out with a challenge to run any short distance foot racer in America for $1,000 a side.

[illegible] silver [illegible]

[illegible] is always asking for some [illegible]. Its latest [illegible] demonstration is against silver. In a test vote on Wednesday there was [illegible] opposition to the Administration's financial policy, and the Secretary of the Treasury will be asked to outline to the House of Representatives his future policy on the silver question.

A Representative Democrat who thought the House was going too far in demanding the Secretary to state his future intentions said, "It is pretty hard on the President." The Senate wants to know his reasons for everything he has done in the past and everything he is doing now, and the House demands his intentions and promises for the future.

Three Cabinet officers so far have been requested to furnish the Senate with information bearing on removed officials. The Attorney General refused to furnish them. Secretary Manning of the Treasury has drafted a letter of refusal which will have been sent to the Senate 'ere this reaches you, and Secretary Lamar of the Interior will doubtless proceed in the same way.

When Senator Beck of Kentucky, was asked what he thought would be the outcome of the controversy between the President and Senate he replied, "It all depends upon what the Republican majority will do. They are in the majority and they can delay public business by deciding not to confirm appointees.' He thought this course would be all right if the Republicans were satisfied with it. The Democrats, he said, would adhere to their present plan and he thought it would be for them a good enough issue on which to appeal to the people.

A rather singular episode took place in a Senate committee. Senator Sherman astonished the Democrats in a talk about appointments. Allusion was made to the deadlock which has taken place in the confirmation of officials to succeed those suspended, and a Democratic Senator asked in a semi-jocular way, why the committee should not act on those nominations over which there was no contest. Whereupon Senator Sherman remarked that there were two removed officials in his own state who had written to him that their successors were men of first class character and in every way competent, and they hoped no efforts would be made against their confirmation.

Senators Morrill of Vermont, and Conger of Michigan talked about high art in connection with suggestions for some new monuments in Washington Monuments are proposed to Columbus, William Penn, and Lafayette. They talked about the rennaissance, pre-Raphaelism, and perspective. The Senator from Michigan said he did not know what those things were, but he would discuss them all the same. He became funny and witty and sarcastic, and criticised the monuments of the capital, many of which merit all the abuse that can be heaped upon them.

Senator Logan made a long speech in behalf of Dakota's admission. He was expected to speak on this subject last Monday. A large crowd filled the galleries on that day to hear him and were disappointed. He happened to speak on Wednesday, the day of the heavy snowstorm here, and not only were the galleries empty, but there were just fourteen Senators at their seats when he commenced. He drew attention to this sparse attendance by remarking that it was not very encouraging to observe how little interest was taken on either side of the chamber on the great question of the admission of a new state to the Union. In the course of his speech Senator Butler of South Carolina asked him if he was not at one time a Democratic leader. "I never was a leader; I was a follower and I followed so far behind that I got left," was his reply, which was received with loud laughter.

Several efforts have been made this session to have nominations considered in open session. Senator Platt of Conn., has made the last proposition of this kind to the Senate. He says secrecy begets suspicion, and as long as Senators worked within barred doors they will have imputed to them motives that do not actuate them. There is a natural aversion in the American mind, to anything partaking of the nature of star chamber proceedings in legislative and judicial bodies. If the question were put to a vote of the people, it would doubtless carry by a large majority. But a Senator said recently, "Don't, for heaven's sake, ask to have what takes place in executive sessions, laid bare before the public. Locked up here from the eyes and ears of the world, it is all we ourselves can do, to listen to some disclosures that are made in secret sessions.

The pain and misery suffered by those who are afflicted with dyspepsia are indescribable. The distress of the body is equaled or surpassed by the confusion and tortures of the mind, thus making its victims suffer double affliction. The relief which is given by Hood's Sarsaparilla has caused thousands to be thankful for this great medicine. It dispels the causes of dyspepsia, and tones up the digestive organs. Shortly after 9 o'clock, the organ, ably presided over by Miss Ella Poole, pealed forth the inspiring notes of Mendelssohn's wedding march, and the ushers, E. A. Waugh and E. C. Rogers, led the way to the arch in the parlor, and, standing under an elegant floral horseshoe, surmounted by the symbolic words "Good Luck," the happy couple were made one by the Rev. W. F. Markham. The bridesmaids were Miss Frank Bisnett and Miss Lucy Fuller. Walter Rust of Cortland and F. B. Highriter of this village acted as groomsmen. After the impressive ceremony and congratulations were over, a magnificent collation was served in the dining room, to which all did ample justice. The happy couple were the recipients of many elegant presents, of a valuable, ornamental and useful nature, fitting testimonials of the high esteem in which they were held. We append a partial list of the gifts:

A GRATIFYING ANNUAL REPORT.

The Recent Change in the Board of Officers of the O. & W. R.R. Co.

At the recent annual election of Directors of the Ontario and Western Railway Company, there was a considerable change in the personnel of the road. General Horace Porter and President E. F. Winslow retired from office, and Thomas P. Fowler was unanimously elected as President; Mr. John B. Kerr, Vice President; and Mr. Joseph Price, Second Vice President, each of whom are capable, efficient and experienced gentlemen who will infuse new vigor into the management of the Company.

The financial statement for the year ending Sept. 30, 1885, showed the net earnings of the road as $318,176, being an increase of $282,875 over the preceding year. After the payment of all fixed charges there was a surplus left of $29,036, as compared with a deficiency of $397,408, at the date of September 30, 1884. A most favorable contract was made by General Winslow with the New York Central and West Shore Roads, which will greatly redound to the benefit of the former and this arrangement has been established upon a permanent and profitable footing.

The new Board of Directors are Messrs E. F. Winslow, Horace J. Hayden, Richard Irvin Jr., John Greenough, Charles Duggin, Arnold Marcus, John B. Kerr, and Thomas P. Fowler, of New York city; Charles S. Whelan of Philadelphia; Joseph Price, H. Pearson and Charles Russel, of London, England. The new Directors are Vice President Hayden of the New York Central Railroad, and Messrs Price, Pearson, Russell, Duggin and Greenough. The Board of Directors are prominent, able and competent men and the road gives evidence of being about to enter upon a period of prosperous business and renewed financial success.

Mr. and Mrs. Dr. H. L. Lake are happy over the arrival of a daughter, which occurred last week.

Hiram Lodge No. 144, F. and A. M. of this village has accepted an invitation to visit Oswego Lodge next Tuesday.

W. M. Dexter of Oswego Falls, has served an injunction on Fred Spafford to prevent him from taking ice from the lake.

It is said that John Venton will be obliged to remove his blacksmith shop on Broadway in Oswego Falls, for the erection of a new brick block.

The twenty-seven hour race which was held in the armory at Oswego last week, was won by the boy Fitzgibbons who retired Saturday night with 106 miles to his credit.

We are in receipt of a copy of a new Geography of Oswego county and containing also other miscellaneous matter, which has been prepared by E. G. Blankman of Central Square, for the use of public schools in this county.

Mr. R. E. Phillips was in Syracuse yesterday and called on L. B. Babcock, who was recently injured by being thrown from a cutter. He found him gaining as rapidly as circumstances would admit, considering the severity of his injuries.

A Volney farmer who came to town Saturday told, over his frugal repast of crackers and cheese, that the thermometer registered 125 degrees below zero the day before near his place. While we are willing to believe Volney cayable of almost anything in the line of severe weather, we must draw the line at 100 degrees below zero.

The next meeting of the Lawrence C. L. S. C. circle will be held at the residence of Mrs. H. C. Beals Monday evening Feb. 15th. The work for the evening will be a review of the reading for the first two weeks in February.

A cordial invitation is extended to all who are interested in the work.

A warrant was sworn out Monday afternoon for the arrest of George A. Glynn, the Oswego correspondent of the Syracuse Herald, on a charge of criminal libel in connection with the statement published in the Herald's issue of Sunday in regard to the Garland insurance case. It is said that the warrant was sworn out by Mathias Garland, father of the man insured.

F. W. Allen, A. W. Wilkinson of New York city, and F. B. Merrill, president of the Central City Water Works company at Syracuse, were in town last week looking over the Fulton gas works with a view to buying and establishing the works on higher ground. Up to this noon nothing definite has been done. It is said that should these gentlemen conclude to buy they will expend about $20,000 in building new works.

A meeting of the different owners of the manufacturing establishments which have been shut down by the flood on the flats, was held Saturday afternoon at the office of Weeks & Redhead to discuss the question of cutting another channel through the ice. A TIMES reporter was told Monday evening that the contract for cutting the new channel had been let to Burr VanBuren. It is to be 100 rods long, 25 feet wide and must be finished in 8 days. Mr. VanBuren is to get $75 for the job. Nearly all the establishments which were under water have resumed operations, the exceptions being Gardner & Seymour's flouring mill, J. M. Campbell's foundry, and Jas. Pierman's machine shop.

North's Philadelphia Musical Journal.

The first number of North's Philapelphia Musical Journal, bearing date January, 1886, is on our table. It is a very handsomely gotten up musical monthly, and will prove a welcome visitor everywhere, to the home circle as well as to the musician. Many original and exceptionally bright features are brought forward, and the entire number is remarkably breezy, clever and interesting, unmistakably showing the work of unusally able editors and contributors. This capital periodical has certainly come to stay, for it already bears solid and tangible evidence of success. Among the contents will be found: Sixteen pages of popular and pleasing sheet music, vocal and instrumental, arranged for the piano; "Music and Mystery," a delightful tale by Alphonse Karr; a very readable biography of Auber, the composer of "Fra Diavolo;" chatty letters from New York, Boston and Chicago; the latest musical and operatic news from all parts of the world; a practical educational department, and hosts of educational articles too numerous to mention. F. A. North & Co., Publishers, No. 1308 Chestnut street, Philadelphia, Pa. Subscription only one dollar a year, in advance. Special rates to clubs.

New Stock Company Formed.

A new stock company has been formed in this village, to be known as the "Oswego Falls Pulp and Paper company." The articles of incorporation have been filed with the Secretary of State at Albany and with the county Clerk at Oswego. The incorporators and trustees for the first year are F. G. Weeks, C. G. Weeks, H. L. Paddock, and E. R. Redhead. The new company intends constructing a large stone flume by extending a wall from the falls to a point near the upper bridge. This wall and the present heel-path will be the foundation upon which pulp and paper mills of large dimensions will be erected, leaving ample room for other manufactures for which water privileges will be sold or leased. There is an almost unlimited water power at the Fulton side of the falls, that is at present practically unused. The three railroads entering Fulton, two of them coming in close proximity to the site of the company's property, with the third one just across the river, and the Oswego canal running adjacent to the proposed establishments, offering unexcelled facilities for shipping. Thus two important inducements, and almost inexhaustible water supply and an easy access to the markets of the country, are combined at this point. Fulton already has a milling interest second to none in the State, and is noted for its other large and prosperous manufacturing establishments, and with the development of its splendid water power, and its excellent shipping privileges must soon become an important manufacturing center.

Change of Firm.

John Hadcock, yesterday sold out his interest in the book store which he has occupied for the past two years to Dr. E. W. Bibbins of Weedsport Mr. Bibbins purchased the stock with the intention of starting his son, a young man, in business here, but since the transfer has been made, other parties have appeared and are making strenuous efforts to get possession of the store and stock and it is probable that it will be again sold to still another party. Mr. Hadcock retires from business in order to accept a position with the extensive firm of P. Armour & Co. Chicago. He came here from Syracuse about two years ago and established the present business. By his sociable and pleasant ways he has made many friends who will be sorry to hear of his intended departure from this village and will join with THE TIMES in wishing him abundant success. He leaves for the West next month and enters upon his new duties in Chicago April 1st.

Barlow, Wilson and Rankin's Minstrels.

This minstrel troupe is to appear at the Opera house to-morrow evening. It is a well known company and is considered to be one of the best of its kind on the road. The Chattanooga Times of October 16th says: Scarcely a dozen more people could have been comfortably cared for at James' Hall last night, and Barlow & Wilson's minstrels did not disappoint the vast concourse. It sustained its reputation of being the best minstrel troupe on the continent, and the Times can heartily commend the performance as chaste in every feature, exquisitely laughable in parts and intensely entertaining throughout. The singing is superb, the feature of the vocalism being the magnificent solo of Thomas P. Dixon. Barlow in his negroism is inimitable, and George Wilson—well George merely has to look at his auditors to throw them into convulsions. The performance is new, the music is fine, the orchestra is excellent and the hits are apropos and to the point.

Rockwell of Syracuse Miss Cora Patrick, Arthur Melvin, Byron Moyer and Charles Pickard of Phœnix and Miss Waite Peterson of Minetto. David of Syracuse furnished the music.

Muggs' Landing was played at the Opera House last Friday evening before the largest audience that has assembled in the opera house in some time. The parts of Little Muggs, Asa Beck and Soger Judson, were well executed and kept the audience convulsed with laughter.

The gas which was used in the opera house for the first time since the flood "bobbed up serenely" until the play was about half finished and then the lights disappeared from view.

George Goodier, the treasurer for the county, died in Oswego Thursday, rather unexpectedly. He had been sick but a few days. He was born in Cedar Lake, Herkimer county, in 1823. He was a carpenter by trade, and in Oswego, whither he went in 1847, he has been a builder. February 23, 1848, he married Rechel Chapman of Washington Mills, who survives him with one son, George P. Goodier, a clerk in the Second National bank of Oswego, and a daughter, Mrs. George W. Warren. Mr. Goodier was elected county treasurer on the republican ticket four years ago, and at the end of his term was re-elected by an increased majority. He was an active member of Trinity Methodist church in Oswego, and prominent in many benevolent and mutual insurance societies.

[illegible] care of [illegible] About a week before her death she went to the house of Mr. Knapp to live and to be taken care of, Dr. Watson attending her during her illness. Last Friday she began to fail rapidly and desiring to leave her money and property to the Knapp family she requested that a lawyer be sent for, and a will drawn to that effect. Charles Davids Esq. was summoned and the will drawn up according to her instructions. Witnesses were at hand and all that now was necessary was her signature to the document. The pen was placed in her hand but the excitement and strain had proven too much for her in her enfeebled condition and before she could affix her name to the will she fell back upon the bed a corpse. It is probable that the money will fall back into the hands of the legal heirs, as the signature was necessary to make the will legal.

Two Young Burglars.

Sometime during the night of Jan. 28th, the jewelry store of S. C. Suydam in Baldwinsville was entered by burglars. they effected an entrance by cutting a pane of glass from the back door, and reaching through and unlocking it. The thieves seemed familiar with the store, as evinced by their actions. They took about a dozen revolvers, a quantity of ammunition, about two dozen watch chains, some ear-rings and sets of jewelry. They also took from the money drawer some trade dollars, mutilated coin, etc., to the amount of $10 or $12. Mr. Suydam estimates his total loss at about $200. Suspicion pointed to two young men of this village, Joseph Nichols and Tom Ingersoll, who live in the northern part of the village. They were arrested Saturday night by Officers Roderick and Morgan and lodged in jail. Sunday morning the two young men were taken to Baldwinsville by Officers Poole and Morgan. Monday morning they waived examination and in default of bail were committed to the Onondaga Penitentiary. Before their incarceration they told where some of the stolen goods had been pawned and the articles were recovered.

Almost a Serious Fire.

About half past six o'clock Sunday night as several residents of the Emory road were on their way to church, they discovered the old Spafford homestead, now occupied by Fred Spafford, to be on fire. They hurriedly drove to the house, alarmed the inmates, and after a severe battle the flames were subdued. The fire originated in the garret from the chimney and had burned several holes through the roof. The house was damaged about $100, and the contents were somewhat spoiled by water. Both were covered by insurance.

OBITUARY.

George Almon Bennett, died at his home on Cayuga street in this village, last Sunday of typhoid pneumonia and hemorrhage of the lungs. He was 38 years of age and had been sick but a week. Mr. Bennett has been a resident of this village for a number of years, and was honored and respected by all who knew him. He leaves a widow and three children, who have the sympathy of the entire community in their bereavement. Funeral services will be held to-morrow afternoon at 2 o'clock from the house, Rev. W. F. Markham officiating. The remains will be interred at Mt. Adnah.

Jay Rogers, son of Michael Rogers of Granby died at his home Monday morning after an illness of about two weeks, aged 21 years. He was a young man of steady habits, and was well and favorably known in this village, where he had many friends, who will learn with regret the news of his untimely death. Funeral services will be held Friday forenoon at 11 o'clock from the house. The remains will be placed in the receiving vault in Mt. Adnah.

The Seneca lake grape growers' convention has commended the Catawba as the best variety now grown.

The farmer's in Ohio are loud in their denunciation of Bohemian oats. They say that they give a small yield and are not fit to grind for oatmeal, and farmers are advised to let them alone.

There is no better hay for sheep, cattle, and especially calves, than well-cured clover. Even pigs like a taste of it occasionally.

Many members of the Elmira, N. Y., farmer's club agree that burying apples is the best way to keep them. Besides, they are much improved in quality.

It is said that sheep manure will make wheat grow stout and short, with heavy heads, where other manures produce long soft straw, and not so solid heads.

Ice houses on farms, instead of being expensive luxuries, are becoming economical necessities in the better preservation of fresh eggs, meat, butter and also cooked meats, vegetables, etc, etc., for table use.

Farmers should bear in mind the fact that the grass which grows on dry, rich soil, with free sunlight warming it is much more nutritious than that which grows on land filled with stagnant water.

Why do not farmers more generally plant sweet corn for fall feeding? The cattle like the rich, sweet stalks and will eat them clean up. When other corn is fed they generally leave the coarse portions of the stalks.

Give pigs a dry, cosy place to sleep and you will be haunted with a dozen or less of these complaints that are so handily dubbed "cholera." In the state of nature the pig builds a nest of dry material, and when a storm threatens, builds it higher to keep dry.

A ton of bran fed with two tons of hay is worth as much as four tons of hay fed alone, either to horses, cattle or sheep. The relative price of bran compared with hay must be taken into consideration, however, as to the economy of feeding bran.

According to a Kalamazoo, Mich., paper there are 1,200 acres about that city devoted to celery growing, consisting of drained marshes, now highly cultivated, giving employment to 1,200 persons. From July 1, an average of five cars loaded with celery are daily shipped to all parts of the United States, making about 750 car loads yearly.

Experiments have shown that if corn is thoroughly dried in the fall and kept dry, it will endure the severest cold without injury to its vitality. So important is dryness to the safe-keeping of seed corn that one must secure that rather than warmth. Corn will stand when dry a heat of 206 degrees, but if not dry its generative power will be injured 120 degrees. So corn that is not free from moisture is liable to injury both by heat and cold.

Farm Hints for February.

The fourteenth of February is said to be the stock-feeder's mid-winter, and so in fact it is, very nearly. The last part of the winter is, however, really more trying to live stock than the first, and they need more careful feeding and better protection against changes. Contrary to former practice, young cows are now-a-days quite frequently milked nearly up to calving. With old cows it makes little difference; but great milkers, especially great butter cows, are in danger of having milk fever, and it is thought that there is less danger if the flow of milk does not cease. Cow stables should be warm, sheep pens on the contrary must be airy. As ewes approach yeaning, increase their ration of roots, separate them in small pens from the flock, and take care that the early lambs do not get fatally chilled. It is well to cut the straw used for litter into foot-lengths. Breeding sows need close warm pens, with plenty of litter and good feed, in which cooked vegetables, potatoes, pumpkins, turnips and raw apples may well be mixed. Horses need care to prevent colds when used on the road. Always have large blankets ready to cover them when standing. Injuries from calking and from kicks, as well as from falls on the ice are not infrequent, and should in every way be guarded against. As spring approaches, the importance of having definite plans [illegible] for the season will be felt, and [illegible] good ideas may occur, should [illegible] for future reference, [illegible] may be overhauled and put [illegible] that when the time to use [illegible] will be ready, and [illegible]

[illegible] economy to [illegible] young, growing chicks, [illegible] stunted, it takes a long while to recover, if it does occur at all. For the first twenty-four hours after the chicks emerge from the shell, they should remain under the hen unmolested, both to dry and gain strength and hardiness. They do not require any food, as the store nature provides will last over this time. As the chicks hatch something irregularly, the older ones can be cared for in the house until the others are ready to be taken away, when the hen and her brood can be removed to a roomy coop, with a tight board bottom and a rain proof roof.

They should be fed five times daily, but only just what they will eat up clean. The first food should consist of stale bread moistened in water, or in fresh milk—the milk is decidedly preferable. Do not wet the food, as very moist or sloppy food will cause sickness and a high rate of mortality among young, tender birds. Keep the water (for drinking) away from them until they are six or eight weeks old, but if milk can be spared, give them occasional drinks of it. Then too, lavish use of corn-meal has caused more death among young chicks than cholera has among grown fowls. Until the chicks are half-grown, corn meal should be but sparely fed, but after that time, when judiciously used, it is one of the very best and cheapest foods for fowls and chicks. Nine-tenths of the young turkies and guinea-fowls, which die when in the "downy" state, get their death-blow from corn-meal, as it is a very common practice—because it is so "handy," and suits lazy people so well—to merely moisten with cold water some raw corn-meal, and feed them. Young chicks relish occasional feeds of cracked wheat and wheat screenings, while rice, well boiled, is not only greedily eaten by the chicks, but is one of the very best things that can be given.

It frequently happens that damaged lots of rice, or low grades of it, can be bought at low figures in the cities. As it increases so much in bulk in cooking it is not an expensive food for young chicks, even at the regular retail price; though it would not, ordinarily, pay to feed it to full grown fowls very liberally. In the absence of worms, bugs, etc., during early spring, cheap parts of fresh beef can be well boiled and shredded up for the little chicks; but care must be taken not to feed more frequently than once in two days, and then only in moderation. This feeding on meat shreds is very beneficial to young turkey and guinea chicks when they are "shooting" their first quill feathers, as then they require extra nourishment to repair the drain on immature bodies.—[Exchange.

HAPPINESS AND HEALTH

General W. T. Sherman [illegible] the coming [illegible] the West [illegible] tirely in St. Louis, and take up his residence in New York.

[illegible] A portion of the [illegible] the [illegible] of all the large cities of the country. But usually nothing is ever again heard from one marked "missing" on the police record.

The disappearance of Alexander F. Oakey on September 21st, is one of the recent mysteries. He was a young man of good family and education, and had made a reputation as an artist and designer. He was well known in art circles in this city, and was a frequent contributor to Harper's Weekly and Magazine. After a protracted tour of study abroad, Oakey returned to this country and married the daughter of ex-Senator Sprague of Buffalo. He settled in New York, where his art work and architectural designs procured him a situation with Tiffany & Co., with whom he was engaged at the time of his disappearance. This occurred one Saturday evening after Oakey had been visiting his family who were summering at Bellport, R. I. During the afternoon he was seen at his apartments at the Baltimore flats on 40th street. Shortly before 6 o'clock he took his light overcoat and left the house and since then has never been seen nor heard from. Search was at once instituted, but no trace of the missing artist was ever found. No reason could be found for his committing suicide, and his family relations were of the most happy nature.

A similar case occurred at Syracuse, N. Y., exactly two months after Oakey's disappearance. William M. Rapelje, a well known artist and architect of that city, was missed from his home on Nov. 21. He was 21 years old and, like Oakey, had studied and had traveled extensively. He was a member of the firm of Rapalje & Candee, architects. On the day of his disappearance he attended to his business as usual and left the office to go to the hotel where he was boarding, a few blocks away. Since then nothing has been seen or heard of him. No cause can be given for his disappearance as both his business and social relations were agreeable.

Mr. Rapalje's friends have taken every means to learn of the young man's whereabouts, but have failed.

Another case which has not before been made public, is that of young Thomas J. Fisher, son of Thomas J. Fisher, a prominent real estate broker of Washington. For some time young Fisher, who was in partnership with his father had been attentive to a well known Baltimore belle.

One evening in the latter part of July young Fisher went as usual to call upon his intended bride. During his stay a dispute arose and the young lady declared the engagement broken. Fisher left the house without a word and took a train for New York. Next morning he wrote apologizing for his rudeness and begging an answer. The letter was received, but no notice taken. Fisher left New York and went to Albany. Here he again wrote a letter to Baltimore. The earnestness of the letter alarmed the young lady and she immediately wrote. At the same time she sent the young man's letter to his father, who hurried to Albany to find that his son had gone before receiving the young lady's note of explanation.

Every effort was made to find the young man, but from the time he left the hotel steps at Albany no trace could be found. A thorough search was made of all the bodies at the Morgue. The police authorities of the large cities telegraphed, and every effort was made. No tidings of the missing man have been received, and his name is written down with those of Oakey and Rapalje.

The strange disappearance of S. S. Conant is still fresh in every one's mind. He was the managing editor of Harper's Weekly and known personally to thousands of people throughout this state. On January 16, 1885, he left his office on his way to his home and has never been heard from since. A few months later the prosperous Dr. Louis C. Brandeis of No. 32 West 33d street, disappeared.

In addition to these strange disappearances, each one of which created a sensation at the time, there have been countless others. On each occasion rewards have been made to find the lost one. But the police seem powerless to trace these missing persons. That a well-known man, with hosts of friends and acquaintances, can so absolutely disappear from the community seems almost an impossibility. But that such is the case the frequent disappearances in all metropolitan cities show.

It will build you up, curing all ailments of the stomach, liver and kidneys, and is simple, pleasant and safe.

BILIOUSNESS.

Bilious symptoms invariably arise from indigestion, such as furred tongue, vomiting of bile, giddiness, sick headache, irregular bowels. The liver secretes the bile and acts like a filter or sieve, to cleanse impurities of the blood. By irregularity in its action or suspensions of its functions, the bile is liable to overflow into the blood, causing jaundice, sallow complexion, yellow eyes, bilious diarrhœa, a languid, weary feeling and many other distressing symptoms. Biliousness may be properly termed an affection of the liver, and can be thoroughly cured by the grand regulator of the liver and biliary organs, BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS. Act upon the stomach, bowels and liver, making healthy bile and pure blood, and opens the culverts and sluiceways for the outlet of disease. Sold everywhere and guaranteed to cure.

Eternity Lies Before.

C. E. MEADE.

Why do we sigh for the faded leaves that lie
All faded and sodden'd the sod?
For nature will bring with the warm breath of Spring,
Fresh leaves from the storehouse of God.

The sombre old trees, that now wave in the breeze
Will smile in their vestments anew;
Forest and field will bring forth a new yield
Of emerald, of pink, and of blue.

Oh, why do we groan, and incessantly moan
For pleasures we knew in the past?
When the present is rife with vigor and life,
And our hearts beat as warm and as fast.

While the future is bright with hope's rosy light
And softly its rainbow bends o'er,
Which tells the great truth to old age and to youth—
That eternity lies before.

TERROR OF THE SWAMP.

I HAD been employed by the Great Improvement and Reclaim Company of Mobile to explore and map certain lands in Florida lying well down on the edge of the great Cypress Swamp. The company had purchased nearly 1,000,000 acres of wild land in the location I have mentioned, and it was necessary for some one to visit it and walk over most of the ground before it could be put into market in the manner contemplated. I had been on the ground three weeks, having two men with me, when the adventure happened which I am about to relate.

One morning the three of us left our camp beside one of the lakes on the upper St. John's for a tramp, intending to return by evening. While I made notes and kept the topography, the men noted the varieties of woods, nature of the soil, and other details of interest. On three different occasions we had encountered white men in the dense and lonely forest, and knew from their looks and surroundings that they were renegades from civilization. Twice we had stumbled upon rude camps occupied by negroes, and they were a tough-looking lot.

We had traveled a distance of perhaps three miles when I was stung on the back of the right hand by an insect resembling a hornet, although much larger. In fifteen minutes the pain brought me to a halt, and my hand was swollen like a puff ball. After a consultation, it was decided that I should return to camp, and the men would go on by compass, and cover a certain area and come in towards night. Before I had covered the distance to camp I was near screaming out with the pain, and my arm was puffing up with the poison.

There was a remedy in the medicine chest, but it was a full hour before the pain was relieved. Then I began to feel sleepy, and I bunked down on the floor and was soon fast asleep. At about noon, after a nap of two hours, I was awakened by the sound of a human voice.

"Say, you!"

I opened my eyes to find a white renegade standing over me, holding one of my revolvers in his hand.

"Git up!"

I sat up. All our goods in camp had been packed up and taken away. The man who confronted me was the wickedest-looking fellow we had yet met in the swamps. His hair and whiskers were so long and unkempt that little of his face except his ugly black eyes and yellow teeth could be seen. His clothing was part cloth and part skins, and it was plain that he had avoided civilization for years.

"Git up and come," he growled.

"Who are you and what do you want?" I demanded, as I reached my feet.

"Walk!" he commanded, pointing to the west.

At that moment a third actor appeared. It was a woman—tall, guant, ferocious, and dressed in the same nondescript costume as the man. She came out of the jungle to the west, and as soon as near enough to make her words understood, she said:

"If he won't move down him and tie his hands and feet. We can tote two such as him."

She had the other revolver in her hand, and I noticed that both had hunting knives. I was unarmed, still weak from the effects of the poisonous sting, and entirely in their power. The woman struck into the jungle, I followed, and the man brought up the rear.

After a walk of about a quarter of a mile, we reached the bank of a lake. Tied to a tree by a rawhide rope was a floating cabin. The foundation was a rough made scow and the upper works, as they may be termed, consisted of a long, narrow and stoutly-made hut of logs. There was a chimney made of mud and sticks, from which smoke issued, and two persons were on the bank to receive us. One was a boy of [illegible], and the other a girl two or [illegible] years older. They looked more like wild animals than human beings, and talked in a language so strange I could hardly understand a word.

"Go ahead," said the man, as I halted on the bank, and I followed the woman aboard of the scow and into the cabin. [illegible] there was but one room, with the hides of cattle [illegible] Southern moss for [illegible]. There was no stove, but a sort of [illegible] made of stones, with two or [illegible] of the hearth as kitchen [illegible].

[illegible] had been [illegible] Winchester [illegible]. As this was a [illegible] three feet away. Then man and wife cast off the rope, siezed long poles, and presently the boat moved down the lake to the north. The lake appeared to be about three miles wide by five long, and was shut in by the dense forest.

The views I had through the open door and the chinks between the logs showed me that the craft was kept near the shore. While the people seemed in no great hurry to get down the lake, they kept the scow moving at a fair pace until we were about three miles from the place where we had embarked. A landing was then made in the mouth of a creek, and the scow was entirely hidden from the sight of anyone on the lake. Hunters and tourists, and even small pleasure steamers came up from the main river to this lake.

It was mid-afternoon when the boat was made fast. The pain and swelling had now entirely left my hand and arm, and the helpless feeling which had come over me when first captured had given way to a determination to help myself out of the scrape. If I could get hold of my rifle I would be a match for the whole four of them. I counted them as four, because the boy and girl had hunting knives, and would surely take part in any scrimmage brought on. Their looks and actions proved this. They maintained their places directly in front of me, and their eyes never left me for a second. They held their knives as if they expected an attempt to escape, and meant to thrust and cut if I tried it.

While the boat was moving there was no show for me. A score of alligators some of monstrous size, followed us in procession, and I had but to look out upon the lake to realize that it was alive with these fierce reptiles. One who jumped or fell overboard would be seized as soon as he struck the water.

Not a word was addressed to me until the boat was tied up. Then the man came in, took a single-barreled rifle from under the other bed, and, after a few hurried words with the woman outside, jumped ashore and disappeared. When he had gone the woman entered, lighted a pipe, and sending the boy outside to watch, she sat down in his place with a cocked revolver on her lap. She had a face which betrayed the mind of a beast.

"Well, what are you going to do with me?" I asked after awhile.

"Feed you to the alligators," she replied.

"Where has your husband gone?"

"To kill the other two men."

"What do you want to murder us for? We have in no way injured you."

We was whipped and druv out of the settlements, and we want revenge," she growled.

"But we had nothing to do with it," I protested in a firm tone.

"Can't help that. You come poaching on our claim," she answered.

"But we'll go away."

"I guess you won't. We never let any one git away to tell on us!"

I said nothing further, but I by no means looked upon myself as a dead man. If worst came to worst I would give them a fight. I could not move them with knife and bullet ready for for me, and deemed it wiser to settle back and bide my time.

The man had been gone about half an hour when the faint report of a rifle reached us through the trees. The woman had been listening for it, and as it came she gave a start and cried out:

"There goes one of 'em."

"Who?" I asked.

"One of your partners. Dan has dropped him for sure."

There was such a fiendish, bloodthirsty look on her face that I was appalled, and the same expression, to a certain degree, rested on the faces of the children. Like dogs, they licked their chops in anticipation of a bloody feast. In about half an hour the man appeared. He had a bundle of clothing in one hand and two rifles and a revolver in the other.

"Git one?" the woman asked, as he came aboard the ungainly craft.

"Yes."

"Didn't get the both?"

"No. The other got away. I'll git him to-morrow," replied.

"Git much?"

"Lots."

He had in his hand the suit of clothes, rifle and revolver belonging to one of my men—George Sheen of Mobile. There were blood-stains on the clothing, and as he unrolled the bundle I saw a bullet hole through the vest. He had killed the man and then stripped him stark naked. Yes, he had boots, socks, hat, collar, everything. The other man was Robert Jackson of Chicago, who had worked with me for years. He had not "got" him. Why? Jackson was well armed and a brave man. If he had been present at the shooting of Sheen he would not have run away. Sheen had an old-fashioned rifle; Jackson had a Winchester. He would in turn kill the outlaw. The two men must have been separated, and the outlaw must have ambushed Sheen.

Leaving the children to watch me, the man and the woman now cast the scow loose and poled her out about 300 feet from shore. The sun was getting well down, and our side of the lake was in a deep shadow. When the scow had been anchored by a stone, the pair inspected the personal property and counted the money taken from the victim. The outlaw then washed the blood from his hands.

When they entered the cabin, or house, the woman produced some cold meat and hoecake and threw hunks to each one, including myself. It was only after the provisions had disappeared, I eating mine with the rest, that the [illegible].

"[illegible]," he said, "what [illegible]" [illegible] replied.

"Which is unfortnnit fur you. I've killed every land hunter whoever sot fut on my claim, and I'll keep killin, sure."

'We didn't come here to disturb or annoy you," I said.

"It's jest the same thing. I'm down on the hull human race for the way I've been used, and I'll kill whenever I kin git the chance. I've dropped one o' your fellers. To-morrer I'll drop the other and then take keer o' you. Git over thar and lay down.

"Over thar" was the far corner, and entirely out of the reach of my Winchester. When I bunked down in my corner the gun was removed entirely, and the family lay down in such a way as to hem me in. For the first three or four hours they were like cats, starting up at the slightest move, but toward midnight I was satisfied that all were asleep. I could not reach the firearms without stepping over the bodies, and they knew that any effort on my part to loosen a log would arouse them.

About midnight, after a long and cautious effort, I sat up. It was a starlight night, and as there was no door to the cabin, I could see out. I was fully determined to make an effort to escape, but when I came to canvass the chances, I had to abandon the idea. The alligators were constantly about us, often rearing up to paw at the logs, and unless I could get hold of the firearms and begin the fight, I should be wiped out in any effort I made. I think I slept for an hour or two, and what aroused me I cannot tell. I was still sitting, and as I looked out upon the night I saw a human figure draw itself up on the bows of the boat. I at first supposed it was one of the family, but a moment's observation convinced me to the contrary. This figure moved cautiously as if desiring its presence unknown and was a long time in reaching the door. It then leaned against the logs and made a long survey of the interior, and finally sank out of sight. My heart was beating like a trip-hammer, and I could not fathom the mystery. Was it an Indian or another outlaw? Moving so cautiously, what object had he in view? Had I once thought of Jackson, I should not have dared to hope he had come to my rescue through that water; and, too, I could not have believed he knew of my whereabouts.

From the time I first caught sight of this figure to daylight was probably an hour and a half, but it seemed to me as if I lived five years. I had no hope that the man was a friend, and yet I could not look for a new enemy. Perhaps, after all, it was only one of the refugee negroes, of whom scores were hiding in the swamps, who had made his way to the scow in hopes to lay hands on provisions or clothing. I kept my eye on the spot where I had last seen him, and as he did not reappear, I began to feel that he had slipped back into the water and returned to the shore.

Did you ever watch the coming of daylight when you felt that with it might come some life or death transaction? The first sign came from the birds. Then, afar up the lake came the cries of waterfowl. A fox or some other animal stood on the shore near where we had tied up the night before and barked in an angry voice. The stars paled and drifted out of sight, and the interior of the cabin began to light up until I could distinguish the forms of the sleepers.

Where was the strange man—friend or enemy? As if in response to my query he suddenly rose up, stepped inside the door, and the next instant a revolver began to crack and a voice shouted at me:

"Keep down, Colonel; hug the floor!"

I rolled over on my face and I heard yell, screams and groans. It was all over in thirty seconds, and some one called: "All right, Colonel—I've wiped the varmints out!"

I sprang up to find Jackson standing in the center of the cabin, and on the floor lay the outlaw, wife and children, all dead. It was as I argued the day previous. The two men had separated in the woods—Sheen to return directly to camp and Jackson to hunt for game for supper. The outlaw had ambushed Sheen and killed him; and Jackson had heard the report of the gun and become suspicious. He hurried to the camp to find me gone and everything taken, and had traced us to the lake. He found indications to prove that a boat had been used, and he followed the shore of the lake down until he found the scow at anchor.

Not one man in a thousand would have shown his nerve. He knew of the alligators, could see a dozen of them moving about, and yet he disrobed, tied his weapons across his head and swam straight for the scow, and reached it unmolested. He saw that the only way was to wipe out all the gang, and as soon as daylight would guide his aim he began his work.

When we had buried our comrade we made a close searce of the floating cabin and we found indisputable proof of the murder of five or six persons. In an old wooden bucket were two gold and three silver watches, several pocket knives, half a dozen rings, and $325 in gold, silver and greenbacks. As none of these articles could be traced back to their owners, and as vengeance had overtaken the murderers, we felt no hesitation in taking possession of everything for the benefit of Sheen's widow.

The last act was to set fire to the scow and push it out into the lake. It was as merciful to consign the bodies to the flames as to see the alligators fight over them. Such human wolves did not deserve burial.—[N. Y. Sun.

THE PROPER THING.

Satteens will be again largely worn.

Draperies will be worn both long and short.

White dresses will be neatly covered with embroidery next season.

Blue chemises to be restored to favor for spring and summer dresses.

Both full waists and smooth basques will be worn the coming season.

Summer homespuns are shown in plain grounds, in wide diagonals and stripes.

The seersucker blue stripes are again shown in plain surfaces and also crinkled.

Spring wraps will be close fitting, matching the costume in color and fabric.

Velvet bretelles, velvet colars and cuffs, and velvet belts and sashes will enrich wash dresses.

The fact is settled that striped and bordered stuffs will be popular in the spring for street suits.

The new cotton goods are very handsome. They resemble India silks in their softness, in colors, and designs.

Scotch ginghams are in stripes and bars of a quarter inch to two inches wide, in shades of blue, pink or red with white.

Guimpes of white muslin gathered high about the throat, and worn with a dog-collar of velvet or of embroidery, will be a feature of cotton dresses next season.

The new wool goods for early spring and summer dresses repeat the etamine or canvass grounds introduced last summer, with many new fancies in decorating them.

There is really very little change from last season in the styles for dressing the hair. More ornaments are used than for many years.

For thin arms a pretty suggestion is that of making coat sleeves plain from the waists up to half-way above the elbow, when they are gathered in the lengthwise seams to make fullness across the upper arm.

Wise Words.

Let friendship gently creep to a height; if it rush to it, it may soon run itself out of breath.

It is no help to a sailor to see a flash of light across a darkness, if he does not instantly steer accordingly.

In studying character, do not be blind to the shortcomings of a warm friend or the virtues of a bitter enemy.

The petty annoyances of life should be seized upon as occasion for the cultivation of patience and forbearance.

'Tis an ill thing to be ashamed of one's poverty; but worse not to make use of lawful endeavors to avoid it.

Words are spiritual forces, angels to blessing or of cursing. Unuttered, we control them; uttered, they control us.

Nothing is so important as having some clear, definite purpose in life. There is no tragedy so sad as that of a wasted life.

A man who strives earnestly and perseveringly to convince others, at least convinces us that he is convinced himself.

There is nothing so demoralizing in business nowadays as the chance element; and in the long run, nothing so disastrous.

As we grow in years and experience, we become more tolerant, for it is rare to see a fault we have not ourselves committed.

Weddings often leave old familiar hearts and places haunted and empty as funerals. They are the funerals of old associations.

COST OF THE NEW CAPITOL.

The Sum of $17,000,000 Expended and the Building Still Unfinished.

The report of Charles B. Andrews, superintendent of public buildings, was presented to the legislature on Friday. Referring to the new capitol he says: Up to this time the sum of $17,000,000 has been expended in the construction department alone. The finished portion of the building contains over 6,000,000 cubic feet and has over thirty miles of water, steam and gas pipes. To furnish the necessary heat nearly 3.000 tons of coal are required, while 6,000,000 cubic feet of gas are consumed in giving the necessary light, in addition to that furnished by electricity. These two items of heat and light enter far more largely into the cost of maintenance than all the others, with the exception of service.

Considering that a greater part of a generation has passed since the original plans for the structure were prepaired; that for years it was deemed a fair field for patronage; that it has been subjected to repeated changes in administrative control that vast improvements have been made in almost every department of the art of building, it is not strange that many and serious mistakes were made, which can only be remedied by great expenditure of money and time. Of the mistakes made, that of placing the boilers which furnish steam for heating and motive power in the basement of the building was probably the greatest.

The construction of the new boiler house has been pushed with all possible vigor. With it's completion the danger of bursting boilers which has so long menanced the structure, will be swept away, and the annoyances and injury resulting from the distribution of dust and ashes and foul gases through the building will be entirely averted. The annual cost of gas, according to the most accurate metre measurement possible, together with electric lighting, involves an expense of over $20,000. It is hoped, however, that when the system of lighting the building by electricity is fully perfected, the aggregate cost of artificial lightwill be somewhat reduced.

The superintendant recommends an appropriation of $35.000 to fit up the space left after the removal of the old boilers for better accommodation of the electric-light plant, and the purchase of another engine to supplement the one now in use and to take its place when the whole light plant is not required to be run. The report closes as follows:

The amount received from the treasurer during the past year $154.608; stock on hand January 1, 1885, $364; total, $154,973. The expenditures were as follows: Capitol maintenance, $137,169; state hall, $10,300; geological hall, $4.691; executive mansion, $2,561; stock on hand January 1, 1886, $309; total $154,973. I estimate that it will require for care and maintenance of the public buildings for the fiscal year beginning October 1, 1886, the sum of $150,000, itemized as follows: Pay roll of employes, $90,000; fuel, $18,000; gas and electric lighting, $20,000; water, $3,000; general merchandise, $9,000: repairs, $10,000.—[Troy Times.

J. H. Bates, of New York, has for thirty years been engaged in advertising in newspapers in city and country. He testifies: "It agrees with my experience that newspaper advertising is profitable. As I look back over the very considerable number of those whose advertising I have done, I do not now recall a single one who judiciously, perseveringly and freely published good articles, of whatever kinds, in the newspapers, and did not make at least a fair success, while a great many have gained ample fortunes. When business men come to look on the cost of steady newspaper advertising as an investment sure to pay as well as any other, and not unlikely to be exceedingly profitable, they will use it more systematically than heretofore, and regard it as a necessary item of expense."

WHAT WARNER'S SAFE CURE
CURES AND WHY.

[illegible]

INFLAMMATION OF THE KIDNEYS, BLADDER OR URINARY ORGANS.

Catarrh of the Bladder, Gravel, Stone, Dropsy, Enlarged Prostate Gland, Impotency or General Debility, Bright's Disease.

WHY? Because it is the only remedy known that has power to expel the uric acid and urea, of which there are some 500 grains secreted each day as the result of muscular action, and sufficient if retained in the blood to kill six men. It is the direct cause of all the the above diseases, as well as of heart disease, rheumatism, apoplexy, paralysis, insanity and death.

This great specific relieves the kidneys of too much blood, frees them from all irritants, restores them to healthy action by its certain and soothing power.

IT CURES ALSO Jaundice, Enlargement of the Liver, Abscess, and, Catarrh of the Bile ducts, Biliousness, Headache, Furred Tongue, Sleeplessness, Langor, Debility, Constipation, Gall Stones, and every unpleasant symptom which results from Liver Complaint.

WHY? Because it has a specific and positive action on the liver as well as on the kidneys, increasing the secretion and flow of bile, regulates its elaborating function, removes unhealthy formations, and in a word, restores it to natural activity, without which health is an impossibility.

IT CURES ALSO Female Complaints, Leucorrhœa, Displacements, Enlargments, Ulcerations, Painful Menstruation, makes pregnancy safe, prevents Convulsions and Child-Bed Fever and aids nature by restoring functional activity.

WHY? All these troubles, as is well known by every physician of education, arises from Congestion and impaired kidney action, causing stagnation of the blood vessels and breaking down, and this is the beginning and the direct cause of all the ailments from which women suffer, and must as surely follow as night does the day.

WHY? Warner's Safe Cure is acknowledged by thousands of our best medical men to be the only true blood purifier, is because it acts upon scientific principles, striking at the very root of the disorder by its action on the kidneys and liver. For if these organs were kept in health, all the morbid waste matter so deadly poisonous if retained in the body, is passed out. On the contrary, If they are deranged, the acids are taken up by the bood, decomposing it and carrying death to the most remote part of the body.

WHY? 93 per cent. of all deseases which afflict humanity, arises from impaired kidneys, as is shown by medical authorities. Warner's Safe Cure, by its direct action, positively restores them to health and full working capacity, nature curing all the above diseases herself when the cause is removed, and we guarantee that Warner's Safe Cure is a positive preventive if taken in time.

As you value health take it to avoid sickness, as it will at all times and under all circumstances keep all the vital functions up to par.

We also Guarantee a Cure and beneficial effect for each of the foregoing diseases, also that every case of liver and kidney trouble can be cured where degeneration has Not taken place, and even then Benefit will Surely be Derived. In every instance it has established its claim.

AS A BLOOD PURIFIER, particularly in the Spring, it is unequalled, for you cannot have pure blood when the kidneys or liver are out of order.

Look to Your Condition at Once.

Do not postpone Treatment for a day nor an hour. The Doctors cannot Compare Records with us. Give yourself thorough constitutional treatment with Warner's Safe Cure, and there are yet many years of life and health assured you!

How rapidly the men who saved the Union are disappearing! Grant, McClellan and Hancock, all gone within a few months. But though they die to earth, their names and fame are immortal.

"You may laugh and think me a vain thing," writes Mrs. J. R. C., of San Francisco, to a friend in this city, "but I have not a gray hair in my head, and yet (sad to say) I am fifty and a day. Recently my hair was not only quite gray but quite thin, too. Parker's Hair Balsam—made in New York I think—did wonders for me. Try it if you have occasion. It really does what I say, and restores the color also." Not a dye, not greasy, highly perfumed. Only reliable 50c. dressing. 39w4.

Hood's Sarsaparilla, the great blood purifier and regulating medicine, is characterized by three peculiarities, namely:

1st: The combination of the various remedial agents used.

2d: The proportion in which the roots, herbs, barks, etc., are mixed.

3d: The process by which the active medicinal properties are secured.

The result is a medicine of unusual strength and curative power, which effects cures heretofore unequalled. These peculiarities belong exclusively to Hood's Sarsaparilla, and are

JAS. R. FAIRGRIEVE - EDITOR

It is somewhat appalling when we think of the number of prominent men that have been cut down by the inevitable hand of Death during the past year. Nearly every profession has been stripped of some of its brightest lights. Men who by their achievements have reached the highest pinnacle of success in this world and whom it seemed the country could scarcely afford to lose.

Among those that have attained a high position in political life may be found the names Chas. W. Folger, Schuyler Colfax, Edgar K. Apgar, F. T. Frelinghuysen, Thomas A. Hendricks, B. Gratz Brown, and Horatio Seymour. Among those of Millitary and Naval fame are Real Admiral George H. Preble, General Irwin McDowell, Gen. U. S. Grant, Gen. Robert Toombs, Gen. Geo. B. McClellan, and Gen. W. S. Hancock. The literary world deplores the loss of Francis Drake, the historian, F. J. Fargus (Hugh Conway) Victor Hugo, Henry W. Shaw, (Josh Billings.) Rev. Dr. Stephen H. Tyng, and Cardinal John W. McCosky, have also finished their life work.

Vacancies have been left in the financial world by the deaths of Cornelius K. Garrison, J. H. Rutter, president of the N. Y. C. & H. R. Railroad, Chas J. Osborn, broker, and William Vanderbilt, the Crœsus of the nineteenth century. The bench has lost such men as ex-Judge Geo. W. Clinton and Henry R. Sheldon. Among others that can be mentioned are Isaac W. England publisher of the New York Sun, William Page, the artist, Dr. Brown, President of Hamilton college, John McCullough, the actor, Horace Claflin, the merchant, Stephen Guion, the ship owner and Dr. Gustavus Nachtigal, the great African explorer.

JOHN B. GOUGH, the temperence advocate, was attacked with a stroke of apoplexy last Monday evening while delivering a lecture at the Frankford Presbyterian church in Philadelphia. The physicians pronounce his condition as serious.

THE jury in the case of James Dixon, colored, who was tried for the murder of James Cooper, colored, brought in a verdict of murder in the second degree last Friday and Dixon has been sentenced to Auburn prison for life. The murder was committed in Syracuse on the 24th of last November.

FUNERAL services were held over the remains of Gen. Hancock in Trinity church, New York city, last Saturday afternoon. After the services the procession proceeded to the Pennsylvania depot where a train made up of four cars carried the party to Norristown, where the body of the illustrious dead was laid to rest.

DURING the past week another prominent man has departed this life in the person of Horatio Seymour, who died in Utica at 10 o'clock last Friday evening. He had been five times candidate of the democrats for governor of this state, had twice been elected to that high office and was the candidate of his party for president in 1868. For over forty years he had been a recognized leader of the democrat party and often urged to accept positions which he had refused. Few men have held the positions, have appeared so prominently and so long before the public and retained the esteem and affections of the people, irrespective of party, to such an extent as he. His funeral took place yesterday from Trinity church, Utica.

CHARLES HERMANN, a native of Russia was hanged in Buffalo last Friday for the murder of his wife. With his last breath he accused another man of being the cause of his crime and attacked the jury that convicted him. The crime for which Hermann was hanged was the murder of his wife, Eva Hermann, by cutting her throat with a razor at their home, 58 Blossom alley, Buffalo, on the night of Nov. 1, 1885. The murder was not discovered until the third day after it was committed, and on that afternoon Hermann was arrested. Soon afterward he admitted that he cut his wife' throat. He said that on the morning of Monday, Nov. 1, his wife told him that she was going out, but would not tell him where she was going, and this so angered him that he threw her on the floor, and drawing his razor from his pocket, cut her throat. He then threw the body on the bed and threw a quilt over it, after which he went out and got drunk. On his return he was admitted by his landlady, and went straight to his bedroom, and laid down and slept beside his murdered wife. That he was at home and occupied the room with the [illegible] Monday and Tuesday nights [illegible] by the statement of the [illegible]. He was convicted on [illegible]

The inquest in the Converse case at Rose resulted in a verdict that Mrs. Converse came to her death from injuries inflicted by her husband, David B. Converse, who is under arrest. His examination is in progress. He will be held on the charge.

Anthony Dasney, a Central-Hudson brakeman, was found on the track about two miles from Schenectady Friday evening, unconscious, with his scull fractured and a broken arm. It is thought he fell from the top of a car.

A cocking main was fought near Northeast Saturday night between Syracuse, Buffalo and Erie. The main was for $500, and $50 a fight. It was won by Syracuse. Erie and Buffalo got a fight each. The fowls were nearly all killed. Syracuse recently won a main from Erie.

Patrick S. Gilmore gave two concerts with his band of 150 musicians at Madison Square garden Saturday afternoon and evening for the benefit of the Parnell fund. About 4,000 attended in the afternoon and 8,000 to 9,000 in the evening. It is believed that the net proceeds for the fund will be about $6,000.

The Late Senator McCarthy.

Dennis McCarthy of Syracuse began official life as an Assemblyman, to which office he was elected in 1845, when Horatio Seymour was speaker of the body. He was Mayor of Syracuse in 1853, a member of the fortieth and forty-first Congress, in 1867 to 1871. But his main service to the public was as State Senator, to which position he was elected at elections preceding the last in his district. His large success as a business man, his clearness of thought and good work in the body itself, gave him prominence. In the session of 1883 there was no choice of President for the body, but Mr. McCarthy was the nominee of the Republican caucus. In the preceding session he had succeeded Senator Robertson, when he became collector, and in 1884 he was president pro tempore. Senator McCarthy was a good representative, honest and capable, a credit to his party and his district.—[Utica Herald.

Joseph Hover, of the firm of Hover & Fisher, for forty-three years connected with the flouring business in Oswego died Sunday, aged 72 years.

In the assembly the bill abolishing the Recorder's court in Oswego and Mr. Howe's bill increasing the salaries of county officers, have been reported favorably.

The Board of Supervisors met Thursday afternoon and elected E. E. McKinstry county treasurer in place of George Goodier, deceased. He was a clerk in Mr. Goodier's office.

Teachers examination will be held at the following named times and places: Williamstown March 5, 1886; Sandy Creek, March 6; Pulaski, March 8; Mexico, March 9; Central Square, March 10; Cleveland, March 11; Phœnix, March 12; Parish, March 13.

The decision in the case of Father O'Connell has been rendered. He was found guilty of two of the charges made against him, acquitted of two and five were decided not to have been proved. His sentence is that he be suspended one month and be removed from Oswego. The charges on which he is convicted are speculating and cursing his enemies.

GENERAL NEWS.

R. G. Dun & Co., report that 238 failures occurred in the United States during the past week.

Mr. Pulitzer has introduced a bill granting a pension of $5,000 a year to the widow of Gen. Hancock.

Lewis Willet has been re-sentenced to be hanged, March 12, in Kingston for the murder of Edwin Kelland.

Seven hundred and fifty thousand dollars in gold bars have been engaged for shipment from New York to Europe.

The freshets of the past few days has caused heavy damage, especially in New England and in low-lying towns in this State on the banks of the Hudson and Mohawk.

Lulu Hurst, the girl who made many thousand dollars by exhibiting her alleged electric powers, is now a student in Shorter Female College.

Moody and Sankey are drawing such immense crowds in New Orleans that the Washington Artillery Hall where they have their meetings will not begin to hold the throngs.

It is a notable fact that on Monday last the period of mourning in the army prescribed for the late Gen. Grant ceased, and on Tuesday came orders to put on badges of mourning for Gen. Hancock, who died that day.

The 75 hour walking match at Williamsport, closed Saturday evening. There were 2,500 people present. The closing score stood: Burns, 269 miles 2 laps; Hart, 251 miles 1 lap; Harriman, 248 miles, Hanley, 237 miles.

Mrs. Elizabeth Tilton, the wife of Theodore Tilton, who, since her separation from her husband on account of the Beecher scandal, has resided with her mother, Mrs. Moore, in Brooklyn, has become a resident of Chicago, making her home with her daughter, Alice.

In New York the sale by the sheriff of real estate belonging to the Western Union Telegraph company, to satisfy a judgment of [illegible] was adjourned Friday, until March 12, notwithstanding the opposition of the Attorney General. It is thought the matter will be settled.

The immense quantity of peanuts grown in Africa, South America, and in our own Southern States afford not only a pleasant article of food, but a very large amount of [illegible] [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] of the [illegible] [illegible] Secretary of War had issued [illegible] for a reception to the officers of [illegible] army, navy and marine corps for the evening that Gen. Hancock's death was announced. Of course the invitations were immediately countermanded.

The House of Representatives adjourned when notified of the General's death, while the Senate very commendably proceeded as usual with business. It must be conceded, there is no sense or appropriateness in shutting down on such business under such circumstances. It is a meaningless, pernicious custom for Congress to adjourn in consequence of any death, and a change of rules in this respect will be welcomed by the whole country. No real respect is shown for the diseased in this way. Congressmen enjoy each adjournment of this kind as any other holiday, while the time is wasted and public affairs neglected.

The Senate has continued the silver debate during the week and has discussed public education besides. Then there has been open debate on the vital question of the Presidential prerogative. While Senator Edmunds was detained at home with a sore throat, President pro tem. Sherman walked down from the Chair, and quite unexpectedly opened an attack upon the White House, pleading absolute power of the Senate, over all information as to the character of appointees. There has also been during the week, some important secret sessions of the Senate in which certain confirmations were opposed by Republican Senators.

The Woman Suffragists are marshalling their forces preparatory to swooping down on Washington again next Wednesday for the eighteenth annual time. Miss Susan B. Anthony has been here for some weeks perfecting arrangements for this convention, which will be attended by distinguished advocates of female sufferage from all parts of the country. Miss Anthony is as enerjetic as ever in her work, and is as sanguine of the final success of the cause as when she first began to struggle for it fifty years ago.

The principal object of this association has been to secure to the women of the several states and territories, national protection in the citizen's right to vote, through a sixteenth amendment to the Constitution. They say they do not expect to get the amendment this Congress, but they will get the matter discussed, and in a few years they expect to get what they want.

"What we are after now," said Miss Anthony, "is simply a discussion of the subject. The more it is discussed, the more popular it will become. We know," continued she, "Who our enemies in Congress are and how many. We do not expect to convert them, but as they drop out they will be replaced by men of more advanced views on all the great issues of the age, including woman suffrage."

She agrees with the opinion recently expressed by Senator Edmunds that the majority of women of the United States do not want to vote. She accounts for this on the ground that it is something new, and that many women of conventional ideas are opposed to anything new until they have studied the question.

The advocates of woman suffrage claim to have made great progress in Senatorial favor. They hold that twenty-six Senators are in favor of giving women the ballot. They cite instances to prove that this number have declared themselves openly as their supporters, while they say they cannot tell how many silent friends they may have in the upper House.

A Senator asked Miss Anthony how the women expected to do anything with Congress until they had carried the school districts. She told him they could not reach the school districts except through the speeches made in the Senate. "What we want," said she, "is to get a vote in the Senate, and to send the speeches all over the country." She thinks the speech made in favor of female enfranchisement last Congress by Senator Palmer of Michigan did a wonderful amount of good. Senator Palmer is called the philosophical millionaire. He utters epigrams on life. He lives in one of the most elegant houses in Washington, but he says his greatest difficulty is in keeping up his illusions, and that there is no possible chance for any man to be happy without them.

SUPREME COURT—OSWEGO COUNTY.
The Fulton Savings Bank against Alzina Hubbard and others. In pursuance and by virtue of a judgment and decree of foreclosure and sale duly rendered in the above entitled action and entered in the clerk's office of the county of Oswego, on the sixteenth day of February, 1886, I the undersigned, sheriff of Oswego county, to whom it was referred in and by said judgment to make such sale will sell at public auction at the law office of Giles S. Piper, in the Village of Fulton, in said county of Oswego, on the 3rd day of April, 1886, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of that day, the real estate and premises in and by said judgment and decree directed to be sold, and described therein as follows, to wit: All that tract or parcel of land situate in the Town of Granby, County of Oswego, and State of New York, and being a part of Lot number twenty-seven (27) in said Town of Granby, beginning at the north-west corner of said piece of land, running from thence south thirty degrees east along the highway three chains and fifty links; thence south thirty-seven degrees east six chains; thence south thirty one degrees east three chains and sixty-five links intersecting the highway running east and south-west; thence west five chains and thirty links to the east line of Lot number 28; thence north along said line three chains and three links to a stake; thence west twenty-one chains and twenty-four links to a stake near the woodland; thence north twenty-four degrees west eight chains and forty-three links to the south line of a certain twenty acres deeded to Alzina Allen, now Hubbard; thence east along said line to the highway and place of beginning containing twenty acres and seventy seven one hundredths of an acre of land excepting and reserving the right of way through said piece of land for said Allen to go through as stated in deed from Weston Allen to William Hubbard dated August 21, 1852.

A HANDSOME STOVE. AN EXCELLENT HEATER.
AN ECONOMICAL STOVE. A PERFECT VENTILATOR.

☞ A good Base Burner of any kind will heat a room, but it also destroys and burns up the life principle of the air. Foul air if hot will not keep a person warm. The Howe Ventilating Stove warms the room and keeps the air pure. It Ventilates the room at the same time that it heats it. Cold, fresh air is taken into the Stove through a pipe from the outside of the house. Fresh air passes into the Stove, is heated and passes into the room through the open top, while the foul, impure air being heavier than fresh, pure heated air drops dead to the floor, is forced into a flue in the Stove and is drawn through a small pipe in the smoke pipe into the chimney and escapes with the smoke.

The Rajah.

This, one of the great successes of the Madison Square Theatre is to be present. ed at the Opera House, next Saturday evening. The New York Times of Feb. 2d says: "The Rajah," a bright little comedy still traveling from the momentum of a run of 250 consecutive nights at the Madison Square Theatre, halted on the stage of the Third Avenue Theatre last night, accompanied by a playbill announcment that is was going to stay all the week. The actors who carried the piece through with flattering success were J. G. Saville as the Rajah, a model of imperturbable langor and East India indolence; Miss Rillie Deaves as Gladys Wyncott, ward of the Rajah, who by pretty dressing and obstinate behavior, succeeds in making him fall in love with her; Mr. Sedley Brown, as Richard Jocelyn, who, by saying smart things and continually trying to get into hopeless difficulties, manages to make Glady's charming companion Emilia Jekyll (Miss Ethel Brandon) fall in love with him; Miss Robson as the talkative Mrs. Pringle. Mr. B. W. Singer as the irrepressible Buttons, and Mr. E. L. Walton as an amusing, self-made, but wholly indiscreet lawyer. Reserved seats for sale at Watson's.

An Attractive Place.

Cards are out announcing the marriage on the 25th inst., of Dr. E. C. VanDusen of Cato, to Miss Jennie Squyre of Ira. The ceremony will take place at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Ellen Squyre. The twain are well and favorably known in Fulton, and have the best wishes of many friends.

Miss Jane Broadwell is canvassing this village and Oswego Falls for the People's Family Atlas of the world. An atlas is one of the indispensible books in every well ordered library. To make that atlas valuable, it should be comprehensive, complete and accurate. The last edition of the People's Family Atlas of the World. recently issued, satisfies these conditions, and is worthy of high praise.

Last fall a smooth tongued stranger visited this vicinity and sold to a large number of people in Fulton and Granby, bulbs of a very "rare and beautiful flower," which he called "Roman Lillies." He charged the nominal price of $2 per dozen for the bulbs. Mrs. Graham of Lower Oswego Falls has one of the alleged lilies in bloom. Other purchasers of the bulbs should by all means call at Mrs. Graham's and see the "rare (?) Roman lily" in all its lovliness. Yea verily, "Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these."

A report has been current on the streets for a day or two that the N. Y., O. & W. railroad company were talking of building a large new freight and passenger depot on the site of the present one. It was said that Rust's lot on Oneida street had been purchased and that this lot would be used as an alleyway, enabling teams to drive in and load or unload freight and then drive out through the alley adjoining McNamara's store on Second street. The railroad company own a large section of the block between Cayuga and Oneida which would make a very desirable site for a depot. It is to be hoped that the rumor will prove true.

Railroad Accident.

The N. Y. O. & W. train that leaves Fulton at 9:10 p. m., last Saturday morning when near Middletown, ran into a washout, ditching the entire train. The washout was about six feet in length, and the train approached it at a speed of twenty miles an hour. The engine jumped the depression and ran down the bank thirty feet, landing on its side. The baggage car ran at a right angle into a stream of water. In the day coach were fifteen passengers, who made their escape through the windows. The sleeping coach "West Point" turned over on its side and stopped in a gully made by the washout. It contained six passengers, including the president of the road, T. B. Fowler; general manager, J. E. Childs and other officers of the road, who had been on a tour of inspection, all of whom escaped injury. The casualties were:

Killed—George St. John, engineer; crushed beneath the boiler: leaves a family at Middletown.

Injured—Mrs. Hannah McIntosh, an aged lady; badly cut on the shoulders, legs and arms; her teeth cut her lower lip so that the surgeon had to remove a portion of it.

V. A. Bossett, of Oswego; severely bruised.

Rev. J. S. Johnson, of Madison University, Hamilton, N. Y.; spine injured and hurt internally.

Brakeman Harry Knapp, baggage master Oscar Robbins and express messenger Harry Cadet were also slightly hurt.

A Narrow Escape.

Richer Hall, a young man about twenty years of age, who resides in the eastern part of the village, boarded the noon train Saturday on the S. P. & O. railroad, with the intention it was said, of going to Syracuse. When the train reached Broadway, the young man suddenly changed his mind and concluded he would not go, and, not wishing to trouble the train hands to stop and let him off, he quietly stepped from the rapidly moving train. For a few moments the spectators were treated to the unusual spectacle of a young man trying to write his name in the air with his feet. The attempt was not a gratifying success, and the young man was picked up and taken to a neighboring house where he lay unconcious for some time. A doctor was called and upon examination found no serious injuries. The young man later on recovered sufficiently to be taken home. Had he been sober he would in all probability have been killed.

Oswego's New Steamer.

The city of Oswego has purchased a new Button steam fire engine and at the trial, which occurred Monday, the superiority of the Button engine over the Silsby was fully demonstrated. In one of the tests the Button steamer was started with ice cold water, and in three minutes the steam gauge indicated fifteen pounds, in five minutes thirty pounds, and in ten seconds later water was at the nozzle. Two tests were made. Through 150 feet of hose a 2 inch stream was thrown 180 feet. Same hose 1¾ inch nozzle, distance 222 feet, 2 inches. This was done with a strong wind from the north blowing across the stream. The new engine gave splendid satisfaction and was unanimously accepted by the fire commissioners.

Falling Walls.

About 10 o'clock last Saturday evening the walls of Columbia Hall which was recently burnt in Oswego fell in with a heavy crash. It was near the theatre in which Barlow, Wilson & Rankin's Minstrels were giving their performance and very nearly caused a panic. Geo. Wilson was entertaining the audience at the time and immediately grasped the occasion to allay what might easily have proved a most disastrous affair. "Keep quiet," he said, "it is only the roof of the building falling in. A person is in danger always—in the city as well as in the country. I went out in the country not long since and had not gone far before two hens laid for me." This created a laugh and quieted the audience.

The Smith Cheese Factory.

Joseph Connors who has for several years been employed as cheese maker by Harvey Smith, will this year lease the Smith factory and commence making cheese in the fore part of April. Mr. Connors has made himself very popular with the patrons of the factory and we predict for him a successful season. A meeting of the patrons will be held at the factory March 1 1886.

Only an Hour Late.

While Fred Mott, aged 18, was preparing for his wedding with Laura Farnham, aged 19, at Oswego Monday, he was arrested on charge of abducting Emma Bougie, October 25. He gave bail for $500, and drove off to the ceremony, arriving an hour late, and was married to Miss Farnham in St. Mary's church.

of [illegible] a little village, situated in a gorge between the hills facing the river. After we left this place we turned to the south, or a little east of south and followed the bank of the river with very high banks on our right, and the river a little below on our left. Being a bright moonlight night, we had a beautiful view of the river, in some places over a mile wide, and the high banks of hills with now and then a gorge or niche, in which were situated beautiful farm buildings or small villages. The first place of much importance was Dubuque, containing 25,000 inhabitants, pleasantly situated on the rising ground back from the river. It does a large amount of business, among which it is noted for its sawmills where a very large amount of lumber is sawed from logs brought many miles down the river. After passing several villages we arrived at Sabula, where we crossed to Savannah, in Illinois. It is a nice place and a number of railroads tracks center here. We passed swiftly through Illinois going through some very nice farms and some nice towns and large villages, among which was Elgin, noted for its watch making factory.

We arrived early in Chicago and had the privilege of driving through some of its busy streets, where but a few years ago were nothing but burnt ruins. We saw the stock yards and many other sights that were new to us. After leaving Chicago we passed on our way to Jackson, Mich., Niles containing 6,000 inhabitants, Kalamazoo, with 35,000 inhabitants, the seat of an insane asylum, and noted as the largest village in the United States; Battle Creek, 10,000 inhabitants and noted for its agricultural works, vibrating threshing machines &c., and arrived at Jackson in the evening. Jackson is the seat of the states prison and contains 43,500 inhabitants. Here we remained over night. On the cars before we got to Jackson we noticed a fellow who appeared but half witted, who said he was going to Jackson to make a payment of $100 on a mortgage for his widowed mother, and he said he had it tied up in her handkerchief. In the evening he was in a drug store and carelessly leaning on the show case he broke a large glass. The proprietor demanded $5 but he plead poverty, said he was very sorry and had only $100 his mother sent by him to pay a mortgage and he did not like to break that, but the proprietor insisted and he offered his mother's $100 bill and said "give me $95 and I will go home and get another $5. The person gave him $95 and the fellow left for home. The next morning the drug man took the $100 to deposit in the bank and found it was a counterfeit, and the foolish fellow has not been found yet.

Thursday morning, the 21st, we went out north on a side railroad to our friends in Mich. and staid two weeks, renewing our acquaintance, and in enjoying the hospitality of several Michigan farmers. They are all well to do, have nice farms, a large stock, fine buildings and there appeared to be plenty in their houses and barns for some time to come. What life so happy as the prosperous farmers.

On Saturday, the 6th inst. we came into Toledo, after having been gone from here just ten months. We noticed quite an improvement in the city in that time. Many large buildings have been put up, new streets opened and other improvements made.

We expect to remain here for a month and then start homeward bound.

Hiram Lodge Entertained.

About thirty members of Hiram Lodge No. 144 F. and A. M. of this village attended a reception given to them by the Oswego Lodge last evening. Extensive preparations had been made to give the visitors a warm reception in return for their pleasant visit to this village not long since; an elaborate and most elegant bill of fare was furnished, plates being laid for one hundred members. After a most delightful evening, the members of Hiram Lodge were escorted to the depot by a large delegation of the Oswego Lodge and they returned home by a special train.

The Case of J. D. Spencer.

The examination in the case of John D. Spencer of Mexico charged with taking from the Mexico post office mail matter, is being tried before U. S. Commisioner Getty in Oswego. The first witness sworn was Mrs. Stephen Clifford of Mexico, who testified to having seen the Easter eggs, which Spencer is said to have stolen, hanging in the home of Miss Barnes at different times during the last summer. John D. Spencer, the accused, was the next witness called and testified that he had never seen the eggs until they were brought up in court. His cross-examination is in progress.

Rivalry Among Barbers.

C. C. Hewes, the First street barber, is feeling much elated over the advent of an eight-and-one-half-pound daughter, which occurred last Wednesday.

Louis Goman, the Oneida street barber, not to be outdone, calmly steps up and reports the receipt of a valentine, Sunday, in the shape of a fine, bouncing girl. There are still four more barbers to hear from. "Next!"

AGRICULTURAL DEPARTMENT.

Worth Knowing.

All the profit in farming comes from crops above the average yield.

On farm subjects no man can hit the nail on the head more forcibly than the farmer.

The breed of hens, that lay in winter, are the ones that are best cared for.

The farmer that gets the most eggs is the one that gets up earliest and secures to his flock a good warm breakfast by daylight.

The heaviest hog at the recent Chicago Fat-Stock show was a Duroc-Jersey barrow weighing 672 pounds and 524 days old. It was an animal of very fine bone and broad back.

Turn as much of your grain into meat as is possible, and thus increase your manure pile. It is more profitable than selling the grain.

Do not allow the stock to be out on the early rye pasture but a short time each day at first, as changes of diet often cause bowel disease.

Clover hay cut and steeped over night in warm water makes a good mess for a brood sow that is expected to farrow during the summer season.

Cream makes better butter to rise in cold air than in cold water, and the milk will keep sweet longer.

Onions may be set out just as soon as the frost leaves the ground.

Never allow stock of any kind to come in contact with your trees. You might as well never plant a young tree as to allow cattle, horses, pigs or sheep to get at it for a day.

Probably the most successful public sale of an entire and large herd of Portland-China swine ever made was that of D. L. Thomas of Rushville, Ind., Nov. 18th, last. One hundred and fifteen head, big and little, old and young, averaged within a few cents of $17 per head.

Do Animals Think.

A great deal has been written to show that animals think and reason, just as man does, though in a lower degree. Perhaps some of our readers may notice things in animals which show that they have a great deal of intelligence, even if they do not reason. Mr. Paul Brocca, the French author, devoted much attention to this subject. It has been said of animals, writes Mr. Brocca, that their actions are always mechanical and always without method. This may be true of domestic pets, who are influenced almost entirely by the human beings around them, but does not the beaver change his plans, acting now as builder, now as miner, according to circumstances? Besides this, everyone knows that the bee frequently substitutes pentagonal, or five-sided, for hexagonal, or six-sided cells, and that this alternation in the work is made only when necessary. It has also been said that animals do not reason. What then is done by the foxes, which in Thrace, are driven on to the ice to test its strength? These animals step carefully and lightly, with their heads inclined, and turned back suddenly, directly they discover by the sound of the ice cracking, that it is not safe to proceed farther. A dog, which, in following a scent, arrives at a cross road is seen to stop, consider for a moment, then plunge along one of the roads, sniffing cautiously, turn back and try another road in the same manner, and finally darts unhesitatingly down the third. It is evident that his logic tells him that his prey has not taken one of the first two roads examined, it must have necessarily have taken the third road, so he does not waste time in further investigation. That this is not mere instinct is shown by the fact that a dog sometimes makes a mistake in such a case, and that when the fact becomes evident, he slinks out of sight of the hunters, looking a picture of shame and humiliation.

Foresight is a quality the possession of which no one will deny to ants and bees, and the former certainly have a sense of compassion. This is displayed in the tender care bestowed on the wounded during the terrible battles fought between different tribes of ants. The suffering and helpless ones are not left to perish, but are carried off of the battlefield by a regular "ambulance-corps." No one doubts the existence of memory in animals, and as to ambition, is it necessary to recount the pitched battles which take place in bee-hives between the different candidates for royalty? How can one pretend that man only has the gift of language! He must be blind indeed who does not see that all animals have some means of communication with each other. To give only one example: There is no possible doubt that ants make themselves understood by their fellows, by means of the touch of their delicate, sensitive, antennæ or feelers. Before a war, a council is held, and messengers hurry about. Scouts or spies are sent out, and the attack is hastened or postponed, according to their reports. All this could not be done without a very complete method of communication, for the giving and receiving of orders, etc. Morever, if animals had no language, how could they teach their young? That they do teach them is evident from the fact of young foxes in countries where the animals are hunted, being infinitely more wary than full-grown ones in other lands! How else are we to account for this than by saying that the parent foxes tell their danger, and to avoid it?—[American Agriculturist.

There is scarcely [illegible] who feeds hay properly, and the [illegible] may be said with equal truth of [illegible] who own, work or feed horses of all kinds in our cities and towns. While it may not be generally known or suspected, it is no doubt a fact, that quite a large list of the ailments to which horse flesh is heir is due to the improper use of hay, not merely of hay which is damaged or is of improper kind, but the way it is fed. Many feeders cram the mangers full of hay all the time, and the horses stuff themselves with it until they are uncomfortably full. They are then harnessed up to a wagon and put to hard or quick work at a time, when it is very dangerous to overwork or overdrive. If this point is not strictly observed, trouble will surely result, for horses cannot stand it any more than could a man who has just overloaded his stomach start off on a run for any considerable distance without endangering his health if not his life. It may be well enough to feed liberally and to treat your stock well, but it is a mistaken kindness to permit your horses to stuff themselves with hay at every meal, whether they are working or are standing idle in the stable. And, while it is injurious to the animals which are worked, as above spoken of, it is almost as bad for those which are idle in the stable, as it develops troublesome disorders and diseases.

Our method of treating both farm and driving horses, and a method which we have found to be a good one after many years' practice, is to give no hay in the morning, only a good feed of grain; at dinner time, we give a good mess of cut food or a feed of grain. Just before retiring for the night, or soon after the horses have cleaned up their other food, we fill their mangers with good, sweet hay, free from briars, thistles, trash and mustiness, being particular to give the driving horses clear timothy hay and the other horses—the work animals—either the same or that which is mixed with not more than ½ clover and good hay at that. By this means the horses are always in a good condition to work, are given plenty of time to eat the single daily feed of hay we allow them, and can endure more work and longer drives than those which are stuffed with hay at every meal. If the hay happens to be a little "off"—not damaged and musty,—do not feed directly to the horses, but if you cannot use it for the other stock—cattle, sheep, etc.,—it should be cut and fed with the mixed mess, for the horses are apt to waste it if fed loose in the mangers.—[Our Country Home.

McClellen's Presence of Mind.

February Century.

In 1852 McClellan accompanied Capt. Marcy in the exploration of the sources of the Red River, which separates Texas from the Indian Territory. When stationed in this territory a few years after, I was asked by an old hunter what had become of Capt. McClellan. On my informing him that I had not met the captain since the Mexican war, he said: "Well, he is a mighty plucky little man," and gave me an account of a hunt by the two captains. They left camp together, and separating a short distance, Capt. Marcy tried his fawn bleat in hopes of calling up a doe. Hearing a rustle through the prairie grass he thought he had been successful, but found that he had called in another hunter, in the shape of a panther, or, as the man called it, "a big painter, a monstrous ugly customer," which came bounding toward him. Marcy fired, and the beast rolling over, uttered a shout of triumph, which soon called McClellan to his side, when suddenly the "painter" which had only been stunned, made the fact known by a sudden attack before Marcy had reloaded. McClellan fired, missed, and, as promptly as in the case of the Mexican, took in the situation, clubbed his rifle, met the animal half way, and broke both the animal's head and the rifle, but bagged the game. I heard the incident spoken of repeatedly in that country as one showing great activity, courage and presence of mind.

She Wanted.

—Young men contemplating matrimony are kindly requested to read over the wants of the modern young lady of the period.

There was a young lady from Perth,
She wanted—she wanted
She wanted the whole of the earth.
So she wanted and panted,
For she wanted the whole of the earth.
She wanted a hat and she wanted a bonnet.
She wanted a ring with some bangles upon it.
She wanted a servant, she wanted a clerk,
She wanted, she wanted, but not for to work,
She wanted, a silk dress, some slippers and shoes,
She wanted a sealskin, and other didoes;
She wanted a bank and she wanted a lover,
She wanted the sky and stars up above her,
She wanted a church and she wanted the steeple,
She wanted the pastor and she wanted the people,
She wanted some ribbons, she wanted some lace.
Then she wanted some swan down to rub on her face.
She wanted a horse, she wanted a carriage;
She wanted a young man with money and marriage;
She wanted some diamonds, some rubies and pearls.
A nice brown stone front and a new set of curls;
She wanted some hose worth a hundred a pair,
A new set of teeth and a wig of blonde hair.
The opera in Winter, the seaside in Summer
As a wanter this maid was a genuine hummer.
She wanted a sleigh with the bells all a jingle
A Chicago divorce that she might remain single.
She wanted a villa, she wanted a farm,
She wanted a dude to lean on his arm.
A costume from Paris, a real la Worth
With jewels to match it, rings, pins, and so forth;
A palace car (Pullman,) some ships on the sea
And a place to live in like ex-Queen Eugenie;
Some bangs and some frizzes, some additional gall;
A pair of skate rollers and room for to fall;
She wanted some pumpkins, she wanted some pie;
She wanted a kiss, then she wanted to die;
But she would'nt feel happy, this lady from Perth,
If you'd give her the universe, give her the earth.

The World Challenged

The liniment has been manufactured and used for twenty five years, and our innumerable certificates of cure prove it to be an unparalleled success. We do not offer it as an Internal Remedy, positively asserting that any liniment that can be taken into the Stomach without injury can have little efficacy in acting as a specific when externally applied. You will find a trial of it the best certificate of its value. It is the only true and entirely of Oils and we challenge the world for its equal. Warranted to give satisfaction or money refunded. Price 25 and 50 cents per bottle. Sold by the popular druggist, Charles Giesler, Fulton, N. Y.

Washington's Birthday, Feb. 22, 1886.

Send a thund'rous sound, O cannon! from your throat and iron lips
To the life that led chained Freedom from the shadow of eclipse.

Mock with brazen-throated laughter, on this glorious natal morn,
Sounds of woe and battle-travail, 'midst which Freedom's state was born!

Bloom with [illegible] white, O banners! on the cold and [illegible] air;
Shine, O stars, in fields of azure! on the deeds which placed thee there.

Bask, O freemen! full enfranchised, in the light of Freedom's sun;
Thank again the god of battles for the gift of Washington.

Shout aloud till they can hear ye—cowering neath a despot's rod—
That through him whose birth ye honor ye are men before your God.

Ah! thou Father of our Country, not dost thou our homage need—
We who reap the glorious harvest from thy sowing of the seed.

For thy fame shall grow in luster as is added age to age,
Through the splendor of the scutcheon, which thou left as heritage.

Never hand of thine hadst carved thee out a path to fame more clear
Hadst thou grasped again the sword hilt cast away by Belvidere.

For for Freedom thou unsheathed it, and its strokes more potent were Than that miracle of splendor, Arthur's brand, Excalibur.

When thy patriot hand withdrew it from the hiding scabbard's shade,
Shone the glint of Freedom's sunburst on the glory of its blade.

Never sought thou blood or fellow, that Ambition's ghouls might gorge;
Not the sword of freedom tempered was for this at Valley Forge.

Bright it flashed at storied Trenton, smoke eclipsed at Brandywine, Gleaming with a fiery splendor Yorktown saw its meteor shine.

Not till Phrygian-capped was Freedom's brows With olive crowns enwreathed
Was the blade drawn for thy fellows back returned unto its sheath.

Never thou braved wintry waters for the honors thou mightst don,
As the mighty Roman Cæsar passed of old the Rubicon.

We shall see the breath of cannon, when from out grim mouth 'tis rolled,
To thy whitened locks transmuted, which thy forehead aureoled.

And when on the nation's birthday it the flag thou gav'st enshrouds,
We shall see thy face of grandeur looking down from out its clouds.

Thou wert grander than the Roman when he thrice refused a crown,
Where by banks of singing Severn there thou laidst thine honors down.

Lapse with requiems, O Potomac! on Mt. Vernon's storied shore,
Where are urned his sacred ashes, Freedom's Mecca evermore.

Though through camp the field of heaven may by others still be won,
He amidst all constellations still shall shine as central sun.

He whom Freedom named as Father still is Father of the State,
Though the Nation claims of heroes now a great triumvirate.

Never shall its name rank lower on Fame's mighty muster rolls
Who so goes to claim Valhalla's apotheosis of souls.

[BEN D. HOUSE.

MY SON'S WIFE.

SHE was only sixteen years old when my boy brought her to the country home where I lived in solitude, save for his occasional visits from London, where he was studying medicine—a dark-skinned, velvet-eyed girl with a high step like that of some beautiful wild creature, so full of grace and freedom was it.

I was seated by myself, reading my Bible, when Hugh opened the door and said to me:

"Mother, dear, here is a daughter for you!"

"A daughter!" I echoed, dropping my spectacles to the floor, where they shivered into a score of sparkling pieces. For this was the first I had heard of my son's marriage. "Hugh, what do you mean?"

"Didn't you get my letter, mother?" he said.

I had received no letter, and I told him so.

"That is unfortunate," said Hugh, gravely. "But I can tell you now what I wrote you last week—that I am married to Margaret Sinclair. Have you no welcoming kiss for my wife?"

Mechanically [illegible]ssed her, but there was no heart in the action.

"Come into the parlor, my dear, and take off your hat and shawl. I suppose you are very tired with your journey, and would like a cup of tea."

Margaret did not answer, only looked at me with her dark, solemn eyes.

"For mercy's sake, who is she?" I asked Hugh when I rejoined him, after leaving her in the one spare room of my cottage. "Where did you meet her? And how did you come to marry her in this unexpected way?"

"She is the daughter of a broken-down actor, who lodged in the same house where I did, and died suddenly from an overdose of morphia. She was left utterly alone and unprovided for, and I got interested in her before I knew it."

"Humph!" was my comment.

"You will try to love her, mother, for my sake," urged Hugh, laying his hand caressingly on my shoulder. I could feel the sudden tears brimming into my eyes.

"Hugh," I cried, "I would try to love a [illegible]-maid or a beggar-girl, if you [illegible] her home here and asked me to [illegible]. But it may not be such an [illegible]."

[illegible] came to tea next day and [illegible] about it.

"[illegible] pretty enough girl," said [illegible]

[illegible] a mere child, and as [illegible] of weight. And as [illegible]

"He as good as told me so himself," said I.

When the tea-bell rang, Margaret was nowhere to be found.

"I suppose she has gone out to meet her husband," said I. "These young married people are so silly. We won't wait tea for them, Mrs. Dudley."

The meal, however, was but half over, when Hugh came in, very pale, and with a set look about the muscles of his mouth which I had never before seen there.

"Mother," cried he passionately, "what is this thing that you have done?"

"I?" echoed I in amazement.

"You have driven my wife away from me!"

"Hugh!"

"Yes, with your cruel words," he went on vehemently. "This note which she has left, tells me that she has gone forever, poor girl; but she knows no home but the one I brought her from. Get my things, mother. I will follow her at once."

But when he reached the house in London, Margaret had not been there. And no trace could he find of her anywhere.

He came back looking full ten years older.

"Mother," said he hoarsely, "this is your work."

"Oh, Hugh!" was all that I could say, as I wrung my hands in mute dispair. "I didn't mean any harm! I didn't indeed!"

"You have blighted my life!" he said bitterly. "And poor, poor little Madge! God only knows what has become of her!"

I can hardly remember how that autumn and winter passed away. But it was the next spring, just as the crocuses began to show their emerald points through the snow that covered the March world, when Hugh fell ill of typhoid fever. And in his delirium he kept calling day and night for "Madge! Madge!" He never mentioned his mother's name; he never looked up into my face with eyes of tender recognition; but he fancied himself looking for a lost child, and the name of that child, repeated over and anon, like a sad refrain, was "Madge!"

"Who is Madge?" the doctor we had called in suddenly asked. "Whoever she is, let her come to him. It may be his salvation."

And then I was forced to tell him all.

"Put an advertisement in the paper," said the the doctor.

"Do you think it will do any good?" I asked piteously; and he answered:

"It is worth the trial, at all events."

I was sitting at the kitchen that very evening, studying out the form of an advertisement—I chose the kitchen so that the light of the lamp should not annoy my poor boy—when the curious magnetic thrills which sometimes announce to us the presence of another humanity than our own in the room, crept through my veins, and looking up with a start I saw—Margaret!

Standing on the threshold, dark-skinned and velvet-eyed, just as she had stood that radiant September afternoon when first I saw her.

"Is it true," she asked me, with a wild vehemence of manner, of which I had scarcely believed her capable, "that he is sick, dying, and I not by his side?"

I ran to her, holding out both my arms.

"Stand back!" she cried passionately. "I have neither pity nor favor to ask of you! But I loved him! Oh, I loved him, even though he did not care for me."

"Margaret!" I cried, "Listen!"

And from the sick-room came the painful reiteration of the one word:

"Madge!"

She threw herself upon my bosom, with a burst of sobs and tears, which seemed to relieve her poor overcharged heart.

"Tell me," she faltered, "that my ears are not deceiving me:" Tell me, does he want me?"

"He is breaking his heart for you," I answered. "He loves you better that his own life."

"May I go to him?"

"Go!"

I stood listening while she hurried into the darkened room; listening with one hand pressed over my heart. And still came forth the pleading cry:

"Madge! Madge!"

Until all of a sudden it paused, and I heard my poor boy say, with an utterance of ineffable relief:

"She has come back to me, my Madge and now I can die in peace."

But he did not die, my only son. He lived, thanks to the tireless nursing and tender devotion of the dark-eyed young wife who had come, like a healing angel, to his side.

"Madge," I said to her, the day that he first sat up in a cushioned chair, "it is you that we have to thank for this."

"And do you think you can love me now?" she said, imploringly.

"My darling! my darling!" was all that I could say, as I clasped the slight figure close to my heart.

And from that day to this there has never been the slightest shadow of doubt or dissension between me and my son's wife.

GEN HANCOCK'S BOYHOOD.

Reminiscences by Col. Torrence of Harlem, Who was the Hero's Schoolmate.

Among the many who attended the funeral of Gen. Hancock was a tall, withered old man, with long white hair hanging to his shoulders. As the old man's eyes rested upon the bier containing the remains of Gen. Hancock tears stood in them. He was weeping over the loss of his dearest friend, who had been his daily companion in boyhood. Col. George W. Torrence of Harlem, for he it was, went to school with Hancock during boyhood days in Norristown, Penn.

"No man will miss Gen. Hancock more than I," said Col. Torrence, "although I may not long survive him. A better man never lived. I knew him intimately in early boyhood and through the different periods of his life, and I found him always the same. I first knew him when he was about ten years of age in Norristown, and he was then as handsome and noble as when he grew to be a man. Even at that age he displayed that sturdy character that he exhibited all through life.

"He was a good boy, but he was full of life and enjoyed fun. He was industrious, and never neglected work. I have many a time known him to keep boys waiting for him to join them in play while he worked, and generally they would pitch in and help him. At school he always had his lessons. There were four of us boys who were nearly all the time together. Hancock, Gen. Reynolds, who was killed at Gettysburg, Ennock Taylor, ex-sheriff of Philadelphia, and myself. Hancock's twin brother was exactly opposite to him. He was very quiet and generally kept by himself, seldon if ever joining in play. We all had nicknames. Gen. Hancock was called 'blinkey' on account of the twitching of his left eye."

Col. Torrence related a number of incidents of Gen. Hancock's boyhood. Once the boys made a raid on a watermellon patch, and discovering there was no danger of being caught owing to the distance from the owner's house, they sent one of their number to the house to tell the owner that boys were stealing his watermelons. The owner ran down there, thinking he would have no trouble in catching them. Arriving there he could see no one, and he supposed the messenger had only fooled him. He had been put to considerable exertion and the disappointment of not having caught the boys made him very angry. Catching the boy who he supposed had fooled him he was about to punish him, but Hancock arose from his concealment and so saved his companion, the owner giving chase but not catching him.

The boys were ill-treated by a man who owned a spring house, where was kept a large quantity of milk and butter. To get even with the man, they stopped the stream up, flooding the house. The owner met Gen Hancock after the war and they had a laugh over it. Gen. Hancock said he was ashamed of it, but the owner said the boys had done just right.

Col. Toerence delights in telling of how Gen. Hancock was instrumental in saving his life. The Schuylkill ran by the edge of Norristown. It was crossed by a bridge about twenty feet above the water. One day Col. Torrence was challenged to dive from the bridge, and he did so. His head struck a stone, and when he came to the surface his face was covered with blood, and he was unconscious. His companions, except Hancock, who was the youngest of the party, were so frightened that they were unable to do anything. Hancock jumped into the river and rescued his companion after much effort. It was several days before Torrence recovered.

During the early part of the war of the rebellion the colonel went to Baltimore to visit his sister, and also to see Gen. Hancock who was stationed there He learned that his niece had been arrested for playing "My Maryland" and "Dixey" on a piano. Her arrest was caused by an officious young lieutenant whom she had previously snubbed. The colonel went to the army headquarters to see Gen. John A. Dix, who was in command, but he found Gen. Hancock was in charge. Upon hearing the circumstances caused the young lady's immediate discharge. Col. Torrence and Gen. Hancock did not have an opportunity of meeting often after this until the general was stationed at Governor's island. Of late years they have seen a great deal of each other. Not long ago the daughter of Col. Torrence's niece, who was under arrest in Baltimore, was here on a visit. The colonel took her to Governor's island. After having shown her about, the colonel left to call on Gen. Hancock. After chatting a little while the colonel excused himself to go, but the general, on learning that Col. Torrence's niece and another young lady were waiting for him, told an orderly to show the ladies up. After several hours they bade the general good-bye. While waiting for the boat the young lady was asked what she thought of Gen. Hancock.

"Oh, he is a grand man," she answered, "but, uncle, he winked at me twice."

The old gentleman knowing of the trouble with the general's left eye enjoyed a quiet laugh at his niece's expense.—[New York Star.

When times are hard and trade is dull,
The merchant then who wise is
Doth not sit down to scratch his skull,
While he a scheme devises
His trusting creditors to gull,
But straightway advertises;
Then comes a sudden boom to trade.
And, presto! change! his fortune's made.

THE PROPER THING.

Black costumes are fashionable.

Straight feathers lead ostrich plumes in popularity.

Ribbons are to be used without stint on summer dresses.

White woolen tulle is a novelty in ball dress; it is draped over silk.

Round basques partly covering the hips, will rival the postillion bodice.

Striped black velvet is used with good effect in combination with repped black silks.

White crepe de chine shawls are finding a new use for drapery over lace and tulle skirts.

Open-worked and embroidered silk stockings assorted to toilet are worn for balls and soirees.

Checked cheviots, stripes and crossbars, are imported in very light weights for spring walking suits.

Various white wool stuffs are shown for tailor gowns; also white canvas goods, white cheviot and white serge.

Silk and velvet dresses are coming to the front again as the proper stuff for toilets for all sorts of occasions.

Quite new are the sleeves slashed inside the arm almost to the shoulder, showing lace or a contracting material.

The fresh spring silks will show a diverisity of elegant new half-tints and several novelties in decided colors.

For the coiffure, rosettes mounted on shell hair pins are made of a great many ends of ribbon cut out in trident points.

Close-fitting, independent wraps will be fashionable in the spring, and many small wraps will be made without costumes.

Combination of plain and white striped stuff will be used for tailor gowns, the skirt being made of the stripes and the the overdress of plain goods.

Folly and Philosophy.

In matters of love, nothing is so common to all women as the desire that another shall not gain that which she herself refuses.—[Hamilton.

When one speaks of women, there is a weapon more terrible than calumny—the truth.—[Leopordi.

Love is more pleasing than marriage, for reasons that novels are always more pleasing than history.—[Chamfort.

It is inconvenient to be a widow; it is necessary to resume the modesty of a young girl without being able to feign her ignorance.—[Mme. d' Houdetot.

It is necessary to have at least four wives in order to find one in good health and gentle humor.—[The Koran.

The most beautiful girl in the world can only give that which she has.—[Camfort.

Women are Angels.—[Tennyson.

Angels have wings and always end up in flying off.—[Byron.

We take women for what they are not; we quit women for what they are.—[Saint Evremont.

Women complain of being misunderstood.—[Balsac.

He who comprehends them is their implacable enemy.—[Diderot.

Perfidious as a wave.—[Shakespeare.

I have seen those (the tempests) of women and I have seen those of the waves, and I pity more the lovers than the sailors.—[Byron.

HANCOCK AND SEYMOUR.

A STRIKING SIMILARITY BETWEEN THEM.

Two Men Made Great by one Event and Both Succumb to a Common Fate.

General Hancock, the pride of the army; of splendid physique, martial bearing; the obedient soldier, whom war made famous,—

Gov. Seymour, the old-time gentleman, the pacific statesman, the idol of a great party,—

Both men standard-bearers of the Democracy, the one as a soldier, the other as a statesman in a presidential contest—both dead; both dead almost at the same hour!

There is a remarkable parallel and contrast between these two men. The war period made both famous. Both were patriots; both yielded to the same ambition; both succumbed to the same fate!

Hancock apparently well one day, the next, says the World, "is sinking step by step, like a person descending a pair of stairs."

Governor Seymour, says the associated press, has been gradually failing for eight years. Both men, though of entirely different temperament yield to a common fate.

Hancock's case was discovered by an eminent physician at the very last moment to be beyond help, because, back of the malignant ulcer in his neck, was a disorder which made living impossible.

Govern Seymour's life for eight years has been feeble, as the associated press says, because of a serious attack of renal inflamation some time ago, and his death therefrom has only been a question of time!

Both Hancock and Seymour might have lived many years had they known and recognized the fact that they were each of them victims of a dangerous kidney disorder, and treated themselves successfully as they might have done by that great scientific specific, Warner's safe cure. Well might a well-known physician exclaim: "I sometimes think people would never die if their kidneys were always sound."

An eminent New York physician says: "Hancock's kidneys stopped excreting urea." No wonder he died, for 400 grains of this horrible blood poisoner should be passed out by the kidneys every day; if they fail, disease runs riot through the whole system and death is inevitable. Deaths from kidney disorders are of the commonest occurrence among all classes, but are more noticeable in these two cases, because of the prominence of the victims. Thousands of cases, of needless deaths, aye, of actual suicide and homicide occur every year, because people and physicians fail to give proper attention to the only blood purifiers in the system.

These two cases, occuring so strikingly near each other, originating in a common source, and eventuating in a common fate, ought to arouse the people to the necessity of allowing no season to pass without taking a few bottles of the great specific alluded to, which is the only remedy known that has direct power and control over these great organs, not only preventing and curing the diseases to which they are subject, but also preventing and curing the many, many diseases which would never exist if these organs "were always sound."

Frozen 612 Feet Deep.

Scientific men have been perplexed for many years over the phenomenon of a certain well at Yakutsk, Siberia. A Russian merchant in 1828 began to dig the well, but he gave up the task three years later, when he had dug down 30 feet and was still in solidly frozen soil. Then the Russian Academy of Sciences dug away at the well for months, but stopped when it had reached a depth of 382 feet, when the ground was still frozen as hard as a rock. In 1844 the academy had the temperature of the excavation carefully taken at various depths, and from these data it was estimated that the ground was frozen to a depth of 612 feet. Although the pole of the greatest cold is in this province of Yakutsk, not even the terrible severity of the Siberian winters could freeze the ground to a depth of 600 feet. Geologists have decided that the frozen valley of the lower Lena is a formation of the glacial period. They believe, in short, that it froze solidly then, and has never since had a chance to thaw out.

The President of the Cambridge, Mass., Fire Ins. Co. says: I reccommend Hood's Sarsaparilla as a building up and strengthening remedy.'

Three Peculiarities

Hood's Sarsaparilla, the great blood purifier and regulating medicine, is characterized by three peculiarities, namely:

1st: The combination of the various remedial agents used.

2d: The proportion in which the roots, herbs, barks, etc., are mixed.

3d: The process by which the active medicinal properties are secured.

The result is a medicine of unusual strength and curative power, which effects cures heretofore unequalled. These peculiarities belong exclusively to Hood's Sarsaparilla, and are

A CHAT WITH THOSE WHO READ NEW YORK NEWSPAPERS, AND OTHERS WHO DON'T READ ANY.—The newspaper is becoming more and more a necessity to intelligent men and women, and residents of Central and Northern New York will find upon trial that the

UTICA MORNING HERALD
AND

meet their wants as no other newspapers can succeed in doing. The UTICA MORNING HERALD since its recent enlargement, is able by means of its special wire connection with the Associated press to publish every morning the telegraphic news of the world in larger quantity, and of a later date than any New York newspaper, owing to the fact that the latter are compelled to go to press about two hours earlier than the HERALD. Containing all the general news, with complete market reports, the UTICA HERALD also supplies, with minuteness that permits no rivalry, the local news of all Central and Northern New York, carefully gleaned by an army of special correspondents. Thus it does for its patrons what no New York paper can do, supplies a general and local newspaper in one. More than that, it presents in each issue a wealth of reading matter of the choicest and freshest description, culled from every source; and so answers for a dozen newspapers and one or two magazines thrown in.

The same characteristics distinguish the UTICA WEEKLY HERALD, so long the favorite family journal of the rich agricultural section through which it continues to enjoy an unrivaled circulation. Its ten generous pages overflow with news, local and general, the latest markets, an admirably equipped agricultural department, and miscellany to enliven the long winter evenings. It is a healthy newspaper, that can be admitted into every family and read with genuine profit, in this respect differing widely from the flash publications that are offered in the guise of weekly newspapers, containing sensational and demoralizing reading which is poison to the young.

If you don't know this from actual experience, subscribe for the daily or weekly UTICA HERALD for a month, and you will be convinced. The Herald keeps its old friends, and welcomes new ones. A sample copy of either issue will be sent to any address, on receipt of a postal card asking it. The UTICA MORNING HERALD costs 67 cents a month, $2.00 for three months, or $8 a year.

The UTICA WEEKLY HERALD is $1.50 a year. Postage free in the United States. Address

JAS. R. FAIRGRIEVE - EDITOR

Men with more mouth than brains would be safer, it seems if they were more careful in what they say, especially in some of the Western states. On Saturday last Miss Grace Hendricks, a relative of the late Vice-President, publicly cowhided H. L. Brown, a member of the Congregational church, at Anita, Ia. The cause of her indignation was a slander against her character, said to have been promulgated by Brown.

Ella Garvin, the young daughter of ex-Councilman Garvin of St. Louis, Mo., not to be outdone stepped up and horsewhipped Harry Snyder last Monday evening in that city. Snyder had insulted Miss Garvin and refused to apologize.

That's right. Fresh young men of the present generation are altogether too ready to circulate slanders against young ladies without the slightest foundation or reason for it.

WILMINGTON, N. C., had a $500,000 fire last Sunday.

THE gold and silver products of the Pacific slope since 1848 has been $2,607,000,780.

MR. GLADSTONE'S salary is $25,000 and that of the British lord high chancellor $50,000.

WILLIAM S. BAILEY, publisher of The Liberal, an infidel paper in Nashville, died in that city on Saturday, aged 80 years.

WASHINGTON'S birthday was observed in the usual quiet way throughout the land, possibly a little more general than of recent years.

MAYOR elect Burns of Syracuse, took the oath of office, made his inaugural address and announced his appointments last Monday evening.

THE New York Ontario & Western's gross earnings for the quarter ending December 31, from operations were $481,573, and the net earnings $118,049.

IT is estimated that the United States produces enough lumber each year to load 1,428,581 railroad cars, each averaging 7,000 feet. This would make a train 8,500 miles long, or about one-third around the globe.

THE damage by the recent floods along the Hudson is estimated at $100,000 near Troy, $75,000 near Albany, and fully $400,000 at all points affected between New York and Albany. The water was higher than at any time since 1857.

THE city of Burlington, Vt., was a vast blaze of electric lights, Chinese lanterns and illuminated houses last Monday evening. It was the opening of the second winter carnival ever held in the United States. New York and Boston parties were there in large numbers and the sport is described as being wilder than anything seen in Montreal, Orange or even Albany.

AN exhange says: "Jere Dunn, who shot and killed Jim Elliott, the pugilist, in a restaurant in Chicago three years ago, is now a wreck, drifting about the slums of New York, neglected, shunned and desperate. When he committed the act, he was well to do and had hosts of friends among the sporting fraternity; but since then his "luck" seems to have deserted him, and he has steadily drifted downward, until he has become a gutter drunkard."

JOHN B. GOUGH died at the home of Dr. R. Bruce in Philadelphia, last Thursday afternoon. In the death of John B. Gough the temperance cause loses a most devoted and effective worker. His power for good may be attributed to four forces—his mastery over himself, his reliance upon appeals to reason and consciences of men, his broad humanity and his captivating oratory. Mr. Gough was in early life, as the world knows, a victim to the most debasing influence of the alcoholic habit, but he rescued himself from degredation although he has repeatedly asserted that his whole life has been a fight against the almost irresistible appetite for strong drink. He was born in Kent, England, August 22, 1822, and was therefore in his sixty-fourth year at the time of his death. Mr. Gough was stricken down by a paralytic stroke while on the lecture platform, and survived but a few days, literally dying, as doubtless he would have preferred to die, had the choice been left to him, "with the harness on."

It was characteristic of the man and his mission that almost his last words were "Young man, make your record clean"—for the intensity of his affection for young men was a striking feature in his nature, and he never delivered a lecture without making some portion of it an appeal to the nobler instincts of youth.

Mr. Parnell has prepared a scheme to apply the Irish Church surplus, not yet exhausted to relieving distress in Ireland.

The Pope Pleased.

Rev. Dr. Moriarty, of Syracuse, received a letter from Rome, written by order of Pope Leo, conveying his apostolic benediction for his latest work, "The Keys of The Kingdom," which his holiness greatly esteems. The pope urges the author to continue his labors, so useful to the church and to religion.

The eighth of the score of five mile races for the roller championship of the world took place Saturday in Brooklyn. Merrifield of Boston defeated Bell of Cleveland by three feet. The time was 16 minutes 20½ seconds.

The jury in the case of Rev. R. T. White of White Plains, charged with seducing Alfreda Robinson, were out all night. They came into court Saturday morning and announced that they could not agree. They were discharged. The jury stood six for acquital and six for conviction.

The grand jury brought in an indictment for murder in the second degree against David Converse, charged with causing the death of his wife at Rose, Wayne county, the 19 of January. Converse will be tried at the June term of the Wayne circuit. He has secured counsel in Syracuse, it is said.

Robert Davison and E. A Walsh, while driving across the West Shore track at Newburgh, Monday morning were struck by a switch engine. Davison was fatally hurt but Walsh was uninjured. Davison is 27 years old has a wife and one child. He has been manager of the brickyard at New Windsor.

No work has been done since January 1st in the glove factories at Gloversville on account of the strike. Saturday the committees on the part of the glove manufacturers and the Knights of Labor had a consultation, but the demand of the Knights of Labor regarding the employment of non-union labor was rejected and there is no prospect of an immediate settlement of the strike.

Secretary Lamar is absent minded. Recently he went to call on the wife of Representative Blount and the ladies of her family at their hotel. He sent up his card, but when they came down to the reception-room he was not there. Late in the evening his card came up again, and he explained to the ladies that he had wandered away, having completely forgotten what he came to the hotel for and that he had sent in his card. After his apology and a short call the Secretary departed—without his hat.

The treasury department has paid out about $10,000,000 so far this month on account of pensions. It is belived, however, that this heavy payment will not have a very serious effect upon the public debt as the revenues of the government have been unusually large this month.

Another street-car strike in New York ended in victory for the strikers. The drivers on the Eight and Ninth avenue lines, who had been promised an adjustment of their grievences, Friday "tied up" the cars alleging the managers had broken faith with them. The company held out but a few hours, finally agreeing to all the demands of the men, when travel was again resumed,

The steamer Saxon, Capt., Wyman, which sailed from New York on January 28th for Cape Haytien, with a crew of 28 men and a general cargo, has been wrecked in the Caico's passage. The captain, two mates and three sailors were lost. The Saxon had $4,000 in specie on board. She was valued at $180,000.

Shortly after a south-bound freight train on the Lehigh Valley railroad, left Pittstown, Pa., Friday, one of the axles of a car broke, and seven cars were precipitated down a twelve foot embankment and several others derailed. Eight of 33 horses on the train were killed and nearly all the others were seriously injured.

The wife of Prof. Leonard Waldo of the Yale observatory, in a fit of temporary insanity at New Haven, Friday, escaped from her nurses, and several hundred students and citizens assisted in the search for her. They discovered her just in time to see her fall over a precipice, receiving injuries from which she died in a few moments. She was a native of Philadelphia and a niece of Judge Fullerton of New York.

The Wealth of Some Millionaires.

I had an argument with a well known broker the other day over the amount of capital represented by the big operators in Wall street. We estimated nearly $850,000,000 among men of over a million capital, as follows: J. J. Astor, $125,000,000; Jay Gould, $100,000,000; Cornelius Vanderbilt, $80,000,000; W. K. Vanderbilt, $75,000,000; Russell Sage, $50,000,000; Huntington, $25,000,000; Winslow, Lanier & Co., $20,000,000; D. O. Mills, $15,000,000; Pierpont Morgan, $15,000,000; Bob Garrett, $15,000,000; Armour, $15,000,000; Fred Vanderbilt, $12,000,000; Sidney Dillion, $10,000,000; Woerishoffer, $10,000,000; J. R. Hoxie, $8,000,000; Addison Cammack, $5,000,000; John Rockfellar, $5,000,000; H. Rockfellar, $5,000,000; Alexander Mitchell, $5,000,000; Cyrus W. Field, $4,000,000; S. V. White, [illegible]; W. R. (From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19th.—All sorts of people with all sorts of complaints are encountered in the corridors of the Capitol. Many of them are transient sight-seers, but most of them are the Congressmen's callers. The Maryland Senators and Representatives are most in demand because their constituences are so near at hand, and the Congressional delegation from the Pacific coast is freest from this kind of persecution. But even they, in common with all other Congressmen, think they have a hard time in this respect.

The Eastern door of the House of Representatives is one of the busiest places in the Capitol. It keeps two men running constantly to carry in card to Members from the anxious people outside. It is interesting to stand in the corridor and hear the demands of importunate visitors, and watch the faces of the people standing around there.

A young man from the "way-back district" comes in. He wants to see his member about the clerkship, but he is modest and stands back fingering his card, and hesitating whether to push into the crowd or not. Then a veteran office seeker steps up to the door keeper in a business like way and says, "Smith, Rhode Island."

The ladies waiting room is always crowded. There is a woman from the South with her little claim against the Government for cotton destroyed. Another wants to have her little son appointed a page in the House, and she is waiting to see the Sergeant-at-Arms. There are young women and old women who are trying to get places in the Departments and female lobbyists who are to get so many hundred dollars for pushing such and such a bill through. Then, just outside in the corridor are scores of men who want office. Some of them came here last March expecting to get a consulship, who would now be thankful for a nine hundred dollar clerkship.

Be thankful dear reader, that you are not dependent on the Government for support. There has just been a competative examination here for Post Office Inspectorships. There were only twenty-five vacancies to be filled, and eight hundred candidates yearning for the places, presented themselves. Several hundred who passed had no possible chance of getting appointments, so those who passed were not much better off than those who failed in the examination.

All the week, so far, the Senate has been upholding and criticising again the Educational bill that passed that body last session, and the House of Representatives has been defending and denouncing Fitz John Porter as it has done bi-annually in every Congress for twenty years. The same old evidence and arguments are being repeated in both Houses over each measure. Nothing seems to have occurred in the interim to change the views of friends of either question or modify the objections of opponents. As to the Educational bill, it cannot be said that the Southern Senators are disposed to give their section the benefit of the doubt on the question. The strongest opposition to the measure comes from that section notably from Senator Morgan of Ala., although the South would receive the bulk of the proposed appropriation of $77,000,000.

The women suffragists are here again holding their convention. The representation is fully as large as at any former gathering. In their speeches they tell the same old story. They rant their wrongs, demand their rights, and declare they will get them yet. They dwell with elatation on what they call their victories of the past year, and one of their ablest champions Mrs. Merriweather proposes to make an address in reply to Senator Vest's letter stating that he is an "uncompromising opponent." The women say this fair orator is going to annihilate the Senator from Missouri.

Apropos of this convention which is being held in All Soul's Church, the pastor preached a sermon on woman suffrage. He said the question had narrowed down to a single issue, the right to the ballot. He was still in doubt, but it was hard not to favor it when the appeal came from women. He had drawn near the fence, and was looking over but this fence was one that thoughtful people could not clear at a bound. It was at least a six rail fence. Speaking of women in Congress, he said that morals of Congressman were much better when they brought their wives to Washington with them than when they left them at home. "If good women should be elected to Congress," he added, "It is to be hoped they will bring their husbands with them. I should be sorry to see them leave their husbands at home to keep house during a two or six year's term."

THE ROOT OF THE EVIL.

To thoroughly cure scrofula it is necessary to strike directly at the root of the evil. This is exactly what Hood's Sarsaparilla does, by acting upon the blood, thoroughly cleansing it of all impurities, and leaving not even a taint of scrofula in the vital fluid. Thousands who have been cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla, testify to its wonderful blood purifying qualities. Sold by all druggists.

A NEW STOVE.
ON A NEW PRINCIPLE.
A HANDSOME STOVE.
AN EXCELLENT HEATER.
AN ECONOMICAL STOVE.
A PERFECT VENTILATOR.

☞A good Base Burner of any kind will heat a room, but it also destroys and burns up the life principle of the air. Foul air if hot will not keep a person warm. The Howe Ventilating Stove warms the room and keeps the air pure. It Ventilates the room at the same time that it heats it. Cold, fresh air is taken into the Stove through a pipe from the outside of the house. Fresh air passes into the Stove, is heated and passes into the room through the open top, while the foul, impure air being heavier than fresh, pure heated air drops dead to the floor, is forced into a flue in the Stove and is drawn through a small pipe in the smoke pipe into the chimney and escapes with the smoke.

One of the worst things sick people can do dose themselves with mineral poisons. All medicines which are compounded of mineral drugs are to some extent poisonous. It is one of the excellent features of DR. HERRICK'S SUGAR-COATED VEGETABLE LIVER PILLS, that they contain no poison whatever, and no trace of anything which in any way work injury to the most delicate human system. All the reliable druggists and country merchants keep these pills.

She Will Remain Single.

This is what a young lady is reported to have said apropos of marriage: "Well no, I don't know it I would marry for money alone; but if a man had plenty of money, allied to a sweet disposition and a mustache that curled at both ends, and nice blue eyes and a social position; if he had a distinguished status in a profession, or was even a merchant; and his father were rich and his mother and father aristocratic; and he wanted me to marry him and he would promise to let me have my own way in everything, and keep me liberally supplied with money, and have a splendidly furnished town house and a handsome country residence; was liberal about diamonds and other gems, also millinery, never gambling, and I really and truly loved him, I wouldn't consider marriage a drawback.—[Boston Courier.

I have been in this state now over a year, observing all that was to be seen, mingling with the people as they are, as one of them, so to speak; and I think I know more than I did when I first came here. I have always been a Republican, was "brought up" one from '50, but were I to make Florida my home, I should vote with the white people, call it by what party name you choose. I have been stopping for nearly a year at Yalaha among a class of people from all parts of the South, many of whom were in the Confederate Army and I can say that I never met a more friendly and hospitable class of people. They were consciencious in what they did 25 years ago, in fact were educated to it, the same as we of the North were educated to what we fought for. How about the negroes? Well I will try and tell you of them. They of course do not mix with the whites, socially, nor do the latter mix with them, for were a white man to associate with a negro, he would be "cut" by the white race. The majority of them have "not where to lay their heads" they own the clothes they have on their backs, and a blanket or two, a skillet, a tin pan and an old fruit can; they will get into some shed, or abandoned freight car, or under the platform of a railroad station where there is a show of protection, and cook their "rations" over one common fire. To illustrate. I am building a draw bridge across the Ocla-wa-ha River at this place, I have a darkey working for me, he has a nail keg in which he keeps his "grub," an old black skillet which looks as though it had done service during the war, and a bottle of "lasses," a dish or two and a roll of blankets. I told him to take some of the plank and fix himself a "ranch," but he allowed it wouldn't pay for the trouble; last night it rained and when I went to work this morning, I found "Dan" there with a blazing fire, and with him another darkey he had taken in, in fact he had followed the prevailing custom, South, "had gone to taking boarders to help along, you know." I asked him if he oughtn't to put up a shelter, but like the man in Arkansaw, he could not do it when 'twas raining and when it did not rain, he did not need it. He had two or three books drying by the fire, and upon looking them over I found a pocket dictionary and a book on letter writing, while in a small account book he showed me some of his writing which was very good, it had the novelty of being very plain and easy to read, a virtue that many business hands do not possess.

I have not attended any elections since I came here but the negroes tell me that they vote as they please "with none to molest them or make them afraid."

The majority of them do not care to have much money at a time. When they have earned a few dollars, they will "lay off" and gamble till it is gone, then hunt another job.

There are a number of flaming advertisements appearing in the Northern papers concerning "lots" in newly laid out "towns," offering lots for $5 each, advising the poor people to invest. I think the N. Y. Herald has ventilated their frauds fully but my advice is to all don't put one cent into Florida property till you have seen it, or some personal friend has investigated it for you. There are good chances in this state to make money by investing in real estate, but when there is one good chance, there are one hundred (and that is a low estimate) chances to sink your money in Florida sand or swamps. There are plenty of keen, shrewd, sharp business men here, ready to nab up all those good "bargains" and are throwing out baits for those who are not here to keep the worthless bargains moving.

When I came here one year ago, I was wild to buy a piece of land, but, (un) fortunately I did not have the money. Now I do not want any land, and when I complete this bridge I shall be ready for Minneapolis, Minn., where I am in hopes I can rid my system of the malaria with which it is now fully charged, and which is only kept down through a determination that I won't be sick.

Trees are putting forth leaves and spring is here—by the way, I saw a few robbins; the genuine kind that we have North—in "God's country," as the boys used to say in the army.

Yes, we had a cold spell in January, ice formed to the thickness of three and four inches in water barrels not all in one night however, and one night snow fell. Some people never saw any before.

Very Truly, S. E. C.

Suits Against the N. Y. Central.

Seventy suits have been begun in Syracuse against the New York Central railroad to recover, in each instance, a penalty of $50, under the statute entitled, "An act to prevent extortion by railroad companies." The actions are the result of a movement said to have been organized about six weeks ago by a prominent attorney. The present plaintiffs met one evening, about that time, at the Central station, rode west as far as Memphis, in Onondaga county, and returned on the next train. They refused to say why the trip was made, and nothing was definitely known as to its objects until the beginning of these suits. They were charged twenty-six cents each for their tickets going and coming, whereas the distance from city to village, being less than twelve miles, and the legal fare being two cents a mile, they should have been charged only twenty-four cents. Passengers on the road have for the last sixteen years been paying this excess of fare between the two places.

Fish for Lake Ontario.

Two hundred thousand young fish have been placed in Lake Ontario at Charlotte. Part of the white fish for Lake Ontario are supplied by the Clayton branch hatching house and placed in the lake near that point. Orders have been received for 500,000 salmon trout fry for Lake George, and 500,000 young of the California trout for the Catskill mountain streams, where the species of brook trout has been introduced with marked success. Two hundred thousand young salmon trout have been placed in Hemlock lake, together with 40,000 white fish fry. These white fish, when one year old, will furnish food for the salmon trout of the lake, which is lacking in minnows and other small fish.

A Tribute to Father Early.

The Oswego Times-Express, of Monday in speaking of the anniversary exercises in honor of the new temperance league, which occurred in St. Louis' church in that city Sunday evening, pays this tribute to Rev. Father Early of this village:

After an address in French by Father Lacasse, the missionary from Labrador, followed an English sermon from the popular young priest, Father Early of Fulton, who, while enlarging upon his simple text "God loves you," referred to the sin of drunkenness not only as one of the greatest evils of the age, but one of the worst phases of the ingratitude of man toward a God who so loves us. He spoke of the selling of liquor to women and minors, as also on Sunday, and his advice to the young ladies, the ornament of the church, to the young men its pride and pillar, to the League itself and to newspaper men and others who are leaders in society was particularly well timed in this instance. Father Early is sowing good seed in his present field of labor, particularly with regard to temperance. He is a pleasing speaker and will always be welcome here.

The Age of Chivalry.

Last Sunday two Fulton young men became involved in a quarrel regarding a certain young lady, and in order to settle the dispute decided that some-one's gore must be spilled. With this bloodthirsty intention they repaired to the vicinity of the box shop, followed by a crowd of admiring comrades anxious to see somebody wallow in "berlud." Whether the young lady, the cause of the chivalric encounter, encouraged the affair with her presence is not said. After three rounds, during which the only blood shed was by one of the bystanders who cut his finger while whittling, the battle was declared a draw. Whether it will be eventually settled with clubs or shot guns remains to be seen.

Jury Drawing.

The following petit jurors were drawn Monday to serve at a court of sessions, to be held in the village of Pulaski, commencing Monday, March 8, 1886:

Don't Read This.

Don't you think that it would be a good plan, if you are in arrears, to step into our office and pay your subscription? We are there ready to receive subscribers on this charitable errand with open arms—so to speak. Don't bring too large bills, we can't change them.

To our patrons out of town we would say that in addition to U. S. legal tender, we are prepared to receive checks, drafts, portal notes, stamps, P. O. orders—in fact anything that can be converted into money except poems—we must draw the line there and positively decline to receive poetry in payment for subscription. Come, pay up.

Suicide Near Syracuse.

Frederick Adolf Haug, a German, who recently arrived in this country was found hanging to a tree, three miles from Syracuse, Monday morning. In his pocket were found some bills and $24 in change. It is supposed that he was insane. From a memorandum book found it was learned that he formerly worked in the Lion brewery in New York. The address "Charles Neppach, No. 337 West Thirty-seventh street, New York." was found written in the book. A telegram was sent to that name asking for information.

North Scriba Post Office.

There seems to be some trouble concerning the post office arrangements at North Scriba, originating from the fact that Frank Stafford, the recently appointed post master has put the office into a private house at a considerable distance from the corners, making it a serious inconvenience to many of the inhabitants. No attention was paid to a signed petition to retain the post office in the old place.

The Jacksonian doctrine is probably not an agreeable one to many of North Scriba's people at the present time.

On Washington's birthday the banks, post office and one of the public schools were closed, otherwise the day appeared the same as any other in this village.

All members of Fulton Division, Sons of Temperance, are requested to meet at the lodge room next Friday evening, as matters of importance are to be brought before the meeting.

Our correspondent, in his Washington letter, describes the efforts of some aspirants to minor positions under the Government, and gives his customary little bit at the woman suffragists.

The renewal of the certificate of C. H. David, of Fulton, as agent for the Springfield Fire and Marine insurance company of Springfield, Mass., has been filed in the county clerk's office.

A number of Fultonians are in attendance at the Gilmore jubilee at Syracuse, this week. A special train on the D. L. & W. railroad returns this evening after the concert, and on Friday evening a special will return on the R. W. & O. railroad.

The work of building the new depot for the N. Y. O & W. railroad in this village, it is said, will be commenced as soon as the weather will permit. The new building is to be a large two-story brick structure and will be an ornament to the village and a credit to the company.

The trial of Albert Vanderheyden of this village, who was arrested for robbery in the second degree recently and taken to Syracuse, was begun in that city yesterday. The crime is alleged to have been committed on charter election night, 1884, the prisoner being charged with robbing Geo. Barber of Syracuse, of a gold watch and chain valued at $75.

"The Rajah" drew a fair sized audience to the opera house last Saturday evening. The play is a good one and was presented in a very acceptable manner. We failed to see very much of the original scenery unless it was the original opera house scenery. The strains that were wafted from the orchestra were simply—well never mind.

Harry Comstock of Fulton has presented the Historical society through Judge Hadley with a couple of Japanese swords 250 years old. They are of rare and beautiful design and will form a valuable acquisition to the society's collection. Mr. Comstock, who is the foreign travelling salesman for the Remington gun works, obtained the swords while on a recent trip to Japan.—[Waterloo Standard.

About Mar. 15th the east store in the new Lewis block, on Cayuga street will be opened by Peebles & Cook, with a full line of fine ready-made clothing and gents' furnishing goods. E. A. Cook of the new firm, is a young man well and favorably known in this village, having been in the employ of H. &. A. Rosenbloom both in Fulton and Mexico. The new firm will undoubtedly receive their share of the public patronage.

P. H. Costello, A. J. Stone and T. D. Penfield of Camden, N. Y., were in town Saturday, looking over the water works system. Hinds, Moffit & Co., are negotiating with the village authorities of Camden with a view of putting in a system of water works. Hose was attached to two hydrants and streams were thrown, first with gravity pressure alone and afterward from the pump. The visiting gentlemen expressed themselves as well pleased with the trials.

A couple of swarthy Arabs on their way to Nebraska stopped in Fulton yesterday and attracted considerable attention. A conversation which a reporter tried to hold with them was, owing to their limited knowledge of English, quite brief and unsatisfactory. The reporter attempted to spring some alleged Arabic upon them and was met by such looks of blank amazement that he concluded they must have entirely forgotten their native tongue. They left for Oswego on the 6:08 train.

The C. L. S. C. held Longfellow memorial exercises last Monday evening at the home of Mrs. Frank Dilts on Cayuga street. A very interesting program was rendered. Following is a summary: Roll call with responses from Longfellow; song "Ehren on the Rhine," by Miss Ada Thayer with piano accompaniment by Miss Gertrude Dada; "The Ladder of St. Augustine," read by Mrs. F. E. Goodjon; "Resignation," by Mrs. R. E. Phillips; "The Singer," Mrs. W. R. Hamilton; duett, "On the Blue Wave," Misses Thayer and Dada. The dialogue of "Miles Standish's Courtship" was rendered by Mrs. S. N. Dada, Mrs. A. Emerick and Miss C. E. Tibbie; "The Rosary of Pearls," by Mrs. [illegible]. A good attendance was present and a very pleasant and instructive evening [illegible]

[illegible] ed with the large audience, which upon his appearance gave him a most hearty welcome. His first concert was a pronounced success. His band was never better than now, and since his former visit has received some noteworthy additions. The soloists were each in turn encored, while Levy wrought the vast audience to a high pitch and fairly made the rafters reverberate when he gave the grand aria from "The Stabat Mater." The chorus of 500 voices did admirably the volume of sound filling the vast space with no break or discord. The vocal soloists made a very happy impression and were heartily applauded. Yesterday afternoon's program opened with an overture "Poet and Peasant" a most delightful air bringing the audience close to to the great leader and anxious for more. Chorus from Elijah, "He Watching over Israel" was a masterly production and brought out the full capacities of both band and chorus. The Misses Vanderveer sang sweetly receiving, as last evening, a generous recall. Levy, the renowned cornetist again brought down the house in his wonderful manipulations upon his cornet. A piccolo solo, and solo for saxophone were also well received. The entertainment closed with a national air, key, chorus, band and artillery accompaniment. The Empire rink with its vast circular wooden roof has acoustic qualities far ahead of the armory and manager Ormsby is to be warmly congratulated for his energy and perseverance in bringing this grand musical jubilee within easy reach of the city and surrounding towns. It will continue all the week. G.

Convicted of Assault.

Readers of THE TIMES will remember that Owen Rafferty, formerly of this village, was assaulted in Syracuse on Nov. 13 last by Thomas O'Brien and in the scuffle which ensued, received two bullets, one in the left knee and the other in the right shoulder. The latter wound was very dangerous but not necessarily fatal, as Rafferty has since fully recovered. The trial of O'Brien was called in the court of sessions in Syracuse yesterday. Owen Rafferty himself was the first witness and told his story as it was published at the time of the shooting. Dr. Totman described the two wounds. Captain Quigley told of being called to the scene of the shooting and finding the injured man on the floor. He went to O'Brien's house, the door was locked and O'Brien refused to open it. The door was finally broken open and O'Brien said that he had been kicked and cuffed around long enough and didn't propose to stand it any longer. Patrick O'Day, keeper of the saloon, and Roger M'Govern, who was at the bar with Rafferty, told of O'Brien entering and of the firing of the shots. For the defense, Michael Kinney told of having introduced the two men a little before the shooting and of Rafferty having knocked O'Brien down. The prisoner testified that Rafferty had knocked him down; that he then ran home but decided to return and find out who his assailant was. He had the revolver in his pocket all the time. As he entered the saloon Rafferty saw him and ran towards him. "Stand back," cried the witness. Rafferty did not stop, and O'Brien said he fired at the floor to frighten him. Then Rafferty grappled him, seized the weapon, and in the struggle it went off. The witness declared that Rafferty shot himself while he had hold of the revolver. The testimony was all taken during the forenoon. At the afternoon session the case was summed up by R. H. Gardner for the defence and District Attorney Lewis for the prosecution. The jury retired at 3:30 o'clock, and at 4:15 returned with a verdict, finding the prisoner guilty of assault in the second degree. The sentence will be given on Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock. The penalty is imprisonment for from two to five years.

An Ill Wind.

The disagreement regarding freights between the Oswego Manufacturing company and the R. W. & O. RR. is working to the advantage of many of our citizens by affording a large amount of cartage from the box factory in the west harbor to the freight depot of the N.Y.O. & W. on the east side, a distance of nearly two miles. About 60 teams and men are now employed in this work and some 20 cars are loaded daily. The cartage alone for which is not less than from $125 to $150 per day. The prices paid are, we hear, one half cent per bunch for the small shooks and one cent for the large ones. The route is over West Bridge street. This being the route of the street railway makes it difficult and heavy work, many wagons and sleighs getting stalled on the rails and at the frogs on the railway. After a teamster has had one break down and been obliged to unload 100 bundles of shooks in order to get clear, he generally avoids the rails. How long this diversion of traffic to the Midland will continue is uncertain, but meanwhile Oswego is getting the advantage of it largely. Many teams are in from the country and some even from Fulton.—[Oswego Palladium.

Marital.

John C. O'Brien of the Opera House dry goods store in this village, and Miss Minnie Bonner, daughter of Supervisor Bonner of the First ward in Oswego, will be married to-day by Rev. Father Fournier of St. Mary's Church. Since Mr. O'Brien's residence here he has made many friends, who will join with us in extending congratulations. The twain will take up their residence in this village.

The Oswego Falls Dispute.

The injunction case of J. H. Hamburger & Co., proprietors of the tannery in Lower Oswego Falls vs. the Factory Company to restrain the latter from drawing water from Lake Neahtawanta is being tried in Oswego. S. N. Dada conducts the case for the Tannery Company, with H. E. Nichols of Fulton and Charles Rhodes of Oswego opposed. It bids fair to be a long dispute.

Board of Trustees' Proceedings.

FULTON, N. Y., Feb. 17, 1886.

Board met persuant to adjournment.

Present, Trustees Bradford, Chase, Gage, and Johnson.

On motion of Mr. Johnson Mr. Gage was chosen President pro tem.

Minutes of last meeting read and approved.

Trustee Kendrick came in.

The Village Attorney reported that he was unable to find any general law authorizing the Board of Trustees to construct public sewers in the village.

On motion of Mr. Johnson, the President and Mr. Gage were appointed a committee to procure the draft of a proper act authorizing the Board of Trustees to establish, construct and maintain a system of public sewers in the village of Fulton.

Mr. T. D. Lewis came before the Board and made statements in regard to the expense of repairing over Lewis House drain on First street.

On motion of Mr. Kendrick it was voted that the sum of $25 be accepted in full for said work.

The following bills were reported favorably by the Finance Committee and on motion of Mr. Johnson the same were audited at the amounts claimed, viz:

S. C. Heath, gas for street lamps,	$32 88
G. D. Ball, work on Oneida street bridge,	10.82
R. B. Hart, member Board Health,	5.50

On motion of Mr. Johnson, the board adjourned to Feb. 24th, 1886, at 7½ o'clock p. m.

Worth Knowing.

They now make artificial eyes for horses.

Clover seed is going to be high this spring. Lay in a good supply early.

Feed a cow rather low rations for ten days before she drops her calf, and for ten days afterwards.

A lamb will begin to eat when it is from ten days to two weeks old. There is nothing better for them than whole oats.

An old farmer says that he has had remarkable success in corn-raising by simply selecting the seed corn grains from the middle of the ear.

No man is fit to have charge of stock who is not kind to them. Be careful then, whom you select for this business. Stock must be comfortable in order to succeed.

Feed plenty of buttermilk to the hens. Either give it in the place of water or thicken it with a mixture of bran and meal. Thick milk and skimmed milk are also excellent.

W. A. Maize says that charred corncobs fed to hogs will keep them in perfect health. They are crazy to get them. One bushel before burning is enough for four. Feed every three or four weeks.

It is not too soon to make the hot bed for early plants. The main point now is to save plenty of horse manure, which should be kept in a dry place and contain as little coarse litter as possible.

To save eggs for hatching put them in a box of oats, small end downward, and in a place of even temperature, as they must not freeze nor be to warm. Packed carefully, they will keep well for quite a length of time, and hatch when two weeks old, but the fresher they are when placed under the hens the better.

Frozen apples can be restored easily by putting them in ice-water, not well water for that is too warm, and allow them to thaw out slowly. If so treated they will be as fine as they were before being frozen. When apples are frozen in bulk, cover well with blankets and allow no air to circulate in the room, and they usually thaw out with but little injury. Rapid thawing ruins them.

Rotation of Crops.

A subscriber asks us for information about rotation of crops. This is one of the most important questions relating to farm work, and deserves especial consideration. It has long been considered as indispensible to good and successful farming, and there is no reason to suppose, under the light of all the later knowledge derived from experiment and study, as well as improved practice, that the old farmers were mistaken. The old practice was to follow grain with a grass crop, or with one which required frequent cultivation of the soil. This was so firmly established, that among the English farmers, whose crops on the average have more than doubled ours, every tenant was bound by his lease to conform to it, and never to follow a grain crop with another one of the same kind. The reason for this was, and is, that the growth of consecutive crops of the same kind rapidly exhausts the soil, or encourages the growth of weeds. It is found in the natural growth of plants and forests, that a certain growth is generally succeeded—after it has attained its maturity—by a different kind of vegetation; for instance when a pine forest has been cut off, or has been destroyed by fire, hard woods succeed it, and when oaks or other hard woods have been cut off, pines grow in their place. The old fields of the South are a standing example of this, and the "old field pine" covers the abandoned land from which a hard-wood forest was cut off, to make room for tobacco and cotton. The explanation of this fact is, that hard woods are rich in potash, and taking a large quantity of this element from the soil, leave the land deficient in it, and unable to produce another growth of hard woods; but as pine is rich in silicia, and poor in potash, the soil exhausted of potash, and having an abundance of silicia, produces the pine with ease, when it could not produce oaks, hickories, and other hard woods. The same principle applies to farm crops, and hence wheat is followed by grass and clover, and these with corn, and corn with oats or barley; and then the land is manured, and wheat is grown again. In practice, we think this rotation is too short, and would be greatly improved by a root crop after corn, and oats or barley after the roots, with clover following, and the second years' clover plowed in for wheat, or early in the fall, as soon as the wheat is removed, thus permitting the soil to be thoroughly prepared for the grass seeding, by which its success is greatly encouraged.—[American Agriculturist.

Seed Potatoes.

Last spring there was considerable trouble caused by seed potatoes not sprouting. The Late Rose was one against which this charge was especially brought. The fact is that potatoes run out, and new varieties must be started every few years. There are symptoms that even the favorite Early Rose is beginning to run out in some localities. For these places the Early Ohio, Early Sunrise and Lee's Favorite are to be recommended instead. They are all very early. Try them if the Early Rose fails with you.

It would be a good plan for our farmers to experiment a little with raising their own new varieties of potatoes. They have only to plant the contents of of one of the seed balls found upon a potato vine. It will produce a large number of tiny tubers. Select the largest of these and plant them next year. You can tell the second year of the [illegible] what the result is going to be. [illegible] thus happen to produce a very [illegible]. The tubers are not at all [illegible] be like those of the parent plant, [illegible] makes the experiment more interesting. Try it. Not much time will [illegible], and it will be something the [illegible] and girls will especially enjoy [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] from it. The use of [illegible] will not make up this deficiency, for there is an actual want of [illegible], means not the mineral parts of [illegible] but the vegetable which the leaves and plants supply, which constitute the natural basis for plant growth. To obtain this kind of plant food, these must be returned to the earth the same kind. Barnyard manure, better than anything else, furnishes these elements, and besides these, the chemical properties or salts contained in the so-called phosphates, viz: Nitrogen, ammonia, phosphoric acid and potash. All of these elements are in the barnyard manure, and by the addition of water, which the chemists call hydrogen, and the processes of fermentation and decay, they are produced. The richer the manure is in nitrogen the more ammonia there will be and also of phosphoric acid. The potash comes mostly from the woody fiber and the undigested portions of the oats and other grains. Now what shall a farmer do to help his barnyard and his farm? Keep stock and feed them on a variety of foods and give them a liberal share of middlings and bran, oil meal or cotton-seed meal. These foods will enrich the manure pile as they furnish a large amount of nitrogen and also of the phosphates.

Prof. Jenkins, of the Connecticut Experimental Farm, says that wheat bran will make manure equal to nearly half its cost before it is fed. We have no doubt of it. Wheat middlings make a richer manure but not better in proportion to its cost. He also balances the food value of bran and middlings in about the same way, making them about equal, taking into consideration the relative cost. We should recommend mixing the two for food, and always mixing the bran with corn meal to feed any animals which chew the cud. For hogs, mix middlings with corn meal. A very good rule is to make the bulk half and half. Corn meal is always the most expensive food and furnishes the least returns in growth and actual manure for its cost, and the quantity fed. Old farmers who put their faith so largely in corn and corn meal must expect the new dispensation which puts bran and middlings and oil meal ahead. We feel under special obligations to Prof. Jenkins for his careful researches and analyses. He has made a valuable, and to us, most satisfactory contribution to agricultural science. Feeding for the barnyard involves the best of care of the manure and the place, for it is on or in the land, which needs it as soon as possible. Do not let it run away or go to waste. When stock are exposed to the cold they must be fed to keep out the cold. When they are housed this is not necessary, hence such foods as corn meal are not so much needed and others more profitable may be used.—[Our Country Home.

The Liquor Traffic.

[From the Chicago Evening Journal.]

Some statistics as to the retail liquor trade of the United States are interesting and instructive. There are in all the states 201,495 persons selling ardent spirits at retail under United States licenses. The proportion of saloons to inhabitants in some of the states forms a curious study. In California there is a saloon to each 70 inhabitants, or to each 17 voters. In Illinois there is a saloon to each 280 persons, or about 1 to each 60 voters. In New York the proportion is 1 to 150, in Ohio 1 to 204, in Pennsylvania 1 to 205. The prohibition states show the following results:

States.	Saloons.	Inhabitants.	Voters.
Maine............	1	585	100
Iowa...........	1	406	83
Kansas.........	1	418	96

Illinois stands ahead in whisky production, with 26,488,338 gallons of ardent spirits annually. Its annual maltliquor product is 37,339,278 gallons. In whisky Kentucky, Indiana and Ohio follow next after Illinois. New York is the empire state in beer as in other things, except whisky, with the enormous production of 200,000,000 gallons a year.

The revenue derived by the government from the manufacture of spirits and malt liquors is $85,742,052 a year, of which about 78 per cent. is from spirits and 22 per cent. from malt liquors. Illinois pays one-quarter of this total tax.

She Shocked the Divine.

A prominent divine was the invited guest of Mr. B. and family. Miss Alice, the charming daughter of the host, was gracing the festivity, and said impulsively:

"Oh, mother, I've been roasting up in my room all the afternoon. It's hotter than—"

"Alice!" said the father, sternly.

"I say it's hotter than—"

"Alice!" said the mother, excitedly, and the divine looked at her in alarm.

"I say it's hotter than I ever saw it before," continued the young lady coolly, "and I just sat there without a thing on—"

"Oh, Alice said the father, in alarm. This time the divine was thoroughly frightened.

"I just sat there without a thing on—"

"Oh, Alice!" said the mother, almost crying.

"I say I just sat there," continued the girl, not noticing the interruption. "I just sat there without a thing on except my very lightest Summer clothing, and read my Bible all the afternoon. Will you have some more soup, doctor?"—]Elmira Gazette.

WHAT IS DYSPEPSIA?

Among the many symptoms of Dyspepsia or indigestion the most prominent are: Variable appetite; faint, gnawing feeling at pit of the stomach, with unsatisfied craving for food; heartburn, feeling of weight and wind in the stomach, bad breath, bad taste in the mouth, low spirits, general prostration, headache, and constipation. There is no form of disease more prevalent than Dyspepsia, and none so peculiar to the high-living and rapid-eating American people. Alcohol and tobacco produce Dyspepsia; also, bad air, rapid eating, etc. BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS will cure the worst case, by regulating the bowels and toning up the digestive organs. Sold everywhere.

Farmer Joy's "Arrantin'."

The jolliest farmer was Ephraim Joy,
Grayheaded and bent, with the heart of a boy,
He whistled all day [illegible] mower;
He hailed each neighbor upon the road;
He petted his cattle and called every one
By fond coaxing names [illegible] the fun;
He sang at his milking, and pitching his hay;
He always was sunny whatever the day.

He carried his [illegible] to the neighboring town;
Three days in the week he rode up and down,
Still singing or whistling or resting his team
After climbing the hill or crossing the stream.
Not a single house did he ever pass by Without stopping his horses and waiting to cry:
"Well, neighbor, any thing wanted my way?
I'm a goin' a' arrantin' most of the day."

And all the farmers who plodded along
With never a smile or a note or a song—
Who never found time to get out the "shay," [illegible] take wife and children off for a day,
Who thought it was quiet in old Ephraim Joy
To be jolly and merry—so much like a boy,
Were all very glad, when he went up and down,
To have him do "arrants," if need be, in town.

He was postman, expressman and messenger too.
No one taught him forgetting a thing he could do;
And you'd never have guessed he was sixty years old.
If you'd seen him "a-arrantin'," as he'd been told,
Though empty his milk-cans, he'd always a load
When he'd started his horses again on the road, [illegible] and his manners so gay,
"The more arrants the better," it seemed he would say.

How often I've wondered while thinking of him
With a heart full of love while my eyes have grown dim.
Of the help and the comfort which he always bore.
To the sick and the sorry, the weak and the poor
He did errands of mercy and love unseen,
As well as the "arrantin'," known to men;
And I know if such work is the angels' employ.
They have one helper added in Ephraim Joy.

A YANKEE SCHOOLMASTER'S ADVENTURE,

BY OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES.

THE advent of Master Langdon to Pigwacket Centre created a much more lively sensation than had attended that of either of his predecessors. Looks go a good ways all the world over, and though there were several good-looking people in the place, and Major Bush was what the natives of the town called a "bahnsome mahn,' that is, big, fat and red, yet the sight of a really elegant young fellow, with the natural air that grows up with carefully bred young persons, was a novelty.

When Mr. Bernard showed at meeting, on the first Sunday after his arrival it may be supposed that a good many eyes were turned upon the schoolmaster. There was something heroic in his coming forward so readily to take a place which called for a strong hand, and a prompt, steady will to guide it. In fact, his position was that of military chieftan on the eve of battle. Everybody knew everything in Pigwacket Centre, and it was an understood thing that the young rebels meant to put down the new master if they could.

It was natural that the two prettiest girls in the village, called, in the local dialect, as nearly as our limited alphabet will represent it, Alminy Cutterr and Arvilly Braowne, should feel and express an interest in the good-looking stranger, and that when their flattering comments were repeated, in the hearing of their indigenous admirers, among whom were some of the older "boys" of the school, it would not add to the amiable disposition of the turbulent youth.

Monday came, and the new schoolmaster was in his chair on the raised platform at the upper end of the schoolhouse. The rustics looked at his handsome face, thoughtful, peaceful, pleasant, cheerful, but sharply cut round the lips and proudly lighted about the eyes. The ringleader of the mischief-makers, a young butcher, looked at him stealthily, whenever he got a chance to study him unobserved; for in truth he felt uncomfortable whenever he found the large, dark eyes fixed on his own little, sharp, deep-set, gray ones. But he found means to study him pretty well—first his face, then his neck and shoulders, the set of his arms, the narrowing at the loins, the make of his legs and the way he moved. In short, he examined him as he would have examined a steer, to see what he could do and how far he would cut up. If he could only have gone to him and felt of his muscles, he would have been entirely satisfied. He was not a very wise youth, but he did know well enough that, though big arms and legs are very good things, there is something beside size that goes to made a man; and he had heard stories of a fighting man, called "The Spider," from his attenuated proportions, who was yet a terrible hitter in the ring, and had whipped many a big-limbed fellow in and out of the roped arena.

Nothing could be smoother than the way in which everything went on for the first day or two. The new master was so kind and courteous, he seemed to take everything in such a natural easy way, that there was no chance to pick a quarrel with him. He, in the meantime, thought it best to watch the boys and young men for a day or two with as little show of authority as possible. It was easy enough to see that he would have occasion for it before long.

The schoolhouse was a grim, old, red, one-story building, perched on a bare spot on the top of a hill—partly because it was a conspicuous site for the temple of learning, and partly because land is cheap where there is no chance [illegible], and the very [illegible] nothing to nibble. About the [illegible] were, carved, initials and [illegible] [illegible] wart-like eruption, one would be tempted to call it, being, in reality, a crop of soft [illegible], which, adhering in considerable numbers, and hardening after the usual fashion of papier mache, formed at least permanent ornaments of the edifice.

The young master's quick eye soon noticed that a particular part of the wall was most favored with these ornamental appendages. Their position pointed sufficiently clear to the part of the room they came from. In fact, there was a nest of young mutineers just there, which must be broken up by coup d'etat. This was easily effected by a redistribution of the seats and arranging the scholars according to classes so that a mischievous fellow, charged full of the rebellious imponderable, should find himself between two nonconductors, in the shape of small boys of studious habits. It was managed quietly enough, in such a plausible sort of a way that its motive was not thought of. But its effects were soon felt; and then began a system of correspondence by signs, and the throwing of little scrawls done up in pellets, and announced by preliminary a'h'ms! to call the attention of the distant youth addressed. Some of these were incendiary documents, devoting the schoolmaster to the lower divinities, and holding him up in a variety of forcible phrases to the indignation of the youthful community of School District No. 1, Pigwacket Centre.

Presently the draughtsman of the school set a caricature in circulation, labeled, to prevent mistakes, with the schoolmaster's name. An immense bell crowned hat, and a long, pointed, swallowed-tailed coat showed that the artist had in his mind the conventional dandy as shown in prints thirty or forty years ago, rather than any actual human aspect of the present time. But it was passed round among the boys and made its laugh, helping, of course, to undermine the masters authority, as Punch or the Charivari takes the dignity out of an obnoxious minister.

One morning, on going to the schoolroom, Master Landon found an enlarged copy of this sketch, with its label, pinned on the door. He took it down, smiled a little, put it into his pocket, and entered the schoolroom. An insiduous silence prevailed, which looked as if some plot were brewing. The boys were ripe for mischief but afraid. They had really no fault to find with the master, except that he was dressed like a gentleman, which a certain class of fellows always consider a personal insult to themselves. But the older ones were evidently plotting, and more than once the warning a'h'm! was heard, and a dirty little scrap of paper rolled into a wad shot from one seat to another. One of these happened to strike the stove funnel, and lodged on the master's desk. He was cool enough not to seem to notice it. He secured it without being observed by the boys. It required no immediate notice.

He who should have enjoyed the privilege of looking upon Mr. Bernard the next morning, when his toilet was about half finished, would have had a very pleasant gratuitous exhibition. First he buckled the strap of his trousers pretty tightly. Then he took up a pair of heavy dumb-bells, and swung them for a few minutes, then two great, Indian clubs, with which he enacted all sorts of impossible looking feats. His limbs were not very large, nor were his shoulders remarkably broad; but if you knew as much of the muscles as all persons who look at statutes and pictures with a critical eye ought to have learned—if you knew the trapezius, lying diamond shaped over the back and shoulders like a monk's cowl—or the deltoid, which caps the shoulders like an epaulette—or the triecps, which furnishes the calf of the upper arm—or the hard knotted biceps—any of the great sculptural landmarks, in fact—you would have said there was a pretty show of them beneath the white satiny skin of Mr. Bernard Langdon. And if you had seen him, when he had lain down the Indian clubs, catch hold of a leather strap that hung from the beam of the old-fashioned ceiling, and lift and lower himself over and over again by his left hand alone, you might have thought it a very simple and easy thing to do, until you tried to do it yourself.

Mr. Bernard looked at himself with the eye of an expert. "Pretty well!" he said; "not so much fallen off as I expected." Then he set up his bolster in a very knowing sort of way, and delivered two or three blows as straight as rulers and swift as winks. "That will do," he said. Then, as if to make a certainty of his condition, he took a dynamometer from one of the drawers in his old veneered bereau. First he squeezed it with his two hands. Then he placed it on the floor and lifted steadily, strongly. The springs creaked and cracked; the index swept with a great stride far up into the high figures of the scale; it was a good lift. He was satisfied. He sat down on the edge of the bed and looked at his cleanly shaped arms. "If I strike one of those boobies, I am afraid I shall spoil him," he said. Yet this young man, when weighed with his class at college, could barely turn one hundred and forty-two pounds in the scale—not a very heavy weight, surely; but some of the middle weights, as the present English champion, for instance, seem to be of a far finer quality of muscle than the bulkier fellows.

The master took his breakfast with a good appetite that morning, but was, perhaps, rather more quiet than usual. After breakfast, he went up stairs and put on a light frock, instead of his usual dress-coat, which was a close fitting and rather stylish one. On his way to school he met Alminy Cutterr, who happened to be walking in the other direction.

"Good morning, Miss Cutterr," he [illegible]

"Mr. Langdon, let me make y' acquainted with Miss Braowne."

So he said, "Good morning," to which she replied, "Good mornin', Mr. Langdon, haow's your haalth?" The answer to this question ought naturally to have been the end of the talk, but Alminy Cutterr lingered and looked as if she had something on her mind.

Alminy was a good soul, with red cheeks and bright eyes, kind hearted as she could be, and it was out of the question for her to hide her thoughts or feelings like a fine lady. Her bright eyes were moist and her cheek paler than they were wont, as she said, with her lips quivering:

"Oh, Mr. Langdon, them boys'll be the death of ye, if ye don't take caar!"

"Why, what's the matter, my dear?" said Mr. Bernard. Don't think there was anything very odd in that "my dear" at the second interview with a village belle; some of those women tamers call a girl "my dear" after five minutes' acquaintance, and it seems all right as they say it. But you had not better try it at a venture.

It sounded all right to Alminy as Mr. Bernard said it. "I'll tell ye what's the mahtterr'" she said in a frightened voice. "Abbor's goin' to car' his dog, 'n' he'll set him on yo'z sure 'z'r' alive. 'T's the same cretur that haalf eat up Eben Squires' little Jo, a year come nex' Faast-day."

Now, this last statement was undoubtedly over-colored, as little Jo Squires was running about the village—with an ugly scar on his arm, it is true, where the beast had caught him with his teeth, on the occasion of the child's taking liberties with him, as he had been accustomed to do with a good tempered Newfoundtand dog, which seemed to like being pulled and hauled round by children. After this the creature was commonly muzzled, and as he was fed on raw meat chiefly, was always ready for a fight, which he was always indulged in when anything stout enough to match him could be found in any of the neighboring villages.

Tiger, or more briefly Tige, the property of Abner Briggs, Jr., belonged to a species not distinctly marked in scientific books, but well known to our country folks under the name of "yallah dog." They do not use this expression as they would say black dog or white dog, but with as definite meaning as when they speak of a terrier or a spaniel. A "yallah dog" is a large canine brute, with a dingy, old-flannel color, of no particular breed except his own, who hangs around a tavern or butcher's shop or trots alongside a team, looking as if he were disgusted with the world and the world with him. Our inland population, while they tolerate him, speak of him with contempt.

Tige was an ill-conditioned brute by nature, and art had not improved him by cropping his ears and tail, and investing him with a spiked collar. He bore on his person, also, various not ornamental scars—marks of old battles; for Tige had fight in him, as we said before, and as might be guessed by a certain bluntness about the muzzle with a projection of the lower jaw, which looked as if there might be a bulldog stripe among the numerous bar-sinisters of his lineage.

We hope our lecture on the natural history of the "yallah dog" will prove our sufficient excuse for keeping Alminy Cutterr waiting while we have been "a-givin'" it. She now looked round to see if she and the master were observed. Apparently they were not. In reality they were—through a crack in the fence near the road. Abner Briggs, her most ardent and persistent admirer, had witnessed the interview, and was anything but pleased with what he had seen.

No wonder he was furious when he saw the schoolmaster, who had never seen the girl till within a week, touching with his lips those rosy cheeks which he had never dared approach. But that was all; it was a sudden impulse; and the master turned away from the young girl, laughing, and telling her not to fret herself about him—he would take care of himself.

Master Langdon took his seat and began the exercises of his school. The smaller boys recited their lessons well enough, but some of the larger ones were negligent and surly. He noticed one or two of them looking towards the door as if expecting somebody or something in that direction. At half-past nine o'clock, Abner Briggs, junior, who had not yet shown himself, made his appearance. He was followed by his "yallah dog," without his muzzle, who squatted down very grimly near the door, and gave a wolfish look round the room, as if he were considering which was the plumpest boy to begin with. The young butcher, meanwhile, went to his seat, looking somewhat flushed, except round the lips, which were hardly as red as common, and set pretty sharply.

"Put out that dog, Abner Briggs!" The master spoke as the captain speaks to the helmsman when there are rocks foaming at the lips, right under his lee.

Abner Briggs answered as the helmsman answers when he knows he has a mutinous crew round him that mean to run the ship on the reef, and is one of the mutineers himself: "Put him sout y'rself, 'f ye a'n't afeared on him!"

The master stepped into the aisle. The great cur showed his teeth, and the devilish instincus of his old wolf-ancestry looked out of his eyes, and flashed from his sharp tusks, and yawned in his wide mouth and deep red gullet.

The movements of animals are so much quicker than those of human beings commonly are that they avoid blows as easily as one of us steps out of the way of an ox-cart. It must be a very stupid dog that lets himself be run over by a fast-driver in his gig; he can [illegible] makes a spring, and the blow or kick comes too late.

It was not so this time. The master was a fencer and something of a boxer; he had played at single stick, and was used to watching an adversary's eye, and coming down upon him without any of those premonitory symptoms by which unpractised persons show long beforehand what mischief they meditate.

"Out with you!" he said fiercely, and explained what he meant by a sudden flash of his boot that clashed the yellow dog's white teeth together like the springing of a bear-trap. The cur knew he had found his master at the first word and glance, as low animals on four legs, or a smaller number, always do; and the blow took him so much by surprise that it curled him up in an instant, and he went bundling out of the open schoolhouse door, with a most pitiable yelp, and his stump of a tail shut down as close as his owner ever shut the short, stubbed blade of his jacknife.

It was time for the other cur to find who his master was.

"Follow your dog, Abner Briggs!" said Master Langdon.

The stout butcher youth looked round, but the rebels were all cowed and sat still.

"I'll go when I'm ready," he said, "'n I guess I won't go afore I'm ready.

"You're ready now," said Master Langdon, turning up his cuffs so that the little boys noticed the yellow gleam of a pair of gold sleeve-buttons, once worn by Colonel Percy Wentworth, famous in the old French war.

Abner Briggs, junior, did not, apparently, think he was ready, at any rate; for he rose in his place and stood with clenched fists, defiant, as the master strode toward him. The master knew the fellow was really frightened for all his looks, and that he must have no time to rally. So he caught him suddenly by the collar, and with one great pull laid him over on his desk and on the open floor. He gave him a sharp fling backward, and stood looking at him.

The rough-and-tumble fighters all clinch, as everybody knows; and Abner Briggs, junior was one of that kind. He remembered how he had floored Master Weeks, and he had just spunk enough left in him to try to repeat his former successful experiment to the new master. He sprang at him, open-handed, to clutch him. So the master had to strike,—once, but very hard, and just in the place to tell. No doubt the authority that doth hedge a schoolmaster added to the effect of the blow; but the blow was itself a neat one, and did not require to be repeated.

"Now go home," said the master, "and don't let me see you or your dog here again." And he turned his cuffs down again over the gold sleeve buttons.

This finished the great Pigwacket Centre School Rebellion. What could be done with a master who was pleasant so long as the boys behaved decently, and such a terrible fellow when he got "rited" as they called it. In a week's time everything was reduced to order, and the school committee were delighted.

THE PROPER THING.

Fans are of all sizes, very large or very small.

Soft-crown turbans will be most used in early spring.

Embroidered laces will be a feature of next season.

Lace and silk jackets will be worn in the house next summer.

Spring fabrics are lighter and more delicate in tint than those used of late.

Ottoman silks are still popular, with those who choose expensive fabrics.

Ribbons will be worn in profusion next season, and many novelties in these are shown.

Entire skirt fronts of embroidery and bead work come among early spring importations.

Groups of three or four large beads are sewed at intervals all over bonnets, high hats and turbans.

For midsummer wear leghorn flats with low crown and brim five inches wide will be revived.

Small bonnets, high hats and turbans will be worn next season in shape similar to those now worn.

Irish poplins appear in fine quality without the stiffness which formerly characterized these goods.

Veils are now worn under bonnets, against the face, and are left loose so as not to flatten the hair and brows.

"Drap de saxe" is a new woolen textile woven as smooth as coarse linen. It is striped with velvet and is very effective.

Fancy straws are the earliest importations of spring millinery, but it is probable that the fine smooth straws will remain in favor.

Spring flowers will rival ribbons in trimming the new hats. Those in long stems will be chosen so they can be arranged in high clusters.

Children's hair is rarely allowed to hang loosely, but is braided, tied with a ribbon a few inches from the ends and allowed to hang loosely below the tie, or has the end of the braid turned up to the head and tied there with a ribbon. The front hair is waived or brushed back plainly.

Backache, Sharp pains Rheumatism, Kidney Diseases, Torpid Liver, Lung Troubles or Lameness in any part quickly cured by the Hop Plaster. The soothing and pain-killing virtues of Hops combined with strengthening Gums and Extracts. The best porus plaster made.

Buell's Meeting With Grant at Shiloh.

From General D. C. Buell's article in the May Century, entitled "Shiloh Reviewed," we quote the following: "About half-way up we met a stream of fugitives that poured in a constantly swelling current along the west bank of the river. The mouth of Snake Creek was full of them swimming across. We arrived at the Landing about one o'clock. I inquired for Gen. Grant, and was informed that he was on his headquaters boat, nearly against which we had landed. I went on board, and was met by him at the door of the ladies' cabin, in which there were besides himself two or three members of his staff. Other officers may have entered afterward. He appeared to realize that he was beset by a pressing danger, and manifested by manner more than in words that he was relieved by my arrival as indicating the near approach of succor; but there was nothing in his deportment that circumstances would not have justified without disparagement to the character of a courageous soldier. Certainly there was none of that masterly confidence which has since been assumed with reference to the occasion. After the first salutation, and as I walked to a seat, he remarked that he had just come in from the front, and held up his sword to call my attention to an indentation, which he said the scabbard had received from a shot. I did not particularly notice it, and after inquiring about the progress of the battle and requesting steamers to bring up Crittenden's division, which was coming into Savannah as I left, I proposed that we should go ashore. As we reached the gangway I noticed that the horses of himself and staff were being taken ashore. He mounted and rode away, while I walked up the hill; so that I saw him no more until the attack occurred at the Landing late in the evening. I state these particulars of our meeting with so much detail because a totally incorrect version of the place, manner, and substance of the interview has been used to give a false impression of the state of the battle, and a false coloring to personal traits which are assumed to have had the issue in control."

MUSCULAR MINSTRELS.

How Barlow, Wilson & Rankin's People Pass Their Spare Time.

There prevails in society an impression that minstrel men are a set of dissipated and apoplectic creatures, who drink beyond all belief, whose soul inspiring passion is a cluster diamond pin, and who are generally incompetent in a physical way to protect themselves. Any one who, his mind burdened with such a belief, attempted to tread on the toes of Barlow, Wilson & Rankin's troupe would speedily become convinced of his error. There is no nimbler set of athletes on the road. The idea of physical care and culture seems to prevade the entire company. Inasmuch as is consistent with their necessarily late hours, every man in the company is in constant training. Each afternoon the stage of the theatre where they are to perform, is turned into a gymnasium. There are striking bags, dumb bells of all siezes, Indian clubs and various other gymnastic contrivances. There are some lively sparring bouts, and one may see almost any afternoon several neat exhibitions of the fistic art. Muldoon, the wrestler, whose statuary posing is a prominent feature of the troupe's nightly performance, is the king bee. He is compelled to take constant and heavy exercise to preserve the magnificent development which makes him such a fine figure of a Greek god or a Roman gladiator. It is probably Muldoon's influence which causes the athletic spirit in Barlow, Wilson & Rankin's company, but it is safe to say they would make a good showing without him. Hall, the banjo expert, is a first-class club swinger.—[Syracuse Journal.

THE ANCIENT GREEKS.

THEIR BELIEF CONCERNING THE SEAT OF LOVE AND PASSION.

The Liver Regarded as the Favored Organ—How Could it be so? Recent Facts Partly Confirm this Belief.

The ancient Greeks thought the seat of love and passion was in the liver, and in great measure their opinion was not far astray. The lover whose liver is off, or the husband who is bilious, is not half a man—his sluggish liver has filled his blood with bile.

Of all the [illegible] counterfeits in the world, [illegible] blood full of bile is the [illegible].

We have about 10 quarts of this fluid in the average size man. It is constantly undergoing change and is manufactured from the food we daily consume by a chemical process nature has. She selects only that portion which, after digestion, is found to be proper, and takes it up by a tube called the thoracic duct, emptying it into the large vein near the collar bone, from which it is at once carried to the kidneys to be strained of all the deleterious matter which was left by the bowels.

If the kidneys are in a healthy condition, the blood is in an absolutely pure state, contains all the elements for repairing waste, returns to the heart and is thrown by that organ to every part of the living body, to give up its nourishment and take up all the worn-out material.

Contrary to general belief the liver is not a blood-purifying organ; its purpose is only for nutrition digestion and it secreets daily many pounds of bile, some being used in digestion and nutrition, and the balance as a cathartic.

Now, after being housed up all winter with meat largely composing the diet for the purpose of producing heat, the liver increases one-third of its supply of bile, and in the spring nature not having use for the excess, it is thrown into the blood, carried to the skin (for it must be got rid of in some way) and causes that condition known as "bilious" when the person is dull, lethargic, restless, well to-day and half sick to-morrow; because the blood is loaded with this substance, which is just as foreign to it as so much dirt or corruption, and poisous the entire body, making your blood impure. You know there is something out of gear and the natural impulse is to take cathartics,—but drastic cathartics do not remove the cause—they make matters worse.

You ask, why? Because my friend the liver is a sluggish, lethargic organ that cannot be relieved of any ailment except by medicine which acts upon it in a quiet, steady manner, producing permanent effects, and assisting, not goading its normal action. The kidneys do the purifying. Always remember that! No other organ in the body can take their place in this respect, and they attend to over 9,000 hogsheads of blood in a year! Think of it and wonder that they are able to do so large an amount of work!

A healthy kidney to purify, and a healthy liver, emptying its poison into the bowels and not into the blood, are the true and only givers of pure blood.

The interior of the kidneys have few nerves of sensation, and a stone can be, and often is present without any indication until it reaches the first outlet, which is supplied with nerves that soon sound the alarm.

Do you see the moral of this? A healthy liver and kidney is all there is to this question of pure blood. Keep them in order. Don't wait until you find they are diseased, for then in may be too late. Do this and you are bound to have pure plood. Warner's safe cure has a direct action upon both kidneys and liver, and has become a recognized agent for its health-preserving and blood-purifying properties, and as such is used by many physicians. A few bottles will positively prevent disease, and we are certain that disease of either organ is prevented by its use, if taken in time.

The spring approaches and nature needs help. Take it and save sickness and doctor's bills. Don't let any season go by without its use, or you may regret it forever.

EXCITEMENT IN TEXAS.

Great excitement has been caused in the vicinity of Paris Texas, by the remarkable recovery of Mr. J. Corley, who was so helpless he could not turn in bed, or raise his head; everybody said he was dying with consumption. A trial bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery was sent him. Finding relief, he bought a large bottle and a box of Dr. King's New Life Pills; by the time he had taken two boxes of Pills and two bottles of the Discovery, he was well and had gained in flesh thirty-six pounds. Rheumatism

It is an established fact that Hood's Sarsaparilla has proven an invaluable remedy in many severe cases of rheumatism, effecting remarkable cures by its powerful action in correcting the acidity of the blood, which is the cause of the disease, and purifying and enriching the vital fluid.

It is certainly fair to assume that what Hood's Sarsaparilla has done for others it will do for you. Therefore, if you suffer the pains and aches of rheumatism, give this potent remedy a fair trial.

A Journalistic Feat.

Henry W. Grady relates the following in the Atlanta (Ga) Constitution: "Can I venture an incident here that throws an inside light on journalism? At 2 o'clock on the morning of Governor Stephens' death an editor of the Constitution, who, with two stenographers, had prepared the narrative of the night, was with the watchers in the blue room of the mansion. The Constitution had to go to press at 3:30 o'clock to the minute. It was not believed that Mr. Stephens would die before that hour. Consequently the narrative had been written in the present tense. If death should occur before the paper was put on the press, there were perhaps a hundred places in the story were the past tense would have to be substituted. A force of proofreaders sat with the proof before them, every contingent point marked. Thirty printers sat at their desks awaiting orders. The telephone between the mansion and the office was open, and the night editor sat with the 'phone to his ear. At 3:23 o'clock Dr. Steiner, rising from his knees with reverent face said, "He is dead!" Before the whispered words had left the room the word "dead" flew along the telephone wires and reached the listening night editor. Before the watchers in the parlor knew that the great soul had taken its flight, a dozen proofreaders were plunging through the slips with swift pencils, thirty printers were clipping the moorings that held the present to the past, and in just seven minutes the press was throwing off the story of the life and death of Georgia's martyr statesman."

How to Rear Children.

Treat them kindly.

Never talk old folks talk in front of children.

Teach them to think that the little boy in rags has a heart in him and a stomach, too, in spite of the rags.

Never speak flippantly of neighbors before children. They may meet the neighbors' children and have a talk about it.

Don't preach politeness and propriety to them and violate their laws yourself. In other words let the example you set them be a good one.

Never quarrel in their presence. If you want to quarrel, wait till the children are gone to bed. Then they will not see you, and perhaps by that time you will not want to quarrel.

Teach them, as they grow older, that a respectful demeanor to others, a gentle tone of voice, a kind dispositon, a generous nature, an honest purpose, and an industrious mind, are better than anything else on earth. Teach them these things, and self-reliance and intelligence and capability will come of themselves. Teach them these things, and your boys and girls will grow up to be noble men and women.

THE wind in New York last Friday broke the record as well as many other things. It reached a velocity of eighty-four miles an hour.

AT the charter election in Baldwinsville yesterday, the entire ticket, nominated by the Republican caucus with the exception of one police constable, was elected.

YESTERDAY the Democrats elected their mayors in Utica, Rome and Elmira and the Republicans in Newburg, Auburn and Oswego. In Rochester, an independent Republican, endorsed by the citizens and labor unions was elected by a large majority.

CHARLES GUILT of Montreal, Canada, proposes to swim through the whirlpool rapids at Niagara at the same time, next summer, that Ross and Plasted row through. Prepare another tombstone. Have the inscriptions on the three read Ross, Plaisted, Guilt.

THE second display this year by the New York Horticultural Society opened last evening in New York. There was an especially interesting display of flowers, including a new rose "Her Majesty." the largest rose in existence which was placed on exhibition for the first time in this country.

CONSIDERABLE interest is manifested in the choice of a superintendent of public instruction by the legislature, March 10—one week from to-day. Public sentiment demands the selection of a good man for the position, a gentleman of sound judgment, executive ability, personal excellence of character and above all one who is a friend of education in the primary branches.

ON the 16th day of September next, occurs the centennial of the settlement of Onondaga county. The Syracuse Herald in view of this interresting period in the county's history proposes offering a series of prizes for sketches and reminescences relating to the early settlement and history of Onondaga county to be furnished to the Herald before the 15th of August 1886. The prizes are divided into forty, twenty-five, fifteen, ten and five dollars respectively, and the stories on which they may be awarded will be printed in a centennial issue of the Herald.

ONE of the greatest railroad movements ever known will take place on the first of June, when the gauge of nearly all of the southern railroads will be changed to a size to correspond to the northern or standard gauge. The southern gauge has for many years past been a source of endless expense and inconvenience to all the railroads south of Ohio and Potomac rivers, and while the advantages of a uniform gauge have long been seen, its adoption has now come to be a necessity. Meeting of the representatives of the several southern roads interested in the change of gauge was held in Atlanta on February 2d, and all the details of the change were arranged. It was decided that Monday, May 31, and Tuesday, June 1st, be set apart for the work, and that a uniform gauge, of 4 feet 9 inches be adopted in lieu of the standard gauge which 4 foot 9 inch guage is considered is 4 foot eight and and-half inches. The more convenient, and, as a certain amount of lateral play is allowed on all tracks, it is sufficiently near the northern guage to permit of a uniform wheel guage all over the country. Nearly 13,000 miles of railroad will be changed to the uniform gauge inside of about 12 hours and without interruption in the running of many of the important trains even on the day that the change takes place. The change of gauge will take place on almost every railroad south of the Ohio and Potomac rivers, extending over about 13,128 miles of railway, made up as follows: South Carolina, 1,320 miles; North Carolina 960; Georgia 2,418, Florida, 1,250; Alabama, 1,803; Mississippi 776; Louisiana, 318; Kentucky 1,118; Tennessee, 1,886, and Virginia, 981 miles,

LITERARY.

LIPPINCOTT'S MONTHLY.

Lippincott's monthly magazine for March is on our table and cannot but be read with interest. The two serials increase in interest as the plot is further developed. "Perchance to Dream" is an ingenious short story by Brander Matthews. W. H. Babcock contributes an article on the rhymes and games current among the children at the national capital entitled "Song-Games and Myth-Dramas at Washington." "The Pioneer of Tierra del Fuego" is a thrilling narrative, treating of a modern event, that has previously been but little known. Lawrence Hutton writes a critical and historical account of "The American Play." In the "Monthly Gossip" W. H. B. discusses in an able manner the question whether New York is our literary capital.

Other topics of current interest are treated in this department. Poems from the pens of Frank Dempster Sherman, Helen Gray Cone, Clinton Scollard and John B. Tabb can also be found.

Speaking of the large quantity of raw silk received by rail from San Francisco at New York Friday Freight-Agent James of the New York Central and Hudson River railroad, said:—"I believe this is the largest amount that ever came in one shipment, but it is no new thing for Chinese and Japanese silk to come via San Francisco to New York."

Gen. William B. Hazen, chief signal-service officer, is now suing George Jones, the proprietor of the New York Times, in the supreme court to recover $100,000 damages for alleged libel, it being charged that the newspaper published libelous statements concerning the plaintiff's character as a signal-service officer, and also concerning his connection with the recent arctic expedition.

The New York Sun is responsible for the follow: "A Chautauqua county cheese maker went to Buffalo the other day and brought home a fine imported Swiss cheese. All praised it but his wife, who, after the praise had ceased, said she had found her husband's private mark on the cheese. He had paid thirty-three cents a pound for the very cheese that he had made and sold for six cents."

The New York, Ontario & Western, rather than contest suits for damages, has settled with the persons injured in the accident at Liberty, February 18th. To Mrs. Hannah McIntosh of Livingston Manor, who was cut in the mouth so badly that part of the lip had to be removed and was bruised about the limbs, neck and shoulders, they paid $500. To Rev. J. S. Johnson of Madison university who was slightly injured internally, $600 was paid, and to V. A. Bassett of Southwest Oswego, who was also internally, $200 was paid.

Personal and Political.

Lord Gifford, the British colonial secretary at Gibraltar, recently won a prize of $25,000 in the Spanish lottery. He only bought his ticket by chance.

Prince Bismark is prostrated by a severe attack of sciatica. He is unable to leave his room and declines to receive any visitors either personal or official.

Judge Sames L. Mitchell of Nebraska, while addressing the convention of early Iowa law makers in Des Moines on Thursday dropped dead of apoplexy on the floor of the opera house.

The Hon. William D Kelly of Pennsylvania thinks he was the first public man in America to make a speech for woman suffrage. It was forty-five years ago, and he has firmly believed in the cause ever since.

Queen Victoria and Prince and Princess Henry of Battenberg witnessed a performance of Gounod's oratorio "Mors et Vita" at the Victoria hall on Friday. The queen's appearance was hailed with cheers, the audience all standing.

Gen. Longstreet is going to Washington to try and force a settlement with the government. The government owes him about $12,000, which it will not take steps to pay until Gen. Longstreet first pays $2,000 which he owes the government. As he is not able to do this an unpleasant predicament exists. Gen. Longstreet has written the comptroller a sharp letter on the subject.

Governor Seymour as a politician is described by Mr. Blaine in the following masterly manner: "No man was more seductive in appeal or more impressive in sedate and stately eloquence. With his art of persuasion he combined rare skill in evading difficult questions while preserving an appearance of candor, His speeches were as elusive and illusive as they were smooth and graceful."

Judge Torrence of Minnesota relates with pride that he and his six brothers all veterans of the war of the rebellion —were gathered about the deathbed of their mother, and she took into her worn and withered hand his left hand, felt of it and then said: "Give me the other hand, my son." And as she felt of it with the two shortened fingers shot away in battle she murmured, "That is the one I want," raised it to her lips, kissed it fondly and soon after sank away to rest. A Spartan mother never did anything more heroic than that.

COUNTY COMMENT.

An effort is being made to establish a manufactory in Parish that will employ a hundred or more hands.

A Questionable Measure.

Assemblyman Fremont Cole of Schuyler county, last Thursday, introduced a measure instructing the Superintendent of Public Works to remove the flush boards from the Seneca river on the dam at Waterloo. They are intended to raise the water in Seneca lake, and in a degree makes it a reservoir for the great manufactories along the outlet, as well as improving steamboat navigation on the lake. The bill of Mr. Cole means the wasting of the waters for the reason of reclaiming a few acres of worthless swamp lands at Watkins. Mr. Leverich has decidedly the equity and logical public interest in his proposition, but Mr. Cole has the advantage of more experience in the legislature, and will doubtless very quickly wind up Leverich's little ball of yarn. "Pity 'tis, 'tis true" that simply because of analtogether unworthy political combination every manufactory on the greatest natural water-power in the state lying between Watkins and Oswego, involving the fortunes of Waterloo, Seneca Falls, Baldwinsville, Fulton, Oswego Falls, the city of Oswego and all intermediate points, is thus made to pay a tribute to the swamp angels of Watkins, whose entire possessions are not worth as much as the yearly income of four of the laborers whose interests they seek to depress. There is no doubt that Mr. Leverich will exert his best efforts in favor of this measure, but he has altogether too wily and experienced an antagonist in Mr. Cole, who, by the way, is a Seneca county boy, and ought to know better.—[Seneca Falls cor. WASHINGTON, Feb. 26.—[illegible] number of conventions have been held in this city during the week. Washington has long been a [illegible] in this respect. It has come to be the [illegible] rendezvous for all kinds of conventions. Meteorologists have been here talking about the weather; the Swedenborgians have been in council, and distinguished educators from all parts of the country have been discussing their sacred subject. The latter gathering was a large representative one, and its interchange of views was useful to the system with it is identified, as well as of interest to all friends of the common school.

As to Congress, the Senate continues to disagree on the great Educational bill, and the House continues to waste time and talk about all kinds of unimportant subjects. It becomes more evident every day that the expedition of business under the new rules of the House is not expedited to any appreciable extent. There is nothing in the new rules to prevent Members from making irrelevant speeches. If they desire to stray away from the subject, there is no way to head them off.

For instance the House goes into committee of the whole on the private calendar. A private bill is taken up and a Representative offers an amendment to it and then branches off and makes a long speech on the silver question, as did Mr. Scott, the millionare member from Erie, Penn., a few days ago. For the present, however, Saturday has been set apart for general debate, and it is hoped this will prevent business being disturbed on other days by members who have speeches to deliver on special subjects.

Senator George, of Miss., is one of the contributors to the Educational debate. He cited a number of instances in which money had been appropriated from the National Treasury to purposes not enumerated in the constitution, and asked Senators where, in their view of the Constitution, they found authority for sending ships to Ireland in 1847, and to France and Germany in 1876, to relieve distress in those countries.

"We gave millions of money," said he, "to a Centennial Exposition, and a good deal of money to the New Orleans Exposition. Where was the authority in the Constitution for that, or for a bureau of agriculture? Where was authority to tax the people for the education of of the Indians, and why should we educate the Indians and not the colored people? Where was the authority to establish and maintain a Congressional library? If to educate Congressmen, why was an appropriation for their education more constitutional than an appropriation to educate their constituents?"

Senator Gray, of Delaware. hoped that Senator George would not claim that a library could be built by Congress in every city in the Union. The Senator from Miss. replied that the question now was where Congress got authority to build one in Washington. Finally he asked whence came the authority to pay pensions? Mr. Gray said from the power to raise and maintain armies, and Mr. Morgan said from the fourteenth amendment. Mr. George differed from both Senators saying it was a bounty from the Government, and a very proper and dutiful beneficence.

A Republican Senator is quoted as saying that there were not a dozen Senators who wanted the Blair Educational bill to pass, but that they had not sufficient moral courage to vote against it. It is alleged that the Republicans do not want to place $77,000,000 in the hands of the Democratic officials for disbursement, and yet they do not want to go on record as voting against a measure to educate the negroes of the South. Senator Blair has subjected himself to much unkind criticism by bringing in an issue so dangerous to ambitious statesmen.

Some animated debates are promised in Congress next week. In the Senate the Republican caucus resolutions relating to the Administration witholding official papers will be met with a counter demonstration from the Democrats. A lively political discussion will follow that is likely to run on some days, and draw large crowds to the galleries. In the House of Representatives the Silver bill comes up for debate on Tuesday. Sixty members have signified their intention to be heard, and ten days have been set apart to allow them the wished for opportunity.

In department circles the latest item of interest is the formation of a rather novel association which has just been incorporated under the title of "The Clerks Beneficial League." It is composed of Government clerks and is for the benefit and protection of discharged Government clerks. From the entrance fees a fund is provided to be paid members when they lose their places. From a $3.10 investment each member is to get $200 if discharged from the Government service.

A CHAT WITH THOSE WHO READ NEW YORK NEWSPAPERS. AND OTHERS WHO DON'T READ ANY.—The newspaper is becoming more and more a necessity to intelligent men and women, and residents of Central and Northern New York will find upon trial that the
AND
meet their wants as no other newspapers can succeed in doing. The UTICA MORNING HERALD since its recent enlargement, is able by means of its special wire connection with the Associated press to publish every morning the telegraphic news of the world in larger quantity, and of a later date than any New York newspaper, owing to the fact that the latter are compelled to go to press about two hours earlier than the HERALD. Containing all the general news, with complete market reports, the UTICA HERALD also supplies, with minuteness that permits no rivalry, the local news of all Central and Northern New York, carefully gleaned by an army of special correspondents. Thus it does for its patrons what no New York paper can do, supplies a general and local newspaper in one. More than that, it presents in each issue a wealth of reading matter of the choicest and freshest description, culled from every source; and so answers for a dozen newspapers and one or two magazines thrown in.
The same characteristics distinguish the UTICA WEEKLY HERALD, so long the favorite family journal of the rich agricultural section through which it continues to enjoy an unrivaled circulation. Its ten generous pages overflow with news, local and general, the latest markets, an admirably equipped agricultural department, and miscellany to enliven the long winter evenings. It is a healthy newspaper, that can be admitted into every family and read with genuine profit, in this respect differing widely from the flash publications that are offered in the guise of weekly newspapers, containing sensational and demoralizing reading which is poison to the young.
If you don't know this from actual experience, subscribe for the daily or weekly UTICA HERALD for a month, and you will be convinced. The Herald keeps its old friends, and welcomes new ones. A sample copy of either issue will be sent to any address, on receipt of a postal card asking it. The UTICA MORNING HERALD costs 67 cents a month, $2.00 for three months, or $8 a year.
The UTICA WEEKLY HERALD is $1.50 a year, Postage free in the United States. Address

A HANDSOME STOVE.
AN EXCELLENT HEATER.
AN ECONOMICAL STOVE.
A PERFECT VENTILATOR.

☞ A good Base Burner of any kind will heat a room, but it also destroys and burns up the life principle of the air. Foul air if hot will not keep a person warm. The Howe Ventilating Stove warms the room and keeps the air pure. It Ventilates the room at the same time that it heats it. Cold, fresh air is taken into the Stove through a pipe from the outside of the house. Fresh air passes into the Stove, is heated and passes into the room through the open top, while the foul, impure air being heavier than fresh, pure heated air drops dead to the floor, is forced into a flue in the Stove and is drawn through a small pipe in the smoke pipe into the chimney and escapes with the smoke.

J. Z. LITTLE

The trial of John D. Spencer of Mexico for grand larceny was called last Friday afternoon in the Onondaga Court of Sessions at Syracuse. District Attorney Lewis was assisted by W. P. Goodelle. Judge Huntington of Oswego and Henry Hoyt conducted the defence The prosecution grew out of the relations of Mr. Spencer with a young woman of Mexico, Carrie A. Barnes. Miss Barnes claimed in her evidence that she first met Spencer at a skating rink in Mexico, in 1884; that he called upon her frequently at her home, where she kept house for her father. She was told that Spencer was a married man and that his wife was in the asylum. In November, 1884, she alleged that Spencer showed her a letter and said it contained a divorce. On her cross-examination she said that she met Spencer by appointment in Syracuse, on July 28th, 1885. They went to Geneva, remaining there from Friday night until Monday and occupied a room together. She gave Spencer $17 at her home in Mexico, $20 when he was leaving her for Syracuse, and $100 on the cars near Geneva. From Geneva they went to Watkins Glen and Rochester where they had a quarrel. Miss Barnes saying she was tired of traveling around and wished to go home. Spencer told her to return to Mexico and he would follow. She went to Shortsville, remained there one night with relatives and then went home. She further claims that Spencer instead of coming to Mexico as he had agreed, went to Chicago where he was arrested in August by Detective Costello of that city and brought to Syracuse.

Spencer in his own behalf denied that he ever told her that he had obtained a bill of divorce from his wife. He went on the trip with her in July, 1885. Before starting on the trip, there was nothing said about going away to get married. "Johnson, the postmaster, had given me a vacation of four weeks, just before we started on the trip, and paid me $33.33 in advance. I took only a suit of clothes and linen with me, leaving the balance of my effects in Mexico. I only took a hand satchel. There was no talk or arrangement entered into about our going West to be married. I met her in Syracuse. We arranged at her home in Mexico to go on a trip a day or two before we started. I told her that I had a vacation of a week or two. She said she would get some money and she would go with me. I told her I was going to Chicago, to my home and my wife. We were to to meet at Auburn first. She was to tell her folks she she was going to Shortsville on a visit, to stay a week or two. I took about $89 with me on the trip and received $55 from Miss Barnes, all at one time, in the hotel at Geneva. She handed it to me and said: 'here is money to meet our expenses.' This money was used to pay our hotel and other expenses. We then went to Watkins and then to Canandaigua and Rochester."

The trial of the case was completed Saturday evening. Before adjournment Mr. Hoyt in a spirited speech summed up for the defense, and on the reconvening of court at 7:30 o'clock, Attorney Goodelle gave his final address for the prosecution, making telling arguments as to the prisoner's guilt. Judge Northrup charged the jury and after a half-hour's deliberation a verdict of guilty of grand larceny in the second degree was found. Monday morning at the opening of the court, Spencer was brought up to receive his sentence. Attorney Hoyt asked for the mercy of the court, saying that under the old code, in his judgment, Spencer would have been acquitted, no larceny having been proven. The main offence was one in which both complainant and defendant were criminals; the trip was one taken in violation of common morals and common decency; the defendant is entitled to no great respect and the complainant stands about par with him, but Spencer comes from a reputable family, and this young man may yet be reformed. He has been sinned against while himself sinning. It is not the object of the law to crucify but rather to reform. Mr. Hoyt asked that Spencer be sent to the Elmira reformatory, where he might have a chance to reform. Judge Northrup then sentenced Spencer to three years imprisonment at hard labor in the Onondaga county penitentiary. Spencer was taken to the penitentiary immediately after receiving his sentence, by Deputy Ryan. He took the matter very cooly and said little in regard to the trial or sentence. Miss Barnes was not present in court Monday.

The Sentences Passed.

At the court of Sessions in Syracuse, Saturday, Albert Vanderhayden, of this village, who was found guilty of robbery in the second degree in stealing a gold watch and chain from George Barber, was sentenced to fourteen years and eight years imprisonment at hard labor in Auburn prison.

Thomas O'Brien, the assailant of Owen Rafferty, who was found guilty of assault in the second degree, was brought up for sentence. Attorney Gardner asked for the mercy of the court in behalf of his client, saying that a family was dependent upon him for support, and if he was sent for a long term the city would be at the expense of providing for them. He asked that he be sent to the Onondaga county penitentiary, where his labors would benefit the county and where his family could see him. Judge Northrop said that the jury was as lenient as they could be. The assault was not entirely unprovoked, but it was not justified. "The sentence is that you be imprisoned at hard labor in the Onondaga penitentiary for the term of three years."

A Fanatical Salvationist.

Ansell Morrell is a young man about 25 years of age who lives with his mother about two miles south of Minetto. Some months since he joined the Salvation army in this village and since that time has been a fanatic on religion. Last Thursday he went to his mother's home and began to pray in a wild and excited manner. He requested his mother to join him and upon her refusing he threw her to the floor, beating and kicking her until she was insensible. He then became frightened and rushed out of the house announcing to the neighbors that he had killed his mother. He then went into the woods and discharged the contents of a revolver into his breast, and also made two other attempts to take his life before he could be seized and the weapon taken from him. Morell's mother, who was so terribly beaten by him, is 50 years old and nearly blind. Although both have been in a precarious condition, the latest reports announce that they are recovering.

Two Ribs Broken.

About three o'clock yesterday afternoon, C. R. Nichols left his store to go to the First National bank. As he was crossing Oneida street, and just before reaching the steps near Goman's barber shop, he slipped and fell heavily on the the icy walk, breaking two of his ribs. He was assisted to the store and Dr. Pardee was called. Mr. Nichols was afterward taken home where he was made as comfortable as possible.

James Phillips Arrested.

Officer Kane of Geneva arrived in town last Thursday and with the assistance of Officer Roderick arrested James Phillips, of this village, on a bench warrant. Phillips was indicted nearly six years ago by the Seneca county grand jury on three separate charges, arson, burglary, and robbery. He is charged with having set fire to Maxwell Brothers' nursery barn and tree packing house near Geneva. The officer left for home with his prisoner Friday morning.

T. D. Fowler, president of the New York, Ontario & Western railroad company accompanied by General Manager Childs, Superintendents Canfield and Lanphers and a number of English capitalists, among them Thomas Swingard, came over the road on Saturday morning by special car. It was a farewell trip of the English capitalists before leaving for home. They expressed themselves well pleased with the road and its arrangement. The ground for the new depot at Fulton was thoroughly examined and the structure will be begun as soon as the plans are completed and given to the master mechanic. It will be a handsome two story brick building with ample accommodations.

The following item from the Syracuse Journal of Monday will be of interest to many of our readers, referring as it does to a gentleman who frequently visits here. He is a brother-in-law of Harry Baker:

"Mr. Chas. S. Carver returned Saturday evening from an extended trip of over two weeks in the West, having visited the cities of Minneapolis, St. Paul, Milwaukee and Chicago, also his old home in Hudson, Wis., on the "Upper St. Croix," which he has not visited since his return East over sixteen years ago. He spoke in glowing terms of the prospects of Minneapolis and St. Paul. At St. Paul he witnessed the grand parade on Washington's birthday, and took in the carnival at the "Ice Palace."

In spite of the extreme severity of the weather yesterday, nearly as large a vote was polled as a year ago, when the day was exceptionally fine. It is a common remark that a stormy election day in Volney means "a good day for Democrats." Yesterday's result proved the fallacy of this, as the entire Republican ticket with one exception—a constable—was elected by majorities ranging from 73 to 324. When the votes were first counted and the result announced that the Democrats were 38 ahead on the straight tickets, the faces of the Republicans within hearing visibly lengthened. But later on they recovered their calm serenity with commendable magnanimity. The whole number of votes cast was about 1,350, falling about 50 short of last year. Below we give the number of votes each candidate received and the majorities of the successful ones.

AGRICULTURAL DEPARTMENT.

Worth Knowing.

During this month, cows that receive water which has been warmed to a temperature of 110 degrees will give more milk than those that are compelled to drink the ice-cold liquid. This has been demonstrated by actual experiment, as there is quite a loss of animal heat on the part of the cows when compelled to drink ice-water in cold weather.

When the ground is frozen hard is a good time to break the stalks. Rake up the trash and burn it. Have the fields as clean as possible. You will save time both in preparing the land and in cultivating the crops.

It will not do to run a plow through an orchard, as the roots of the trees may be cut and hacked to pieces so greatly as to do injury. A light cultivator may be of service, however, as by its use weeds and rank grass may be kept down.

If ammonia is allowed to escape and premeate through the stable it will render the animals liable to disease, and also rot the harness. Plenty of dry dirt or muck will absorb it, and the use of these substances will therefore not only assist in avoiding waste of valuable fertilizing material but prevent annoyance to stock from gaseious substances.

Professor Morrow thinks it would be an excellent plan to have classes in the schools of the rural districts in which matters pertaining to agriculture may taught. Lecture at least once a week on dairying, analysis of soils, climatic influences upon plants and the improvement of the stock would impart valuable information, especially to the advanced attendants of the schools.

Frozen or chilled eggs will not hatch. In cold weather eggs should be taken from the nest before they get cold and kept in a warm place. If an egg is frozen and cracked it is put in cold water to take the frost out. When this is done it is good cooking if not kept too long.

Prof. Stewart recommends salting butter with one-fourth white sugar and three-fourths fine salt, (by weight) using one ounce of the mixture for every pound of butter. He says it improves the flavor and keeping quality.

A farmer who has tried steamed rye says that is the best of all grains for fattening hogs. In forty days he says he can make a hog as fat as may be desired on such food, while one that is thrifty can be finished on about five or six bushels of food.

Care of Breeding Sows.

F. D. CURTIS.

The winter care of a breeding sow has a great deal to do with her health when the young are born. The time to prevent trouble is before-hand, and it cannot be done by any sudden action, for that will not reach the case. If a sow is constipated, it is very apt to cause her to be vicious, and sometimes to destroy her pigs. A dose of medicine will not be likely to correct the evil, as her blood is full of fever and more time is required to change the tendency. The feverish state of the blood affects the brain, and the excitement attending parturition turns her head completely, and when her pigs come near her in her frenzy, she snaps at them and kills them. No sow ever does any such thing because it is natural. This I have proved to my own satisfaction, because in every instance when a sow has been perfectly crazy, and perhaps devoured all of her young when farrowing in the spring if allowed to have pigs in the summer, she would make the kindest of mothers. It is a mistake then to blame the poor afflicted brute, as it is the owner's fault, and it is still more unkind to condemn such an animal to slaughter, because her food and care have been such that she has become the victim of disease. The same kind of care and feed will give shoats the "blind staggers" piles, dry, staring coats, or founder them. The remedy is found in more loosening food and food of such a nature that it will not cause fever. The poor hog is generally shut in a small pen and fed whatever is the handiest. And this on the farm is corn—corn on the ear. This kind of food cannot do anything else but create heat in the system and fever in the blood. The evil results are limited by the quantity given, and the time when it is fed. I have seen a whole pen-full of pigs foundered on corn and rendered almost worthless, when only a few days before they were the pride of the owner. There is no positive exception on account of breed, but a strong breed will always withstand disease better than a weaker one, and better endure the effects of bad management. A pen should be large enough to tempt the occupant to move about. A plank floor is not good for hogs, they are liable to slip on it and injure themselves, so that they have to be killed. Hogs will not move about any more than they are obliged to on a plank floor, on account of slipping, and this want of exercise will help to bring on constipation. Some careful swine breeders drive their hogs out of the pens every day, and shut them out, to compel them to move around and so promote their health. This is dangerous, unless they are used to such exposure, for they may have attacks of inflammation of the bowels and lungs, quinsy or stiffness in the form of rheumatism. Cement floors are cold and slippery and really more objectionable than plank. A floor or pen bottom, made with small stones and covered with gravel, is the best. It should be well underdrained, and it may be littered with chaff or straw, to take up and absorb the droppings. There may be some loss of the liquid manure with such a floor, but the hogs will do enough better to make that up. I have lost a number of hogs by having them [illegible] on a plank floor, and also had them [illegible] and be ruined. Food will not [illegible] the bad effects of hard floors. In [illegible] of roots, wheat bran should [illegible] to sows with pigs.

"[illegible] Doses One Dollar" is true only of [illegible], and it is an unanswerable argument as to strength and economy.

[illegible]

[illegible] than of any [illegible] our southern [illegible] wanted with their potato planting [illegible] even have their spring grain sown, before the month comes in, whether it comes "like a lion" or "like a lamb," we of the frigid North may have still three feet of frost in the ground, and perhaps good sleighing up to the twenty-fifth, north-easters lasting a week, spring floods, and roads which neither horses' feet nor wagon wheels can find bottom in, may be the order of the day. So hints about work must be taken with liberal allowance for the waywardness of this first spring, and last winter month.

New seeds and new tools should not be lost sight of, and it will often pay to test the former in small quantities; then, if they do well, you will have some seed yourself, and may easily get more. We need not remind our readers to be beforehand with their work. Spring grains can hardly be in the ground too soon after the frost is out. Potatoes follow as soon as there is reasonable warmth in the ground. Grass seed and clover may be sown with spring grain, and clover on winter grain is best sown upon one of the last light winter snows. The earlier manure is out upon grass and grain land, the better. Even when the manure is intended for a corn crop, and not to be plowed under until the first part of May, the gain in the growth of grass, will more than compensate the loss by the action of rains and drying winds, except upon hill-sides and spots where the land is especially exposed to the washing by heavy rains. It is rare that the month passes without warm and dry weather sufficient to put the ground in condition for plowing throughout the great middle corn and small grain belt of the country.—[American Agriculturist for March.

Swindling the Farmers.

Assemblyman Budlong, of Herkimer, will introduce a bill providing against deception and fraud in the sale of seeds and cereals. The suggestion for such a law is found in the numerous cases of farmers being swindled by parties pretending to have in their possession a new and superior kind of cereal or vegetable. Last year many western farmers were taken in by men who claimed to have a superior variety of oats, which they sold at $10 per bushel, taking the farmer's note and agreeing to buy the product of the seed at the same figure that they received for the original lot. The farmer, of course, has the note to pay, and also had the total product of his new variety of oats, or whatever else it might be, on his hands to dispose of without looking further. Mr. Budlong has drawn his bill to cover transactions of this kind by making it a misdemeanor to sell any grain at more than double its retail price, or to take in payment therefor any note, check, draft or other negotiable paper. A fine of from one to five hundred dollars, or imprisonment from one to three years, is the penalty imposed for a violation of the provisions of the bill.

Grain Reports.

The export of grain from New York city for the year 1885 comprised 16,286,800 bushels of wheat, valued at $15,891,088; 26,259,228 bushels of corn, valued at $14,388,292; 493,319 bushels of rye, valued, $33,887; and 6,198,302 bushels of oats, valued at $2,222,203. In wheat and rye there was a heavy falling off, as compared with the previous year; and in corn and oats a large increase, but not sufficient to bring the total value up to the figures of 1884, the net decline in the aggregate being about $6,000,000. Of flour and meal the total export for 1885 was about $18,000,000 against $20,000,000 for 1884, and nearly $25,000,000 for 1883. Of sugar and cotton the export from New York for 1885 was much larger than for the preceding year, the increase on sugar being 7,700,000, and on cotten $2,600,000.

Gems of Thought.

They also serve who only stand and wait.—[Milton.

It should not seem to be a very wonderful a thing that men should attain to the ability to say, "I am willing to die." It seems to me a much better, grander and nobler thing to say, "I am willing and ready to live, right here, to day, in my circumstances; ready to take up my burden, to carry my load, to do my work, to wait God's time."—[M. J. Savage.

Doing nothing for others is the undoing of one's self. We must be purposely kind and generous or we miss the best part of our existence. The heart that goes out of itself gets large and full of joy. This is the great secret of the inner life. We do ourselves the most good doing something for others. —[Horace Mann.

Every man must patiently bide his time. He must wait—not in listless idleness—but in constant, steady, cheerful endeavors, always willing and fulfilling and accomplishing his task, that when the occasion comes he may be equal to the occasion.—[Longfellow.

We rise by the things that are under our feet;
By what we have mastered of good or gain;
By the pride deposed and the passions slain,
And the vanquished ills that we hourly meet.
—[J. G. Holland.

It makes the mind very free when we give up wishing, and only think of bearing what is laid upon us and doing what is given us to do.—[George Eliot.

True glory consists in so living as to make the world happier and better for our living.—[Pliny.

Life is a quarry, out of which we are to mold and chisel and complete a character.—[Goethe.

To one clear harp in divers tones,
That men may rise on stepping-stones
Of their dead selves to higher things.

He Wanted to Know.

A member from the rural districts, clad in a faded ulster that reached his heels, and with a scotch cap pulled down to his collar behind, entered a Main street jewelry store yesterday and asked to look at some clocks. He was shown a number and finally asked the price of a beautiful time-piece in the case that had not been shown him.

In quite a confidential way,
"It seems to me
That Mrs. B.
Takes too much—something in her tea."
And Mrs. J.

She grieved to touch
Upon it much,

Went straight way,
And told a friend the self-same day,
"Twas sad to think"—

"That Mrs. B. was fond of drink."
The friend's disgust
Was such she must Inform a lady which she nussed
"That Mrs. B.

The scandal back
To those who made her look so black.
Through Mrs. K.
And Mrs. J.
She got at last to Mrs. A.,
And asked her why,
With cruel lie,
She painted her so deep a dye?

In some dismay,
"I no such thing could say;
I said that you
Much stouter grew
On too much sugar which you do."

Population.

Every minute of the day seventy human beings are brought into existence and sixty-seven are removed, says a writer. The population of the world is steadily increasing at the rate of three per minute, or 4,320 per day, more than 1,500,000 per year. Just think of the yearly increase of man being equal to the entire population of the State of Iowa. Where do they all go? The home of the human race, so far as we are able to learn, was in Asia, and from there all the nations have come. The rapid increase of population in the United States shows the tendency of the race to scatter and seek new fields.

VERY REMARKABLE DISCOVERY.

Mr. Geo. Willing of Manchester, Mich. writes: "My wife has been almost helpless for five years, so helpless that she could not turn over in bed alone. She used two bottles of Electric Bitters, and is so much improved, that she is now able to do her own work."

Electric Bitters will do all that is claimed for them. Hundreds of testimonials attest their great curative powers. Only 50 cents a bottle at R. E. [illegible]

MORTGAGE SALE.—Whereas default has been made in the payment of the moneys secured to be paid by a mortgage executed by Joel Chubb and Jane Chubb delivered to Eunice A. Pardee, dated the first day of Jan'y., 1877, recorded with the power of sale therein contained in the clerks office of Oswego county, on the seventh day of February, 1877, in Liber 111, of mortgages, at page 260, given to secure the payment of the sum of $1200. And whereas the sum of $121.67 is claimed to be due on said mortgage at the time of the first publication of this notice and to become due the further sum of $960, and an action has not been brought to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof and said power of sale has become operative. Therefore notice is hereby given that by reason of the facts aforesaid and in pursuance of the Statute in such case made and provided the mortgaged premises discribed in said mortgage as follows, to wit.: All that tract or parcel of land situate in the Town of Granby (formerly Lysander) and known and distinguished as the south half of survey fifty acres of Lot No. nine (9) in the town aforesaid. Also all that other tract or parcel of land situate in said Town of Granby, and being a lot of one and one half acres of land on Great Lot No. nine (9) of the original township of Lysander, now Granby, and being on the east side of the river road leading from the south line of said town to the city of Oswego. The said lot hereby intended to be conveyed being bounded on the north by lands owned by Smith Southard, on the east by the survey fifty acres of said lot No. nine (9), on the south by lands formerly owned by Nahum Chubb, and west by the centre of said river road and being the same premises conveyed by Nahum Chubb to Jane Chubb by deed dated Jan'y. 17, 1876. Also all that other tract or parcel of land situate in the Town of Granby aforesaid known as subdivision No. four (4) of Lot No. sixty-two (62) in the original township of Hannibal, now Granby, as subdivided by Barnet Mooney, Samuel Farnham and Asa Dudley commissioners in partition appointed by the Court of Common Pleas in and for the county of Oswego—will be sold at public auction at the law office of Giles S. Piper in the village of Fulton, county of Oswego, New York, on the 24th day of April, 1886, at 10 a. m. of that day and said mortgage thereby foreclosed.

Dated Jan'y 26, 1886.

The First Settler's Story.

It ain't the funniest thing a man can do—
Existing in a country when it's new;
Nature, who moved in first—a good long while—
Has things already somewhat her own style,
And she don't want her woodland splendors battered,
Her rustic furniture broke up and scattered,
Her paintings, which long years ago were done
By that old splendid artist-king, the Sun,
Torn down and dragged in Civilization's gutter,
Or sold to purchase settlers' bread and butter.
She don't want things exposed from porch to closet
And so she kind o' nags the man who does it.
She carries in her pockets bags of seeds,
As general agents of the thriftiest weeds;
She sends her blackbirds, in the early morn,
To superintend his fields of planted corn;
Then maybe several weeks of quiet fire;
She sails mosquitoes—leeches perched on wings—
To poison him with blood-devouring stings;
She loves her ague-muscle to display,
And shake him up—say every other day;
With thoughtful, conscientious care she makes
Those travellin' poison-bottles, rattlesnakes;
She finds time, 'mongst her other [illegible] cares,
To keep in stock good wild-cats, [illegible] and bears;
She spurns his offered hand with [illegible] gibes,
And compromises with the Indian tribes
(For they who've wrestled with [illegible] bloody art Say Nature always takes an Indian's part).
In short, her toil is every day increased
To scare him out, and hustle him back East;
Till fin'lly it appears to her some day
That he has made arrangements for to stay;
Then she turns round, as sweet as anything,
And takes her new made friend into the ring,
And changes from a snarl into a purr—
From mother-in-law to mother, as it were.

Well, when I first infested this retreat,
Things to my view looked frightful incomplete;
But nature seemed quite cheerful all about me,
A-carrying on her different trades without me.
These words the forest seemed at me to throw:
"Sit down and rest awhile before you go;"
From bees to trees the whole woods seemed to say,
"You're welcome here till you can get away,
But not for time of any large amount;
So don't be hanging round on our account."
But I had come with heart-thrift in my song,
I hadn't a round trip ticket to go back,
And if I had, there wasn't no railroad track;
And driven East was what I couldn't endure;
I hadn't started on a circular tour.

My girl-wife was as brave as she was good
And helped me every blessed way she could;
She seemed to take to every rough old tree,
As sing'lar as when first she took to me.
She kep' our little log-house neat as wax,
And once I caught her fooling with my axe.
She learned a hundred masculine things to do;
She aimed a shot-gun pretty middlin' true,
Although, in spite of my express desire,
She always shut her eyes before she'd fire,
She hadn't the muscle (though she had the heart)
In out-door work to take an active part;
Though in our firm of Duty and Endeavor
She wasn't no silent partner whatsoever.
When I was logging, burning, choppin' wood,
She'd linger round and help me all she could
And kept me fresh-ambitious all the while
And lifted tons just with her voice and smile.
With no desire my glory for to rob,
She used to stan' around and boss the job,
And when first-class success my hands befell,
Would proudly say, "We did that pretty well!"
She was delicious, both to hear and see—
That pretty wife-girl that kep' house for me.

Sundays, we didn't propose, for lack o' church,
To have our souls left wholly in the lurch;
And so I shaved and dressed up, well's I could,
And did a day's work trying to be good.
My wife was always bandbox sleek; and when
Our fat old bull's eyes watch said half past ten ('Twas always varying from the narrow way,
And lied on Sundays same as any day),
The family Bible from its high perch started
(The one her mother gave her when they parted),
The hymn-book, full of music-balm and fire
(The one she used to sing in in the choir)—
One I sang with her from (I've got it yet)
The very first time that we really met—
I recollect, when first our voices jibed,
A feeling that declines to be described;
And when our eyes met—near the second verse—
A kind of old-acquaintance look in hers,
And something went from mine, which I declare,
I never even knew before was there;
And when our hands touched—slight as slight could be—
A streak o'sweetened lightnin' thrilled through me!
But that's enough of that; perhaps even now,
You'll think I'm softer than the law'll allow,
But you'll protect an old man with his age,
For yesterday I turned my eightieth page;
Besides, there'd be less couples falling out
If such things were more freely talked about.)

Well, we would take these books, sit down alone,
And have a two-horse meeting all our own,
And read our verses, sing our sacred rhymes,
And makes it seem a good deal like old times
But finally across her face there'd glide
A sort of sorry shadow from inside;
And once she dropped her head, like a tired flower,
Upon my arm, and cried half an hour.
I humored her until she had it out,
And didn't ask her what it was about.
I knew right well; our reading, song, and prayer,
The large-attended meetings morn and night;
The spiritual and mental warmth and light;
Her father in his pew, next to the aisle;
Her mother, with the mother of her smile;
Her brother's sly forbidden Sunday glee;
Her sister's e'en u'most as sweet as she;
Her girl and boy friends, not too warm or cool;
Her little scrub class in the Sunday-school;
The social, and the singings, and the ball;
And happy home-cheer waiting for them all—
These marched in close procession through her mind,
And didn't forget to leave their tracks behind.
You married men—there's many in my view—
Don't think your wife can all wrap up in you;
Don't deem, though close her life to yours may grow,
That you are all the folks she wants to know;
Or think your stitches form the only part
Of the crochet-work of a woman's heart.
Though married souls each other's lives may burnish [illegible] needs some help the other cannot furnish.

Well, neighborhoods meant counties in those days;
The roads didn't have accommodating ways;
And maybe weeks would pass before she'd see—
And much less talk with—any one but me.
The Indians sometimes showed their sun-baked faces,
But they didn't teem with conversational graces;
Some ideas from the birds and trees she stole,
But 'twasn't like talking with a human soul;
And finally I thought that I could trace
A half heart-hunger peering from her face.
Then she would drive it back and shut the door;
Of course they only made me see it more.
'Twas hard to see her give her life to mine,
Making a steady effort not to pine;
'Twas hard to hear that laugh bloom out each minute,
And recognize the seeds of sorrow in it.
No misery makes a close observer mourn
Like hopeless grief with hopeful courage borne;
There's nothing sets the sympathies to paining
Like a complaining woman uncomplaining.
It always draws my breath out into sighs
To see a brave look in a woman's eyes.

Well, she went on, as plucky as could be,
Fighting the foe she thought I did not see,
And using her heart-horticultural powers
To turn that forrest to a bed of flowers
You cannot check an unadmitted sigh,
And so I had to soothe her on the sly,
And secretly to help her draw her load;
Hard work bears hard upon the average pulse,
Even with satisfactory results;
[illegible] effects are scarce, the heavy strain
[illegible] and soul on the heart and brain.
[illegible] we're bothered, it will oft occur
[illegible] and I sit on her
[illegible] with daily lessening favor,
[illegible] couldn't help, to save her,
[illegible] should blush with
[illegible]

And all the planets that about us hovered,
And several more that hadn't been discovered;
And my hard muscle-labor, day by day,
Deprived good-nature of its right of way;
And 'tain't no use, this trying to conceal
From hearts that love us what our own hearts feel;
They can't escape close observation's mesh,
And thoughts have tongues that are not made of flesh.
And so ere long she caught the half-grown fact;
Commenced observing how I didn't act,
And silently began to grieve and doubt
O'er old attentions now sometimes left out—
Some kind caress, some little petting ways;
Commenced a-staying in on rainy days
(I did not see't so clear then, I'll allow,
But I can trace it rather acc'rate now);
And Discord, when he once had called and seen us,
Came round quite often, and edged in between us.

One night, when I came home unusual late,
Too hungry and too tired to feel first rate,
Her supper struck me wrong (though I'll allow
She hadn't much to strike with anyhow);
And when I went to milk the cows, and found
They'd wandered from their usual feeding ground,
And maybe'd left a few long miles behind 'em,
Which I must copy, if I meant to find 'em,
Flash-quick the stay-chains of my temper broke,
And in a trice these hot words I had spoke:
"You ought to've kept the animals in view
And drove 'em in; you'd nothing else to do,
The heft of all our life on one must fall;
You just lie round, and let me do it all."

That speech—it hadn't been gone a half a minute
Before I saw the cold black poison in it;
And I'd have given all I had, and more,
To've only safely got it back in-door.
I'm now what most folks "well to do" would call;
I feel to-day as if I'd give it all,
Provided I through fifty years might reach
And kill and bury that half minute speech.
Boys flying kites haul in their white-winged birds,
You can't do that way when you're flying words.
Things that we think, may sometimes fall back dead,
But God himself can't kill them when they're said.

She handed back no words, as I could hear,
She didn't frown; she didn't shed a tear;
Half proud, half crushed, she stood and looked me o'er,
Like some one she had never seen before!
But such a sudden anguish-lit surprise
I never viewed before in human eyes.
(I've seen it oft enough since in a dream;
It sometimes wakes me like a midnight scream.)

That night, while theoretically sleeping,
I half heard and half felt that she was weeping,
And my heart then projected a design
To softly draw her face up close to mine,
And beg of her forgiveness to bestow
For saying what we both knew wasn't so.
I've got enough of this world's goods to do me,
And make my nephews painfully civil to me,
I'd give it all to know she only knew
How near I came to what was square and true.
But, somehow, every single time I'd try,
Pride would appear, and kind o' catch my eye,
And hold me on the edge of my advance,
With the cold steel of one sly scornful glance.

Next morning, when, stone-faced, but heavy-hearted,
With dinner pail and sharpened axe I started
Away for my day's work she watched the door,
And followed me half way to it or more;
And I was just a turning round at this,
And asking for my usual good-by kiss;
But on her lip I saw a proudish curve,
And in her eye a shadow of reserve;
And she had shown—perhaps half unawares—
Some little independent breakfast airs—
And so the usual parting didn't occur,
Although her eyes invited me to her;
Or rather half invited me, for she Didn't advertise to furnish kisses free;
You always had—that is I had—to pay
Full market price, and go mor'n half the way.
So, with a short "Good-by," I shut the door
And left her as I never had done before.

Now when a man works with his muscle smartly,
It makes him up into machinery, partly;
And any trouble he may have on hand
Gets deadened like, and easier to stand,
And though the memory of last night's mistake
Bothered me with a dull and heavy ache,
I all the forenoon gave my strength full rein,
And made the wounded trees bear half the pain
But when at noon my lunch I came to eat,
Put up by her so delicately neat—
Choicer, somewhat, than yesterday's had been,
And some fresh, sweet-eyed pansies she'd put in—
"Tender and pleasant thoughts," I knew they meant—
It seemed as if her kiss with me she'd sent;
Then I became once more her humble lover,
And said, "To-night I'll ask forgiveness of her."

I went home over early on that eve,
Having contrived to make myself believe,
By various signs I kind o' knew and guessed,
A thunder storm was coming from the west.
('Tis strange, when one sly reason fills the heart,
How many honest ones will take its part:
A dozen first-class reasons said 'twas right
That I should strike home early on that night.)

Half out of breath, the cabin door I swung,
With tender heart words trembling on my tongue;
But all within looked desolate and bare;
My house had lost its soul—she was not there!
A penciled note was on the table spread,
And these are something like the words it said:
"The cows have strayed away again I fear;
I watched them pretty close; don't scold me, dear,
And where they are, I think I nearly know:
I heard the bell not very long ago—
I've hunted for them all the afternoon;
I'll try once more—I think I'll find them soon.
Dear, if a burden I have been to you,
And haven't helped you as I ought to do,
Let old-time memories my forgiveness plead;
I've tried to do my best—I have indeed.
Darling, piece out with love the strength I lack,
And have kind words for me when I get back.

Scarce did I give this letter sight and tongue—
Some swift-blown rain-drops to the window clung,
And from the clouds a rough, deep growl proceeded:
My thunder storm had come, now 'twasn't needed.
I rushed out-door. The air was stained with black:
Night had come early, on the storm-cloud's back:
And everything kept dimming to the sight,
Save when the clouds threw their electric light;
When, for a flash, so clean cut was the view,
I'd think I saw her—knowing 'twas not true.
Through my small clearing dashed wide sheets of spray,
As if the ocean waves had lost their way;
Scarcely a pause the thunder-battle made,
In the bold clamor of its cannonade.
And she, while I was sheltered, dry and warm,
Was somewhere in the clutches of the storm!
She who, when storm-frights found her at her best,
Had always had her white face on my breast!

My dog, who'd skirmished round me all the day,
Now crouched and whimpering, in a corner lay;
I dragged him by the collar to the wall,
I pressed his quivering muzzle to a shawl—
"Track her, old boy!" I shouted; and he whined,
Matched eyes with me, as if to read my mind,
Then with a yell went tearing through the wood;
I followed him, as faithful as I could;
No pleasure trip was that, through flood and flame;
We raced with death; we hunted noble game
All night we dragged the wood without avail;
The ground got drenched—we could not keep the trail.
Three times again my cabin home I found,
Half hoping she might be there, safe and sound;
But each time it was an unavailing care:
My house had lost its soul; she was not there!

When, climbing the wet trees, next morning sun
Laughed at the ruin that the night had done,
Bleeding and drenched, by toil and sorrow bent,
Back to what used to be my home I went;
But as I neared our little clearing-ground—
Listen!—I heard the cow-bell's [illegible] sound.
The cabin door [illegible]
It gleamed [illegible]
"Brave heart," I said, "for such a fragile form!
She made them guide her homeward through the storm!"
[illegible]

With all her young life crushed and wrenched away—
Lay, the heart-ruins of our home among,
Not far from where I killed her with my tongue.
The rain drops glittered 'mid her hair's long strands,
The forest thorns had torn her feet and hands,
And 'midst the tears—brave tears—that one could trace
Upon the pale but sweetly resolute face,
I once again the mournful words could read.
"I've tried to do my best—I have, indeed."

And now I'm mostly done; my story's o'er;
Part of it never breathed the air before.
'Tisn't over-usual, it must be allowed,
To volunteer heart-history to a crowd,
And scatter 'mongst them confidential tears.
But you'll protect an old man with his years;
And wheresoe'er this story's voice can reach,
This is the sermon I would have it preach.

Boys flying kites haul in their white-winged birds;
You can't do that when you're flying words
"Careful with fire," is good advice, we know:
"Careful with words," is ten times doubly so.
Thoughts unexpressed may sometimes fall back dead,
But God himself can't kill them when they're said!
You have my life-grief; do you think a minute
'Twas told to take up time. There's business in it.
It sheds advice: whoe'er will take and live it,
Is welcome to the pain it cost to give it.

HOW SHE PUNISHED HIM.

MADGE Heathcote was the only daughter of a widow, whose income was so slender that she was glad to find accomodations during the warm months for one or two city boarders. The summer in which our story opens their only boarder was Guy Travers, a wealthy young man, who had taken board with Mrs. Heathcote in the quiet little village of Glenmore for three months, which time he had spent in teaching Madge Heathcote to love him. Had any one asked him, he could not have told why he had done so, unless it was for amusement; her heartless innocence was so refreshing—and—and—well, Madge Heathcote, "that tall, awkward girl," who would have been positively ugly but for her magnificent black eyes and luxuriant, dark wavy hair, possessed a greater charm for Guy Travers than older, fairer women had ever done.

Then after three months of perfect happiness to poor Madge, he told her he was going, perhaps never to return; he said she had made the time pass very pleasantly during his stop in the village and when he returned to his city home, he should often recall "the pleasant days and the nice little girl at Glenmore."

That was all; he had held her in his arms and kissed her sweet red lips a hundred times; he had told her over and over again that she was the only woman he had ever loved; and now he was going back to his city home, where he would condescend "to think sometimes of the nice little girl he had left behind him at Glenmore."

Guy Travers, with his handsome looks and soft, honeyed words, had broken the heart of many a sweet girl before he had met Madge Heathcote, but none of them had ever repelled him with the scorn and contempt that blazed from her eyes as she said:

"So this is the end! I was foolish to have expected anything better from you I suppose."

"What did you expect of me, Madge?" he questioned. "You surely did not think I was going to marry you; if you did, I must say I am surprised at your lack of judgment."

"Guy Travers, I expected you to act as an honorable man; that was all. What right had you to win my love if you did not intend to marry me?"

"Madge!" He went over to where she was standing and attempted to put his arm around her in the old fond way, but she repulsed him angrily. "Madge," he repeated, "if you love me, darling, why do you speak in this cruel way? I'm very fond of you, little one—indeed I am—and would not hurt you by word or deed for anything in the world; you know that. But, my little darling, you forget how different are our stations in life."

"Leave me!" she exclaimed. "Never let me see your cowardly face again!"

He laughed lightly but uneasily.

"Madge, be reasonable; you do not know what you are saying, my child: I have done you no harm."

"No," she answered, passionately, "you have done me no harm; you have only broken my heart; but that is nothing. What difference can the breaking of one heart, more or less, make to handsome Guy Travers? Guy Travers!" she continued, "you came here this summer for your pleasure; and for your amusement you have wantonly broken my heart and spoiled my whole life. But I declare to you this day that as you have made me suffer, so you shall suffer. The God of the widow and orphan will never let you go unpunished."

She turned quickly from him with the words.

"Madge! Madge!" he called. "You will not go without saying goodbye? Let us at least part as friends."

She turned her pale face toward him for a moment as she scornfully echoed:

"Friends! Friends! Guy Travers, I am your bitterest enemy, henceforth and forever!"

Guy Travers pulled his dark moustache fiercely, for in his way he loved this proud girl who now cast his friendship aside with such contempt.

"Well," he said slowly "suppose this is the end. Am I sorry or the reverse?"

Ah! could he have penetrated the future, he would have had little doubt on that subject.

The next day Guy Travers left Glenmore for his city home. He endeavored to see Madge, but she always succeeded in avoiding him; he was piqued and angry, and mentally he called her "a little fool" more than once.

After he had departed, Rhoda, the little waiting maid, gave Madge a letter, "what Marse Guy dun lef' for her," and [illegible] still angry with me? Silly child, you must forget that little scene of yesterday—forget that you ever loved me other than a friend—your mother's boarder—and be again your own dear little self. Some day you will thank me for what you now view in the light of a grievous wrong. Meantime, should you ever need a sincere friend—faithful and affectionate—you will find one in your's devotedly,

GUY TRAVERS."

An hour later Mrs. Heathcote found her daughter, white and senseless, prostrate on the floor, with this cruel missive at her feet.

That night and for many others Madge Heathcote tossed in a raging fever—brain fever, the doctors pronounced it, and gave small hopes of her recovery. Mrs. Heathcote, sitting by her daughter's bedside, learned from her delirious ravings all that her child had suffered in silence.

Six weeks did Madge Heathcote struggle against death, and finally came out victorious. But as she began the slow approach to health, her mother, worn out with constant watching and anxiety, gradually weakened, and in three months from the day Guy Travers had left them, Madge was an orphan alone in the world.

"And for all this," she said bitterly, "I have to thank Guy Travers."

Then, with the few dollars remaining after all debts were settled, and her first love letter in her purse, she left her native village forever. The villagers shook heads and looked grave whenever Madge Heathcote was mentioned.

* * * * * *

Weak and weary Madge Heathcote arrived in New York, after a journey of sixteen hours. The next morning, after a scanty breakfast, she started to find her old music teacher, in the hope that he would be able to aid her in obtaining pupils; but her heart sank when, arriving at her destination, she was told that Professor Schwartz had been dead more than a year.

What was she to do now? She went from place to place, but with no success whatever. She was a stranger, alone and friendless, and in all that great, grand city there was no place for her.

"I will make one more effort," she said. "I will go to the great Signor de Lanza and ask him to aid me, and if I fail, I can but return to my poor lodging and make a fresh start to-morrow."

Asking the first policeman to direct her to the residence of the professor, she started thither. Signor de Lanza listened attentively while she told him the sad story of her poverty and utter friendlessness and her anxiety to earn an honest living.

When she had finished he requested her to let him hear her play, and seating herself at the piano she played a brilliant fantasia, which he pronounced "well done."

"Well," she said. "Let me sing something for you; I want to know if you think I could earn my living with my voice."

Then, after a few preliminary chords, she sang, with great expression, "Home Sweet Home." The professor listened breathlessly. She began the second verse—and as the recollection of her dear old home, and the mother she had lost, came back to her, she burst into tears, and her head sank upon the key board. De Lanza was deeply moved. He went over to her, and placing his hand kindly on the bowed head, said earnestly:

"Signorina, you are friendless; let me be your friend; come and make your home with us. I have a young daughter who will be delighted to have a companion about her own age, and—signorina, listen—in five years you can make your fortune with that magnificent voice. You have one of the finest voices I have ever heard in America."

"You can make my fortune in five years?" she repeated. Are you sure?"

As sure as that you and I are in this room; that is, of course if you will put yourself entirely under my management," he answered.

A glad look crept into the weary black eyes, slight color into the pale cheeks, as she repeated over and over again to herself:

"A fortune in five years! It is a long time, but I can afford to wait."

* * * * * * *

"You really must go to the opera to-night, Guy; I don't believe you have heard Viola de Lanza yet; all New York is raving over her. She is quite the fashion."

Guy Travers had just returned from a three years' tour on the continent. He had forgotten all about that little episode in Virginia five years ago. In looks he had not altered one iota, but was the same handsome, careless fellow, and all his dear five hundred friends were glad to welcome him home again.

"Who is she—this Viola de Lanza?" he asked in a careless tone. "I do not remember of hearing of her abroad."

"No, she is a new star from Italy, I believe. Her father or uncle, I forget which, is her manager; and a deuced old bore he is too, I can tell you; won't let a fellow look at her off the stage, much less speak to her."

"All right, I'll go with you and see your divinity," said Guy.

That night the opera house was crowded to excess. When the singer appeared in all her regal beauty she was wildly applauded, and Guy Travers, as he looked at the graceful rounded figure, the dimpled white arms, the shapely hands and the glorious black hair piled high on the proud head, little thought that this queenly woman was the girl with whom he had trifled so heartlessly five years before.

The opera over, Jack Mordaunt presented himself at the stage door and sent in his card, asking permission to introduce to the signorina his friend, Guy [illegible]

For three weeks Guy Travers was the first to enter the opera house and the last to leave it each night, and although his friends often chaffed him about being hard hit, and remarked his worn and haggard face, he was not the man to give up while there was the faintest shadow of a chance to win. On Viola de Lanza he had staked his all even though it was reported that she was betrothed to Sir Maurice Conway, a wealthy English baronet.

At last fortune favored him. At a grand dinner party he met her, and was supremely happy. She said she was delighted to meet him, as she had seen him so often at the opera house, but, of course, she did not know that he was "the Mr. Travers whom Mr Mordaunt wished to present," and she was so sweet and gracious that he was more infatuated than ever.

The day she had so longed for had come at last. For more than five years she had waited and now she would pay him back in his own coin. She invited him to call on her whenever he had "nothing else to do," and she would always make him welcome.

After this he was always near her; he walked with her, drove with her, and for three months he was her devoted slave. During this time he often saw Sir Maurice, but as Viola did not seem to notice him much, he did not consider him a rival.

One evening he told her how dear she was to him: how he worshiped her, and how, if it would serve her, he would gladly lay down his life for her dear sake."

He took the dimpled hand and smothered it with kisses; then he answered—

"Viola, my darling, until I saw you I never met a woman for whom I cared one iota."

"And when was that?" she questioned. "When did you see me first—remember, now, the very first time?"

"The night you appeared in 'Traviata'" he replied.

"And you never loved any one before that? I can scarcely believe you," she said, laughingly.

"Viola, darling, you have told me nothing of your life, and you know I am so eager to know everything about you, my queen."

"My early life would be scarcely interesting to you, as it is a very sad one, and my career in public ends with this month. And you," she declared, "have told me nothing of your's. Come, Guy, I am your confessor to-night. Is there nothing in the past that you regret?"

"Confession is good for the soul," he qouth, gaily. "No, my dearest, there is nothing I regret or repent of excepting that I did not meet Viola de Lanza years ago."

He had utterly forgotten Glenmore then. If he had only remembered that she might have had some pity, but now——

"Guy, you are sure you love me—no other woman in the world but me?"

"No other, so help me heaven!" he answered, solemnly. "Viola, when will you be my wife?"

"I will give you my answer to-morrow; I will write."

Then, as he could not induce her to say anymore on the subject, he took his departure.

To-morrow! To-morrow! Would it never come? He paced his room all the night through, and counted the hours which must elapse before he could receive the promised letter.

At last it came. He snatched it passionately, kissing the superscription over and over again; then he opened it, and out fell the old letter he had sent to the "nice little girl at Glenmore." It bore across the bottom, in her handwriting, these words:

"I have bided my time. As I suffered then, you must suffer now. This is the end.

MADGE HEATHCOTE,
Otherwise VIOLA DE LANZA.

This was all; no, not all, for at his feet lay two cards—wedding cards—bearing the names of Sir Maurice Conway and Miss Madge Heathcote. This was her revenge.

THE PROPER THING.

Jet is to be used to trim colored dresses.

A good deal of scarlet is used in millinery.

Correct mourning jewelry is of English crape stone.

Clustered stripes are a feature in all new spring goods.

Red satin rain umbrellas are the latest Parisan novelty.

The old fashioned black silk apron is coming in use again.

Fine French cashmeres will be largely used in combination suits.

Velvet and plush will remain in favor as accessories of summer toilets.

Woven wire bustles are worn above the steels set in the foundation of the skirt.

A new caprice is a short wrap of red broadcloth, with trimming of black and red.

All bonnets have high crowns and brims small, but a little larger than those of last year.

Cable cloths are new, with cords of thick wool couched in the cross-threads to form stripes.

One of the special features of the coming season will be the use of deep flouncings of wool lace over skirts of colored silk.

Elbow and three-quarter length sleeves will be almost universally worn by fashionable women this spring, with street as well as home dresses.

Costumes of blue, brown, garnet and black plain velvet, trimmed profusely with jet, are the first choice for this month for the dressy outdoor wear.

Fine corduroy is among the desirable materials for walking suits. It is made up by itself, or in combination with cashmere, camels' hair serge or frieze.

Senators Riddleberger and Mahone

Mr. Riddleberger, of Virginia, is the "lone fisherman" of the Senate. He is in the midst of equals, but utterly without companionship. Mr. Riddleberger is a typical Southerner. He sits in the back row on the Republican side, with millionaire Sawyer, of Wisconsin, on one hand and millionaire Sewell, of New Jersey, on the other and still he is not happy. Mr. Riddleberger is a tall man, with a jet black mustache, chin whiskers and hair. The sides of his face follow the true Southern fashion and are kept smoothly shaven. Upon the apex of his head there is a bald spot about the size of a silver dollar, which all the arts of the tonsorial artist have been unable to cover from the gaze of the irreverent crowd from the galleries. Messrs. Riddleberger and Mahone are the two Senators who never go on both sides of the Senate chamber. Both are always to be found on the Republican side, either in their seats or in the cloak rooms. Mr. Riddleberger is a man who evidently does not pay the slightest attention to his personal appearance. Most of the Senators dress in sombre black. Mr. Riddleberger has driven the chills down the backs of several of his austere associates by appearing in a suit of checkered brown. A short sack coat completed the outrage. Notwithstanding his appearance, Mr. Riddleberger daily comes into the Senate Chamber with his hands dug deeply down into his baggy trousers. He seems to thoroughly enjoy the discomfiture of the Republican side of the Senate. None of them associate with him and the Democrats are even worse; they positively ignore him.

All of the Democratic Senators are on terms of enmity with Mr. Mahone. They will fight him every chance they get, but they take no notice of anything that Mr. Riddleberger says. Now, in some respects, Mr. Riddleberger is Mr. Mahone's superior. He is infinitely a better debater, but in the line of political organization he is no match for the little Virginian. While Mr. Riddleberger is a showy dresser, Mr. Mahone is directly the opposite. Mr. Mahone is one of the most peculiar looking men in public life. He is a little man, weighing less than a hundred pounds. He wears one of the biggest hats in the Senate Chamber and his is the longest beard. Mr. Mahone sits in the front row on the Republican side, with Mr. Edmunds on his left and Mr. Morrill on his right—two of the tallest men of the Senate. Mr. Mahone invariably in black broadcloth. In winter he wears a black slouch hat; in summer a light brown one. Otherwise his appearance is the same. Mr. Mahone invariably has his coat buttoned tightly aroundly around his waist; and as his skirts are unusually large and bulge out from his little chest, the whole effect is as though he had on a pair of corsets two sizes too small for him. And still this little insignificent-appearing Virginian was one of the bravest generals in the Confederacy. It was Mr. Mahone who was selected out of all the commanders by Robert E. Lee to accompany him in the last grand act of the war at Appomattox. The Democratic side of the Senate cordially hate Mr. Mahone, but this feeling is tempered with a certain admiration for his fearlessness and determination. Mr. Riddleberger feels his position very keenly. He has all the power that goes with the casting of a vote. Nominally he is one seventy-six of the Senate of the United States—really, he has no more to do with the framing and fashioning the legislation of the country than the page who waits upon him. Such a state of affairs was never known before in the Senate Chamber. Even Mr. Mahone, who placed Mr. Riddleberger in his seat has nothing to do with him

There have been times when Senators have aroused bitter animosities and estranged an entire side from personal intercourse with them, but the Riddleberger case is believed to be the first where his associates appear to be unanimous in the desire to let him severely alone. Both parties distrust Riddleberger. When the contest between the President and the Senate began, Riddleberger gravely and solemnly announced his conviction that Mr. Cleveland was right, and that his Republican associates were wrong. After he had stated his conclusion the next thing he did was to go into the Republican caucus and support the Edmunds' resolutions. Probably his next step will be to get up in the Senate and oppose them. His term of office expires March 4, 1889, and up to that time he will probably remain about as lonesome as he is to-day.

Hydrophobia.

There were, according to Dr. Dujardin-Beaumetz, 19 deaths from hydrophobia in Paris last year—a number higher than in previous years; and yet the number of stray dogs destroyed was also higher viz.: 5,060. Of these 19 persons, 15 were males and 4 females. The youngest was a little girl of 5½ years; the oldest a man of 63. The time of incubation varied from 19 months (in the case of a young man of 26) to 29 days (a child of 11). In only one case was the time of the bite unknown. Excluding that, and the exceptional case of 19 months, an average of about 2 months is arrived at for the time of incubation. As to duration of the disease, the extreme limits were 1 day to 8 days; average 3½ days. In no case were the lower limbs bitten. In twelve cases out of 18 the upper members were bitten, especially the hand (6 times out of 12), the wrist twice; in 6 other cases it was the face (5 times) and the skull (once) that were attacked. Lastly, in 17 cases of the 18 the bite was that of of a dog; in the remaining case it was that of a cat. It will be noted that these statistics relate only to deaths from hydrophobia.

Three Peculiarities

Hood's Sarsaparilla, the great blood purifier and regulating medicine, is characterized by three peculiarities, namely:

1st: The combination of the various remedial agents used.

2d: The proportion in which the roots, herbs, barks, etc., are mixed.

3d: The process by which the active medicinal properties are secured.

The result is a medicine of unusual strength and curative power, which effects cures heretofore unequalled. These peculiarities belong exclusively to Hood's Sarsaparilla, and are

Unknown to Others

Hood's Sarsaparilla is prepared with the greatest skill and care, by pharmacists of education and long experience. Hence it is a medicine worthy of entire confidence. SYRACUSE had a $50,000 fire on South Clinton street last Monday night.

WE are indebted to Hon. Henry C. Howe for a copy of the Albany Evening Journal's almanac for 1886.

THE widow of the late Ex-Governor Seymour died at the home of Mrs. Roscoe Conkling in Utica, last Monday.

IN the Republican caucus at Albany last evening Mr. Draper was nominated for Superintendent of Public Instruction on the fourth ballot.

THE board of Supervisors in this county this year stands 11 democrats and 18 republicans. Last year it was 11 democrats, 17 republicans and 1 greenback.

DURING the progress of the fire in Pulaski last Monday morning a disgraceful hotel row occurred in which Emory Dawley, a tough, bit off the ear of Frank Harmon with whom he quarrelled. Harmon insists that Dawley swallowed the ear.

SENATOR JOHN F. MILLER of California died in Washington last Monday afternoon. His death was sudden and unexpected although his condition has has been regarded as precarious for many weeks past. Governor Honeman, who has the appointment of Senator Miller's successor is a Democrat.

IN the assembly last Friday, Mr. Howe offered a resolution, which was adopted, requesting the superintendent of public works to inform the assembly whether some method cannot be devised to prevent ice gorges, and the setting back of water in Oswego river below the village of Fulton, caused by the state dam at Battle Island, and to report the probable cost and effect it would have on the Oswego canal.

MESSRS. JACOBS & PROCTOR of Albany are the new managers of the Grand Opera House, and Syracuse will now be in the circuit controlled by this popular firm. This comprises Griswold Opera House at Troy, Music Hall at Albany, Corinthian Academy at Rochester the Court Street Theatre at Buffalo and the Thatre Royal at Montreal. First-class attractions will be given and at the present popular prices. The able management are enabled to make advantageous terms with all combinations, and they propose to give the public the benefit of them.

Phillip H. Lehnen late manager will continue at the head of Welting Opera House management, where will be seen such actors as Lawrence Barrett, Henry Irvin, and Mary Anderson.

IN speaking of the recent defeat of Thomas G. Poole, among other things the Fulton Patriot says:

"Justice demands that it be said that the defeat of Thomas G. Poole was owing to the worst elements in both parties. Poole has made a most excellent officer, has accomplished more toward breaking up and bringing to punishment members of gangs of thieves and maintaining good order than any officer the town has ever had. And for this reason he is beaten by a large majority. The motive for beating him and where the vote came from is apparent.

We endorse the above in toto. Mr Poole, in our way of thinking, has shown himself to be a fearless, sagacious and efficient officer and as such he should receive the commendation of all peace-loving and law-abiding citizens regardless of any prejudice or party feeling.

THE following editorial appeared in last Friday's Troy Times in honor of John L. Sullivan and his recent visit to that city. We consider it more than worthy of re-print as it expresses our views exactly not only in regard to John L., but to all other brutes of hi class:

The visit to Troy yesterday of that notorious ruffian, John L. Sullivan, the Boston slugger, led to one of the most sickening exhibitions ever witnessed by decent people. Had Sullivan been President of the United States, he could not have been treated with more distinguished consideration than was shown him by many persons of whom better things were to be expected. What is he, pray? A hulking, cowardly, drunken brute, without one manly instinct in his whole ignoble bosom; a low-lived cur, who vents his beastly rage on his weak and timid wife, on frightened waiter girls, on poor, half-starved newsboys, on men whom he can bully, scare, and cajole, but who never dares confront those who can meet him on something approaching an equality of strength; the friend and companion of thieves, gamblers and the scum and offscourings of humanity generally. This fellow had the assurance to parade himself before the people of Troy as a "gentleman," to set himself up in lordly state and receive callers as though he were among the great ones of the land; to ostentatiously visit the jail and call upon his friend, a notorious criminal; and to behave as though he owned not only the earth and the fullness thereof, but the entire universe. And a fitting finish was given to the disgusting spectacle in the homage paid to the pugilist by the admiring crowd which dogged his footsteps and eagerly sought access to his rooms to [illegible], while an official of [illegible], paid by the people, [illegible]

Baron Adolphe Rothschild of Paris, has a collection of rare postal and other stamps which is valued at $60,000.

Thus far thirteen candidates have been mentioned in connection with the United States Senatorial election in this State next year.

The postmaster-General has appointed Jacob H. Dimmick of Port Jervis, N. Y., as postage stamp agent at New York city at a salary of $2,500 per annum, vice Major J. B. Fassett, resigned.

Dr. Farrand, of Charleston, W. Va., was 100 years old on the first day of March. He is a hale old man, walks about the city alone, and reads without glasses. He was once a very well-known Philadelphia physician.

Mr. Gladstone authorizes a denial of newspaper reports that he has drafted a home-rule scheme and shown it to his friends. Joseph Chamberlain and Mr. Trevelyan deny that they contemplate seceding from Mr. Gladstone's party.

Mr. Gladstone walks about London during heavy winter rains without either overcoat or umbrella. He amazed a crowd the other day by running across the street from his house to Lord Granville's without putting on a hat.

The speaker of the house has announced the following committee to investigate the telephone scandals: Mr. Boyle of Pennsylvania, chairman; Messrs. Oates of Alabama, Eden of Illinois, Hall of Iowa, Hale of Missouri, Ranney of Massachusetts, Millard of New York, Hanback of Kansas and Moffatt of Michigan. The first five are Democrats and the remainder Republicans.

James C. Matthews, who was on Thursday nominated to succeed the Hon. Fred Douglas as recorder of deeds for the district of Columbia, is a colored man forty years of age. He was born in New Haven, Conn., but his parents soon afterward settled in Albany, N. Y., and there he has since resided.

Food Frauds.

THE SHAMEFUL USE OF LIME AND ALUM IN CHEAP BAKING POWDERS.

Many food frauds, such as chicory coffee or watered milk, although they are a swindle in a commercial sense, are often tolerated because they do not particularly effect the health of the consumer; but when an article like baking powder that enters largely into the food of every family, and is relied upon for the healthful preparation of almost every meal, is so made as to carry highly injurious if not rankly poisonous elements into the bread to the eminent danger of the entire community, it is the duty of the press to emphatically denounce the manufacturers whose avarice has prompted them to such diabolical operations.

Among recent important discoveries by the food analysts is that by Prof. Mott, the United States Government Chemist of large amounts of lime in the cheap baking powders. This is, if not the most dangerous, certainly the most useless adulterant yet found in the low grade, inferior baking powders. It is a startling fact that of over one hundred different brands of baking powder so far analyzed, comprising all those sold in this vicinity, not one of them with the single exception of the Royal Baking Powder, was found free from both lime and alum. The chief service of lime is to add weight. It is true that lime when subjected to heat gives off a certain amount of carbonic acid gas, but a quick lime is left, a caustic so powerful that it is used by tanners to eat the hair from hides of animals, and in dissecting rooms to more quickly rot the flesh from the bones of dead subjects. A small quantity of dry lime upon the tongue, or in the eye, produces painful effects; how much more serious must these effects be upon the delicate membranes of the stomach, intestines, and kidneys, more particularly of infants and children, and especially when the lime is taken into the system day after day and with almost every meal. This is said by physicians to be the chief causes of indigestion, dyspepsia, and those painful diseases of the kidneys now so prevalent. Instances of the most serious affections of the latter organs from drinking lime waters found in some sections of the west are noted in every medical journal.

Adulteration with lime is even more to be dreaded than with alum, which has heretofore received the most emphatic condemnation from every food analyst, physician and chemist, for the reason that while alum is probably partially dissolved and passed off in gas by the heat of baking, it is impossible to destroy or change the nature of the lime in any degree, so that the entire amount in the baking powder passes, with all its injurious properties, into the stomach. When we state that the chemists have found twelve per cent or one-eighth of the entire weight of some samples of baking analyzed to be lime, the wickedness of the adulteration well be fully apparent.

Pure baking powders are one of the chief aids to the cook in preparing perfect and wholesome food. While those are to be obtained of well established reputation like the Royal of whose purity there has never been and cannot be question, it is proper to avoid all others.

THE Duncan-Van Schaick trial, which has created such great interest in the vicinity of Watertown was closed Saturday. The Jury at first stood 11 for hanging. Finally a verdict of murder in the second degree was agreed upon. Duncan was senlenced to Auburn prison for life, yesterday.

There are many indications that the Capital will capture the Exposition which is projected for the celebration in 1889 of the 400th anniversary of the discovery of America. It has already been settled by public opinion that some American city must prepare to honor this important anniversary, and that it must be the grandest Exposition the world ever saw. New York, St. Louis, Chicago and the city of Mexico have carefully considered the subject. But the great World's fair cannot be successfully held in four American cities at the same time, and public preference naturally turns to Washington, the Capital of the United States, and the Capital of the leading nation of the sixteen sister republics of the three Americas.

The proposed plan is to open a permanent Exposition of North, South and Central America, in 1889, the centennial anniversary of the adoption of the Constitution of the U. S. Then in 1892 the World's Exposition is to open in honor of the 400th anniversary of Columbus discovery. Preliminary measures have been taken to materialize this project by leading citizens of Washington. The grand enterprise has been mapped out in detail and encouragement comes from every side. The main question now is how to enlist Congress. Senator Gorman, of Maryland, has introduced a measure for this celebration in the Senate, and he says he has every reason to believe that the bill which appropriates $100,000,000 to defray expenses, will be adopted. It is also suggested that a memorial, signed by forty or fifty representative men of the country, would evolve the result desired, and that Senators would then have something tangible to work on.

It is proposed that the buildings for the permanent Exposition be grouped around the Washington Monument. Space could there be assigned each of the fifteen republics of Spanish America and the Portugese empire of Brazil to erect a permanent building for the display of their resources and attractions. It would, in effect, be a permanent Congress of the three Americas, and something in harmony with public sentiment, as is evidenced by the numerous bill recently introduced in the Senate and House to provide for a temporary convention of American nations.

Yesterday being another fair fourth of March, it recalled the great scene of a year ago when a new chief magistrate, representing a new policy, took his oath of office and entered upon his duties. The year that has passed has been fruitful in events and at times the new President's burdens have sorely taxed all the resources of his mind and body. It is too early to render a verdict on Mr. Cleveland's administration, but the record of the first year will stand the test of time, particularly with regard to the Civil Service.

The parties have squarely crossed swords in the Senate over the right of that chamber to review the President's reasons. The controversy will be taken advantage of by those who favor open sessions to urge their views. They argue that if it is wrong for the President to act on secret information, it is equally unjust and un-American for the Senate to do the same thing. This position is a strong one logically, and is finding more and more support among Senators.

While there is no danger of war or revolution by reason of the issue that has been so sharply sprung between the President and the Senate, altogether too much time is being squandered on it. The country is more in need just now of wholesome legislation on various subjects than it is of political distractions or questions of constitutional privilege.

Opinions of the President's message to the Senate seem to be divided on strictly party lines. The Republican Senators hold that it was a needless and foolish misrepresentation of their position, while the Democrats of the Senate consider it was an able, courageous and timely document. It has stirred up both parties and has awakened more party feeling than has been shown before this winter. The coming discussion is sure to be a bitter one.

The House of Representatives has spent five days in discussing the Pension Appropriation bill to which not a single member has any objection to make or any amendment to propose. The Senate is still wrestling with the Educational bill which has drifted into a bad position so far as its chances of passage are concerned, by reason of som objectionable amendment.

Senator Ingalls has just presented in the Senate a petition as he said "of great length and extraordinary inaccuracy," signed by citizens of Kansas, evidently of foreign birth, praying for the abolition of the Presidency. He said he presented it with pleasure, although it was "based upon entire misconception of the constitution, and appalling ignorance of the history, to which it refers." It asked for European methods of Government.

Alden's Cyclopedia of Universal Literature.

This work is the outcome of many years of planning and preparation. It will be an almost indespensible work of reference for every library, large or small, a trustworthy guide to what is most worth knowing of the literature of all ages and all nations. Occupying a dozen or more volumes, and yet issued at a price so low as to be within the reach of all, a familiarity with its contents will constitute a liberal education to a degree that can be claimed for few other works in existence. Dr. Lossing, the eminent historian and author, says of it: "I am strongly impressed with the great intrinsic value of the work as a popular educator in a high department of learning. The plan is admirable. Combining as it does a personal knowledge of an author with specimens of his or her best literary productions, gives it an inestimable power for good among the people." The work is being published in parts of 160 pages each, paper covers at the price of 15 cents, also in handsome cloth bound volumes, gilt tops, 480 pages, for 60 cents. The parts can be exchanged for bound volumes at any time. Five parts are now ready, also the first bound volume. Volume two will be issued in March. The publisher's 132-page illustrated catalogue of standard books may be had for four cents, or condensed [illegible] John B. Alden, Publisher, New York.

The New Princeton Review for March is a notable number in more respects than one; the fact that it contains an article from Mr. Lowell whose pen yields so little of late from the wealth of his great scholarship and ripe thought, would of itself make an exceptional issue; but to this must be added a remarkable list of fresh, strong and timely contributions from various writers of force and point. Mr. Lowell writes about Gray with all that richness of combined culture, genius and wide experience which gives his work a peculiar distinction; Prof. Francis L. Patton brings to a study of Contempoary English Ethics his habitual clearness of preception and incisiveness of statement, and gives an admirable account of the different schools of thought now dealing so earnestly with questions relating to the foundations of morality; under the suggestive title of The Just Scales, Geo. Dana Boardman touches the question of silver coinage, of wages, and other vital topics with a vigorous hand; the discussion of Federal Aid in Education, especially important in view of the legislation now before Congress, receives a notable contribution in an unsigned article, opposing strongly the Blair bill and proposing government action in another direction; E. S. Nadal answers the question, Do We Require a Diplomactic Service? by meeting the various objection sometimes advanced, and enumerating the advantages of the service as he has seen them in his personal experience abroad Mr. J. B. Harrison, to whom the country owes a lasting debt for his services in preserving one of the great natural features of the new world, gives an interesting account of the Movement for the Redemption of Niagara; fiction is well represented by a characteristic story from the Norwegian of Jonas Lie, translated and adopted by H. H. Boyesen; the editorial department of Criticisms, Notes and Reviews presents brief, incisive discussions of various themes of practical or scholarly interest. (N. Y.; A. C. Armstrong & Son.)

New York Letter.

To the Editor of the Times:

New York has for [illegible] time in its existence, has experienced twelve hours of entire absence of horse car transportation. In the early part of last week, the drivers on Dry Dock road, a horse car road passing with many twistings through the streets on the east side of the city, struck for twelve hours and two dollars per diem. This was granted, but the company refused to grant $1.50 per diem to "trippers" or those not making the full number of trips for a day's work. Railroad Com. Kernan was sent for to adjust the difficulty by the Board of R. R. Commissioners, and he ordered that the company should operate its road, running at least one car, or in the event of a refusal, the charter of the company would be declared void by the Attorney General. In order to this end, the police were asked to protect the company in its attempt to run a car. The striking operatives piled obstructions across the track and only by an escort of 500 policemen under Supt. Murray was the car sent over its route. The company not acceding to the demand of the executive committee of the Empire Association of which all the car company's employes are members, a general "tie up" was ordered by the chairman of this committee, and the result was that on Friday not a car was seen on any of the many street car railroads of this city from 4 a. m. to 8 p. m. The strength and unity of the car drivers is shown in the general adherence given to the orders of the chief and not a little fear is expressed that the present success may embolden them to ask for absurd and questionable things in the future.

When the earnings of these roads and the high price of the stock is considered, one may see a reason why the demand for more wages is a just one. Surface railroad companies pay from 15 to 35 per cent. dividends beside paying large amounts for interest on bonded indebtedness.

The "tie up" of Friday cost the railroads perhaps $100,000, and the damage done by the strikers in preventing the running of cars on the Dry Dock road, which of course must come out of the taxpayer's pocket, will be very considerable.

The Senate Committee is still investigating the Broadway Surface Railroad. Ex-Senator Conkling is digging deeply into the matter and each day's testimony shows the rottenness of the scheme. Your readers, perhaps, ought to know something of this history.

Jacob Sharp came to New York city thirty or more years ago from Rome, N. Y., and engaged in dock building. He finally became interested in street railroads. He saw the profit to accrue from a railroad on Broadway. For 30 years he strove at Albany with the legislature for permission, till, finally, the General Railroad Act was passed. He then organized a company and asked the Aldermen to grant a franchise.

At the same time, a rival company sought the same thing, running their the cars by cable traction. Sharp, fearing that this company would succeed, bought up the Aldermen, using a Mr. Keenan and William Maloney, a reading clerk, in the Board of Alderman as the go-between. The franchise was granted. The Mayor vetoed it and the Aldermen by a snap meeting passed it over his veto.

From the testimony of many of the witnesses, it is about time that the ceremony of taking the oath be dispensed with.

Mr. Sharp says that he drew a check of $155,000, and don't know to whom it was given, or who drew the money, or what became of it. While the paying teller says Sharp drew the money.

Neither Mr. Keenan nor "Billie" Maloney have put in appearance. A clear evidence of guilt on their part.

The event of the week in Art circles has been the sale of Mrs. Morgan's pictures. Mrs. Morgan was a school teacher (there's hope for them yet) who forsook the wielding of the rod for a rich old gentleman, living on the east side of Madison Square. After his death, she purchased pictures, doing so so quietly that her most intimate friends did not know of her collection. One art dealer is said to have sold her $360,000 worth in one year. Her 284 pictures have been sold and the sum received will reach more than a half million dollars. Among the collection were pictures by Meissonier, two of which brought $31,000; they being purchased by Charles C. Crocker, of San Francisco; one by Rosa Bonheur at $12,500. Others by Bougereau, Milluis, Millett, Corot, Breton, DeNewville, Schregar and others. The pictures will average more than $2,000 each.

When we consider that she paid $15,000 fore a vase not more than 10 inches high, some may be inclined to recall Shakespeare's line from Midsummer Nights Dream, "What fools these mortals be" as did the WANDERER.

In the last issue of the Syracuse Sunday Times, appeared a very good picture of John D. Spencer, who was last week convicted of grand larceny and sentenced to three years in the Onondaga county penitentiary. In speaking of the young man the Times said: "Spencer is at work in the hame shop at the penitentiary. He said to a reporter who saw him there that the prosecution of his case was the result of political spite against his father, and that Lawyer C. Brown, of Mexico, was using' Carrie Barnes as a tool. His father is not able, he says, to do anything for him and he is satisfied to drop the matter and serve his three years' sentence. He appears as contented as a man can be under the circumstances."

A New Principal Secured.

The board of education have engaged a new principal for Union School No. 2, to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Prof. Farnham, which will take place at the close of the present term. The new principal is professor J. C. Fisher, a graduate of Syracuse University, who after his graduation, acted as tutor in the university. Mr. Fisher comes with the highest recommendations, as to character and ability is a fine scholar and will maintain and doubtless add to the high reputation and standing already enjoyed by this school. During Mr. Farnham's short time as principal he has given excellent satisfaction by his work and shown his particular adaptability to the position he has occupied. It is said he will go into the country for a time, until his impaired eyesight and general health are restored.

Not Time to Catch the Thief.

A few evenings since Mr. Oliver Gilbert of South Granby was apprised by his daughter that the chimney was on fire and his house in danger. He rushed out to the corn house to get a ladder to get to the top of the house, but he found the corn house door locked on the inside and he had to go elsewhere for a means of reaching the fire. During his absence the man in the granery escaped, but left his tracks. Oliver says if he will call around he will give him some corn in the ear. A lock has been put on that corn house and a bear trap will probably be placed in front of it nights.—[Oswego Falls Observer.

[illegible] Pulaski.

[illegible] fire [illegible] Pulaski [illegible] the [illegible] department of Oswego—upon which the people of Pulaski almost entirely depend for protection—could get to the scene, several stores adjoining with their contents were ruined. The loss is nearly if not quite $30,000. The insurance is estimated at about $10,000 less. This is the third time in about five years that Pulaski has suffered serious loss by fire, and in spite of the repeated warnings, the question of better fire protection has been voted down again and again by its penny-wise and pound-foolish citizens. The only protection from fire the prosperous, enterprising village can boast of are two antiquated hand engines that would hardly do duty as garden pumps; these, and a few men and small boys armed with buckets, constitute her "fire department." Pulaski is a beautiful, thriving village, has many rich and presumably intelligent residents, who rather than encourage any movement looking for better protection, will defeat it. They evidently think that a fire department of their own would be entirely superfluous with the efficient one of Oswego "only about thirty miles away." Each time the village has been visited with fire, assistance has been asked from Oswego, and each time she has responded nobly, sending a department she pays generously for, to help those who are unwilling to help themselves. Would it not be a good plan for Oswego to take Pulaski under her wing hereafter, and keep an engine and flat car, steamer and hose in readiness to respond to another call?

OBITUARY.

Many of our oldest citizens will be pained to hear of the death of a former resident, Mrs. S. C. Reynolds, who died March 5 '86, after a brief illness, of pneumonia at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. George L. North at Green Bay, Wis. She was in her seventy-first year. A strong, noble, christian woman has gone, but by her good deeds and purity of life she has left an influence that will never perish. Many will rise up and call her blessed. She leaves a large circle of mourning friends. Yesterday afternoon after a brief service held at the residence of her brother-in-law J. G. Reynolds, conducted by the Rev. Mr. Smith, she was laid to rest beside her husband at the family cemetery in Granby.

Mrs. Sarah E. Hodges, wife of William Hodges of this village, died last Wednesday, at her home on Utica street of dropsy, at the age of 45 years and 7 months. Mrs. Hodges has been a resident of this village for the past three years and during that time has endeared herself to a large circle of friends, who sincerely mourn her loss. She leaves a husband and two daughters. Funeral services were held Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock from her late residence, Rev. W. F. Markham officiating. The remains were placed in the receiving vault in Mt. Adnah.

Mrs. A. B. Alexander of Weedsport, formerly of this place died last week at her home in that village, aged 76 years. She was the mother of Douglas Alexander, a well-known printer of this village, who died several years ago. Mrs. Alexander has been living with her sister in Weedsport for some time. Her remains were brought to Fulton for burial.

Kyes Allen died at his home in Granby, Saturday, aged 79 years. Funeral services were held Monday afternoon from his late residence. [illegible]

Worth Knowing.

Stumps are a great nuisance upon land that is cultivated. Now, while the ground is soft, it is time to twist them out by horse power, chaining a long pole to the stump.

The proper time to market lambs is when they will dress from twenty-five to thirty pounds, and if of the right breed and if well fed, that weight ought to be obtained when sixty days old if not earlier—no lamb over seventy-five days old is fit to be eaten as lamb.

The cow, when yielding milk, needs a warmer stable than an ox. If we draw from her twenty pounds of milk every day that is at the temperature of 110 degrees, we must in some manner furnish her with the means of restoring the caloric to the system.

A hill of raspberry plants, after being trimmed in the spring, should only have three or four canes, about three and a half feet high and nearly one inch in diameter at the base, each cane having a few side spurs about ten inches long.

If you have a good farm horse keep him. The difficulties in the way of securing a good horse cannot be realized until the animal is really required and attempts are made at purchasing. But few horses are exempt from defect of some kind.

Avoid getting the boar fat. Feed no corn at all and allow him plenty of room for exercise. If too fat he will be of but little service, and as it will be less expensive to keep him in moderate condition, it is a matter of economy not to feed him heavily.

Muddy barnyards will cause the milk to fall off. When cows are compelled to stand knee-deep in mud, with their bodies plastered over with it, dirt will find its way into the pail while additional food will be necessary to supply that lost from cold and exposure.

Strawberry plants should be set out in early spring or in August, in both cases the object being to derive the advantages of the rarely and late rains. The plants should be set one foot apart, and should not be allowed to fruit or run the first year.

The man who drugs his horse to make his hair sleek and shiny shows very little sense. The best means to keep the coat glossy is careful and daily grooming. This, with plenty of oats and water and an occasional bran and mash is all the horse needs when in health. The arsenic groom should be discharged.

Stalls should be made roomy and strong in the horse stable, that no accident may occur to the farmer's loss. All stables should be well lighted with sliding windows of full sash, where we often find a square of movable boards which, looks bad, and when closed causes complete darkness. The floors should have just sufficient incline to carry off the liquid excrement readily. It is a good plan to have an extra thickness of planks directly under the feet of the animals.

A horse is not fully mature until six years of age. Immature animals are often overtaxed and their future usefulness discounted. Young horses should not be worked too hard if they are expected to live to a green old age. A horse does not come to his intelligence until eight years of age. Nor is it safe before this time to allow him to remain unhitched, unless trained to stand.

Getting Out Manure.

The good old way was to get out manure on snow and frozen ground, for then much heavier loads could be hauled. If intended for oats, barley, wheat, or potatoes, it was spread at once out of the wagon, or dropped in heaps to be spread without further carting. When intended for corn or any other late crop, the custom has prevailed of making a big heap at a convenient point, where the manure usually underwent heating before the time came to spread and plow it in. It is not wise to spread manure on frozen ground and leave it long exposed to the weather. Under some circumstances no inconsiderable loss from washing and evaporation would take place, whether spread or placed in small heaps. The march of invention has greatly changed this now, with the manure spreading carts we can spread faster than we can plow, if the spreader has a reasonable start, so that we need not break up our compost heaps and hurry out our manure so long before we can turn it under. After it has been spread, either upon one land, or one "bout", around the outside, the plowing may begin and the spreader will keep ahead of the plow-man. The saving of labor is great, and the system on large farms is constantly extending. —[American Agrsculturist for March.

Salt as a Fertilizer.

Dr. Caldwell says that the application of lime tends to make the father rich and the son poor, and the same may be remarked of salt. It loosens fertility locked in the soil and renders it available, but does not add fertility. There are, however, very few soils that have not lime in abundance, and also salt. Salt is largely applied to compost heaps, but it is not so good an absorbent as common earth, and cannot be compared with plaster or gypsum, which do prevent the escape of ammonia. Salt in the compost heap renders the same service as the application of water; it keeps the manure moist, and thus prevents heating and fire-fang. Salt also retards ripening in dry weather, and has been sown upon barley with benefit. Dr. Hazamag says he applied salt freely to certain rows of asparagus in a large patch without any visable result; he considers that salt is of no benefit to this plant.

Use of Gypsum.

It is a singular fact that gypsum or plaster of Paris is so little used. The [illegible] of all mineral fertilizers, and [illegible] adapted to clover. Its use [illegible] far beyond the localities [illegible] There [illegible]

[illegible] have an inventory of their stock, or they would know if they were robbed, [illegible] neither protected by bolts or bars, nor do they know when robbed in a small way, not having an inventory of their numerous articles of produce. There is not one farm granary in the country out of a hundred that is kept locked, and those that are locked may be pried open by a skillful hand in a few minutes, and after several bushels of grain are removed, the staples may be driven back into their places again and the granary have the same appearance as before the theft occurred. There are numerous people in large cities who live entirely upon produce stolen from farmers. They become so bold by years of experience that they drive out at night to the granaries and chicken roosts in a circuit of twenty miles, with as much confidence and as little fears of detection, as though the whole territory was their personal property. Thefts of poultry most frequently occur. The farmer about Rochester, N. Y., who succeeds in raising and marketing his turkeys and other fowls without loss by theft, considers himself remarkably fortunate. It is difficult to imagine the feelings of those who have nursed a flock of 50 or 100 chickens and turkeys through the perils of babyhood to full development, and and as Thanksgiving approaches that every fowl has been carried off by thieving vagabonds the night previous.

Clearing Brush Land.

When one wants his brush land only for pasture, and places no value on the wood, an easy and cheap way to clear it would be to chop it down as low as possible, especially the smallest, so that the harrow will pass over it this winter; but let it fall all over the ground, and lie there until June. Then set on fire on a dry, but cloudy day, all along one side, so that the fire will burn against the wind. If the brush is heavy it will burn over the whole surface, and kill nearly all the stumps. This is supposing it is hard wood; if it is pine land this treatment will not answer. Then at the at the proper time sow buckwheat, and at the same time sow rye. The ashes and turf will produce a good crop of grain, but to have the grass grow the land should be limed.

Killing Quack Grass.

Take two teams with plows and you can make a light job of it. Begin by plowing around the piece reverse way at first, with a good plow and sharp coulter, and with the second team plow the furrow that is uncovered by the first plow the same way you want to plow the piece. Then, with the first plow, take a wide furrow and turn the first furrow or the sod underneath in the bottom of the second deep furrow. Now plow with the first plow and sharp coulter as shallow as you can, and get the most of the quack; then follow in the same furrow with the second plow, and completely bury all the quack sod. The clevis on plow No. 2 will have to be so fixed as to follow in the furrow just made by plow No. 1.

Separating and then completely burying the quack kills it all.

Henry Fawcett.

"Henry Fawcett heartily enjoyed all the good things of life," writes his biographer; "a good glass of wine, a good cigar or a bit of downright gossip, not less than more intellectual recreations. 'One of the first things I remember about him,' says his wife, 'was his saying how keenly he enjoyed life. He expressed,' she adds, 'some impatience with people who avowed or affected weariness of life. There is only one thing that I ever regret,' he would say, 'and that is to have missed a good chance of enjoyment.' He would for instance, seriously ponder at the end of a frost whether he could not have contrived another hour's skating. He intended, he would tell me, to live to be ninety, and to relish every day of his life. Should any one be offended at a doctrine which seems to me more sound than easy to put in practice, he must remember that all Fawcett's enjoyments were wholesome and innocent, that they emphatically included a strenuous exertion of all his faculties, and excluded with equal emphasis every tinge of ill-nature. He never enjoyed anything which could give pain to others. * * * There was only one thing, he told his sister, which he dreaded—namely, a loss of energy. Life might become a burden to him if life no longer meant action.' —[Gentleman's Magazine.

THREE REASONS

Why everyone needs, and should take Hood's Sarsaparilla in the spring:—

1st: Because the system is new in its greatest need. Hood's Sarsaparilla gives strength.

2d: Because the blood is sluggish and impure. Hood's Sarsaparilla purifies.

3d: Because from the above facts Hood's Sarsaparilla will do a greater amount of good now than at any other time. Take it now.

The Best Lie He Could Think Of.

"I will never go down town with you again," said an apparently neglected wife to her spouse, as they were quietly meandering down the crowded thoroughfare.

"What on earth have I been guilty of?" exclaimed her husband.

"There is not a woman that passes us but what you turn around and gaze after her."

"Well, my dear, I was only looking up a spring style of bonnet."

"Pardon me, my dear," replied the lady. "How cruel it was of me to judge you so harshly."

MORTGAGE SALE.—Whereas default has been made in the payment of the moneys secured to be paid by a mortgage executed by Joel Chubb and Jane Chubb delivered to Eunice A. Pardee, dated the first day of Jan'y., 1877, recorded with the power of sale therein contained in the clerks office of Oswego county, on the seventh day of February, 1877, in Liber 111, of mortgages, at page 260, given to secure the payment of the sum of $1200. And whereas the sum of $121.67 is claimed to be due on said mortgage at the time of the first publication of this notice and to become due the further sum of $980, and an action has not been brought to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof and said power of sale has become operative. Therefore notice is hereby given that by reason of the facts aforesaid and in pursuance of the Statute in such case made and provided the mortgaged premises described in said mortgage as follows, to wit: All that tract or parcel of land situate in the Town of Granby (formerly Lysander) and known and distinguished as the south half of survey fifty acres of Lot No. nine (9) in the town aforesaid. Also all that other tract or parcel of land situate in said Town of Granby, and being a lot of one and one half acres of land on Great Lot No. nine (9) of the original township of Lysander, now Granby, and being on the east side of the river road leading from the south line of said town to the city of Oswego. The said lot hereby intended to be conveyed being bounded on the north by lands owned by Smith Southard, on the east by the survey fifty acres of said lot No. nine (9), on the south by lands formerly owned by Nahum Chubb, and west by the centre of said river road and being the same premises conveyed by Nahum Chubb to Jane Chubb by deed dated Jan'y [illegible] 1876. Also all that other tract or parcel of land situate in the Town of Granby aforesaid known as subdivision No. four (4) of Lot No. sixty-[illegible] in the original township of Hannibal, now [illegible] as subdivided by Barnet Mooney, Samuel [illegible] and Asa Dudley commissioners in partition appointed by the Court of Common Pleas in and for the county of Oswego—will be sold at public auction at the law office of Giles S Piper in the village of Fulton, county of Oswego, New York, on the 24th day of April, 1886, at 10 a. m. of that day and said mortgage thereby foreclosed.

Dated Jan'y 26, 1886.

The Rhyming Rules of Whist.

If you the modern game of Whist would know
From this great principle its precepts flow
Treat your own hand as to your partner's joined,
And play, not one alone, but both combined.

Your first lead makes your partner understand
What is the chief component of your hand;
And hence there is necessity the strongest
That your first lead be from your suit that's longest.

In this with Ace and King, lead King then Ace;
With King and Queen, King also has first place;
With Ace, Queen, Knave, lead Ace and then the Queen;
With Ace, four small ones, Ace should first be seen.

With Queen, Knave, Ten, you let the Queen precede;
In other cases you the lowest lead,
Ere you return your friend's your own suit play;
But trumps you must return without delay.

When you return your partner's lead, take pains
To lead him back the best your hand contains;
If you received not more than three at first;
If you had more you may return the worst.

But if you hold the master card, you're bound
In most cases to play it second round.

When'er you want a leap 'tis seldom wrong
To lead up to the weak or through the strong.

If second hand your lowest should be played,
Unless you mean trump signals to be made:
Or if you've King and Queen or Ace and King.
Then one of these will be the proper thing.

Mind well the rule for trumps—you'll often need them:
When you hold five 'tis always right to lead them.
Or if the lead won't come in time to you,
Then signal to your partner so to do.

Watch also for your partner's trump request,
To which, with less than four put out your best.

To lead through honors turned up is bad play,
Unless you want the trump suit cleared away.

When, second hand, a doubtful trick you see,
Don't trump it if you hold more trumps than three
But having three or less, trump fearlessly.

When weak in trumps yourself, don't force your friend,
But always force the adverse strong trump hand.

For sequences stern custom has decreed
The lowest you must play, if you don't lead.

When you discard, weak suit you ought to choose,
For strong ones are too valuable to lose.

The Model Man.

He don't play the fiddle, part his hair in the middle or dress like an Anglican dude.
When he goes to a party with Meigs or McCarty, he never is noisy and rude.

He lives in frugality and sweet conjugality, and wants pie but two times a day;
He never eats onions nor treads on your bunions nor growls when you get in his way.

He's wise and he's witty, persevering and gritty, and has a magnificent head.
He's all light and sweetness, he's thorough completeness, he's perfection, in short—but he's dead. —[Lynn Union.

A POSTAGE-STAMP STORY.

PRIMARILY I am a postage-stamp; just a common, every-day, two-cent stamp, possessing only such attributes as are peculiar to my class. Indeed, if I were placed among a thousand of my brethren I doubt if the keenest observers could point me out as being in any way distinguished. A vague gloom enshrouds that portion of my life preceeding its development into one of the Government agents (if I may so call myself); and I indistinctly remember of having once been connected in some way with a copy of an English comic paper which drifted into an American newspaper office, and then quickly into a huge waste basket. From that time until arriving at at my present state I passed through the hands of paper dealers, paper manufactures, and divers clerks and careless people, my last distinct impression being received from an engravers press.

I can scarcely be called a conceited person; still I am led to believe that my mission in the world is an important one. I am kind-hearted, of an agreeable dispostion and well satisfied with my lot. I frequently congratulate myself upon the good fortune which made me what I am. How much better to be, perchance, the bearer of some kind letter, a perfumed billet-doux, if you please, than a vulgar revenue stamp, fit only to adorn a box of ill-smelling cigars or grace a barrel of inferior liquor.

A man hurriedly places a postage-stamp upon a letter, which he drops into a convenient letter box, and entirely forgets the circumstance. It humbly serves his purpose; beyond that he does not care. But think for a moment of the travels of that same stamp, of the persons it meets, of the message it bears, and say it is not a sentient being.

After my birth I was carefully accounted for to various commonplace officials, and after some delay, sent to the postoffice of a certain eastern city. I was purchased soon afterward by Archibald Warrack, who tore me rudely from my friends, and after carrying me about in his pocketbook for a day or two, cast me into a certain dark drawer of his desk.

This Mr. Warrack was about 35, tall, graceful and altogether a very gentlemanly appearing person. He dressed neatly and tastefully, but with no suggestion of foppishness. To be frank, I admired him from the beginning of our acquaintance. Regarding his social and financial status, he was a gentleman of artistic tastes—one of the grand army of dilletanti—possessing an ample bank account and a pedigree which was never questioned.

The desk, into a drawer of which I was so ignominiously thrust, stood in a sunny alcove separated from Mr. Warrack's studio by a heavy portiere. This little apartment was a very pleasant place, and Mr. Warrack spent considerable more time in lounging than he did in working in the great, bare room adjoining. Art was a hobby of mine, and it was with much satisfaction that I found myself in such a congenial atmosphere.

[illegible] after being transferred to the [illegible] I have before alluded to, I discovered that my quarters were shared [illegible] other persons of my own [illegible] on dainty per[illegible] They were, however, [illegible] their [illegible]

I infer that you have been dwelling with this Mr. Warrack for some time, and, being a stranger, I shall esteem it a favor if you will tell me such things as you feel at liberty to speak of concerning his private history."

"It's a sad case," said my friend, with a deep sigh. He looked haggard and worn, and was apparently in great distress.

"How sad?" I inquired sympathetically.

"A sad case," he continued, without heeding my interruption. "Less than six months ago I was the carrier of a letter written by a young lady named Rariden—Miss Helen Rariden—to Mr. Warrack, the gentleman whose acquaintance you have recently made. This letter was written in reply to one from him in which he exhausted all the available adjectives of the English language in the sincerest avowals of love, closing with an offer of his heart and hand."

"And the letter of which you were the bearer contained———"

"Her acceptance," he said, completing my sentence. "Helen Rariden is a beautiful woman, gifted, wealthy and of excellent family. At the time I parted from her, or rather at the time she parted with me, she loved this—fellow, with all her pure soul; loved him as man was never loved before; and he doubtless cared for her—then."

The emphasis of this last word was destroyed by a pitiful sob, and for a few moments my friend was so moved that he could not speak. I waited patiently until he again began:

"Shortly after the engagement, which naturally followed, Helen (I take the liberty of so calling her) was compelled to accompany her mother to Europe on a trip undertaken in the hope of benefiting the lady's health. The parting of this Mr. Warrack with his promised bride was tender and touching; I was present at the time in the gentleman's left-hand coat pocket, and felt the beating of Helen's heart with distinctiveness for a few blissful moments. I admit that it was an embarrassing position for me to occupy, but I could not well withdraw, as I was then very much attached to this letter, as I am now."

I smiled at this bit of pleasantry, but my neighbor pressed a convenient penwiper to his misty eyes and resumed his narrative:

"After Helen went abroad Warrack was morose and melancholy for a while; he began several pictures with which to occupy his mind—gloomy conceptions to correspond with his state of feelings. He first began what he called 'Arthur and Guinevere'—the parting scene, you know. He sketched and daubed at it for a week or so, but kicked it off the easel one day in a fit of impatience. When Helen's first letters came to him (they are in the next drawer below, embellished with cold, haughty, foreign stamps) he replied promptly and at great length—tender, loving messages. Oh, how true he was!"

The stamp smiled bitterly.

"But he soon became neglectful and would toss Helen's notes into a corner of the desk and not even open them. Of course, under these circumstances, Helen did not write so often, and I soon began to notice a change in Warrack's manner. He became cheerful and planned some joyous pictures; one of them, a 'spring' landscape, is on his easel now, and he has ordered the canvass primed for a contemplated work to be called, "The Lifting of the Clouds."

"And what is the cause of this sudden change!"

"He is interested in another direction," was the reply,

"And what of Helen?" I inquired.

"She is still true," answered my friend in a tone of conviction.

This ended our conversation for the time being. My fellow lodger drew back into a dark corner and remained silent for several days.

In the meantime Mr. Warrack seemed happy; he spent much time in singing and whistling snatches of tunes, chiefly from light operas. He painted a little when in the right mood, and I observed through the keyhole of the drawer that the "Lifting of the Clouds" was progressing finely. It was with pain that I thought there might be some connection between the title of the picture and the growing coldness in the manner of the young people toward one another, judging from the dwindling of their correspondence.

A few days after my conversation with the elderly stamp, Mr. Warrack opened our drawer and threw in an unopened letter which he had just received. As soon as he went out my friend snatched it and examined it eagerly. The envelope bore the card of a Venetian hotel and a canceled postage stamp whose language we did not know.

"From Helen?" I asked.

"Yes," was the mournful reply.

Time wore on. It is a fashion time has, even in the life of lowly postage stamp. Spring came tripping down her bright, flower malled path, and in the darkness of our habitation we felt the reawakened life. Mr. Warrack did not enter his studio for days at a time. When I spoke of these long absences to my chum he only answered in the language of Tennyson:

"In the spring a livelier iris changes on the burnished dove;
In the spring a young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of love."

"Turns to thoughts of his new love while he forgets the old," I suggested.

"Poor Helen!" he said. "Oh, woman, you alone are suffering and true."

Spring, summer and fall.

One bright autumn day, as my friend and I were conversing in our quarters, Mr. Warrack, who was sitting in the alcove reading a newspaper, cut from its society columns two items which had, through the instrumentality of Fate and the [illegible] make-up, been printed [illegible]

[illegible]

"Oh, the perfidy of man," said my poor stamp friend, when I had finished reading.

The other item read:

"A cablegram from Venice announces the marriage in that city of Miss Helen Rariden, who has been sojourning abroad for some time past, to Sir Arthur Lombard of London."

"The devil!" gasped my friend, through the dust which covered him.

"Not the devil, but the way of the world," said I.

THE PROPER THING.

Powered hair is quite the correct thing.

New veils are of finely dotted lace in all colors.

Visites will be worn in simple woolen fabrics.

Silk promises to be in greater favor than for years.

Some kind of a coronet is on almost all new bonnets.

Striped goods are used crosswise and lengthwise.

Skirts of walking dresses still continue to clear the ground.

New parasols for spring and mid-summer are very large.

The trimming is massed back of the crown on the round hats.

Blouse dresses are still the most popular style for young children.

Ribbons and posies are the trimmings for the first spring bonnets.

Yellow is extremely fashionable both in blondes and brunettes.

Handkerchiefs have very narrow hems, and are sometimes bordered with lace.

Quantities of Hamburg edging and insertion will be used on summer toilets.

For early spring colored straw bonnets will be used both in smooth and rough braids.

Rosettes of ribbon a fourth of an inch wide will be used for trimming the top of the bonnet.

Collars of dresses will be higher than ever this spring and cut perfectly straight on the edge.

New jackets for spring wraps are of checked or striped cheviots, with elaborate frogs for trimmings.

Wide fring of cords that hang straight instead of being massed in tassels will be worn on woolen jackets.

Very pale shades of pink are again fashionable, and some very choice millinery and dress fabrics are shown in them.

Among the novelties in embroideries are flouncings forty-five inches deep in fine cambric and nainsook, with a narrow band of Hamburg across the bottom and trimming width at the upper edge.

A Watch From the Battlefield.

After the battle of Stone River a Union soldier took from the body of a Confederate officer, a fine, large silver hunting-case watch bearing the inscription:

"To M. S. Smith, Company 'G.' Fourth Mississippi Infantry, C. S. A."

The watch passed through two or three hands, and was finally traded to a member of a Michigan regiment for a pint of whisky. He brought it home with him and two or three years ago was killed at one of the railroad crossings. He was the debtor of P. A. Ball, 1023 Grand River Avenue, to considerable amount, and the watch came into the latter gentleman's possession at a certain valuation. He is still possessed of it, but thinking the relic might have great value in the eyes of the dead man's friends, he is willing to surrender it to them when properly identified. M. S. Smith was doubtless the first captain of the company, and the watch was presented either by his town's people or the company.—[Detroit Free Press.

Mrs. Burnett's New Story.

Mrs. Frances H. Burnett, the novelist, has written a serial story for St. Nicholas, called "Little Lord Fauntleroy," the hero of which is a boy-character who is as new as he is delightful. Born in America, the child of a younger son of an English earl, his father dies when he is a little fellow, and by the death of his uncles, he becomes heir to the earldom. His grandfather, a cross old nobleman who has never forgiven his youngest son for marrying against his wishes, sends for the boy and his mother. In the March St. Nicholas is recounted the first interview between little Lord Fauntleroy and his grandfather,—the earl, expecting a conventional bread-and-butter youth, finds himself confronted with "a graceful childish figure in a black velvet suit, with a lace collar, and with lovelocks waving about the handsome, manly little face, whose eyes met his with a look of good-fellowship." And then they talk. The boy tells his grandfather all about his past life, about the corner-groceryman with whom he used to discuss politics, about Dick the bootblack, who gave him a beautiful red silk handkerchief when he sailed away from New York, with purple horse-shoes and heads on it,—"you can wear it round your neck or keep it in your pocket";—about "Dearest," as he calls his mother, because he used to hear his papa call her so.

"'You don't wear your coronet all the time?' remarked Lord Fauntleroy, respectfully.

"'No,' replied the earl, with his grim smile; 'it is not becoming to me.'

"In the course of the conversation, he reached the Fourth of July and the Revolution, and was just becoming enthusiastic, when he suddenly recollected something and stopped very abruptly.

"'What is the matter?' demanded his grandfather. 'Why don't you go on?'

"Lord Fauntleroy moved rather uneasily in his chair. It was evident to the earl that Lord Fauntleroy was embarrassed by the thought which had just occurred to him.

"'I was just thinking that perhaps you mign't like it,' he replied. 'Perhaps some one belonging to you might have been there. I forgot you were an Englishman,'"

The story was begun in the present volume of St. Nicholas and will run through the year. Mrs. Burnett is at work on a new novel for The Century.

In The "Hornets' Nest" at Shiloh.

From Colonel Lockett's article accompanying General Buell's account of Shiloh in the March Century we take the following: "I witnessed the bloody and unsuccessful attacks on the 'hornets' nest.' During one of the dreadful repulses of our forces, General Bragg directed me to ride foreward to the central regiment of a brigade of troops that was recoiling across an open field, to take its colors and carry them forward. 'The flag must not go back again,' he said. Obeying the order, I dashed through the line of battle, seized the colors from the color-bearer, and said to him, 'General Bragg says these colors must not go to the rear.' While talking to him the color-sergeant was shot down. A moment or two afterwards I was almost alone on horseback in an open field between two lines of battle. An officer with a bullet-hole in each cheek, the blood streaming from his mouth, asked, 'What are you doing with my colors, sir?' 'I am obeying General Bragg's orders, sir, to hold them where they are,' was my reply. 'Let me have them,' he said. 'If any man but my color-bearer carries these colors, I am the man. Tell General Bragg I will see that these colors are in the right place. But he must attack this position in flank; we can never carry it alone from the front.' It was Colonel Allen, afterwards Governor Allen in Louisiana. I returned, miraculously preserved, to General Bragg, and reported Colonel Allen's words. I then carried an order to the same troops, giving the order I think to General Gibson, to fall back to the fence in the rear and reorganize. This was done, and then General Bragg dispatched me to the right, and Colonel Frank Gardner (afterwards Major-General) to the left, to inform the brigade and division commanders on either side that a combined movement would be made on the front and flanks of that position. The movements were made, and Prentiss was captured."

It Was All Right.

"Where do you expect this money from?" asked a clerk in the money-order department of the post-office of a woman who presented an order for $15.

"From Chicago."

"And who from."

"John Williams."

"Ahem. I guess it is all right."

Oh, I know it is!" she exclaimed as she signed her name. "He used to be my husband. He offered me $50 if I would throw up all claims on him, and this is the second installment. I'll probably get the rest in about two weeks.—[Detroit Free Press.

Arguments in the Holland-Davis shooting case were concluded in New York city on Friday evening. The jury had not been out ten minutes before they agreed that the defendant ought to be acquitted. The verdict was, not guilty. The prisoner displayed no great emotion, but warmly grasped the hand of each juror as he stepped from the box. Almost every man in the court-room grasped Holland warmly by the hand, and he walked out of the court-house on the arm of his Texas lawyer. Holland will leave for Texas in a few days.

THE educational bill, over which there has been so much discussion has finally passed the United States Senate. It provides that during the next eight year there shall be annually appropriated the following sums for common school education in the states and territories. The first year, $7,000,000; second, $10,000,000; third, $15,000,000; fourth, $13,000,000; fifth, $11,000,000; sixth, $9,000,000; seventh, $7,000,000; eighth, $5,000,000; making $77,000,000, besides which there is a special appropriation of $20,000,000 to aid in the erection of school houses in sparsely-settled districts. The division will be on the basis of illiteracy and for this reason the Southern States will get the most of it. The bill has yet to pass the ordeal of the House of Representatives and is therefore by no means an assured success. If the amount be honestly applied for the benefit of those unfortunate ones for whose welfare it is intended, it can not but bring about good results in the future and prove a bill of the noblest kind.

THE Cunard steamer, Oregon, one of the largest, fastest and finest of the North Atlantic fleet of ocean steamers was run into by an unknown three masted schooner off Sandy Hook on last Sunday morning. Two big holes were stove in her side and she began to fill rapidly. A pilot boat and a schooner were fortunately near at hand and the six hundred passengers on board were safely transferred to these. The discipline of the crew was perfect and everybody was taken off the steamer without a causalty occurring. The captain was the last to leave the sinking ship. It is supposed that all on board the unknown schooner were lost as none of the crew were seen to lower a boat and the schooner itself went down in less than 45 minutes after the collision occurred. The Oregon was built for the Guion line and was run by that company two seasons. Then she was purchased by the Cunard line. She was the second vessel to make a voyage from Sandy Hook to Queenstown in less than seven days, the Alaska being first. The latter's time was 6 days, 21 hours, 40 minutes. The Oregon in 1884 reduced this record to six days, six hours and fifty-two minutes. This remained the quickest time either way till the summer of 1884, when the Etruria, also a Cunarder, made the same westward trip in six days, five hours and fory-four minutes.

Hon. H. C. Howe at Work.

On Monday evening Assemblyman Howe introduced a bill providing for the removing the causes which contribute to produce floods at or near Fulton. Last week Superintendent of Public Works, Stebbins together with Engineers D. E. Whitford, R. R. Stuart, Denison Richmond and A. V. Meeker came here and made a systematic investigation of things generally. The bill put in by Mr. Howe proposes to leave the method of remedying the difficulty to the Superintendent of Public Works, who is, undoubtedly the most competent to judge as to the remedies necessary to obviate the difficulties.

STATE AND VICINITY

Auburn experienced twenty-nine fires during the past year, causing total losses of $75,065.96, with $58,109.11 insurance.

In the apportionment of public school money, Syracuse gets $39,178.94 and the other towns of Onondaga county $46,277,59.

Dr. S. O. Vanderpool, formerly of Albany and president of the state medical society, died in Washington Saturday morning.

The spring session of the Onondaga county Teachers Institute will begin at Howard Opera House, Baldwinsville on the 29th inst. and continue for five days.

Dr. Sylvester Willard one of the oldest and wealthiest citizens of Auburn, died, Friday, aged 55. He was for many years President of the Oswego Starch company.

Dr. J. C. B. Wallace, an old resident of Baldwinsville, and a noted Prohibitionist, fell in a fit and died last Wednesday afternoon. He was the last survivor of the pioneer, Dr. Silas Wallace.

John F. Schwan, a colored barber of Syracuse, committed suicide by throwing himself before a West Shore train at Syracuse last Saturday morning. The loss of his wife and financial embarrassment were the causes.

Syracusans are discussing the annexation of the Sackett tract, a suburb of the city which is thickly populated and commonly known as Geddes. It would increase the population of the city 15,000. A bill of annexation is now before the legislature.

The city of New York embraces an area of 24,394 acres. Within the city limits are 500 miles of public roads, exclusive of parks, and to clean these $1,100, 000 was expended in the year 1885. Seventy-five thousand dollars are annually spent in removing snow and ice alone.

At the close of the 75 hours pedestrian contest in Syracuse last Saturday night the score stood: Herty, 280 miles; Taylor, 273 miles, 10 laps; Harriman, 219 miles, 5 laps; Burns, 213 miles, 11 laps; La Point, 209 miles, 6 laps; Golden, 171 miles, 6 laps. Herty will receive $150, Taylor $100, and Harriman $50.

Seventeen years ago Rufus W. Nye of Sodus married Olive Rose of Sodus Center, and the couple lived together several years. Suddenly Nye abandoned his wife and one child, and until a week ago last Saturday, was thought to be dead. In the mean time Mrs. Nye became Mrs. Kerns, but when she heard of her first husband's return she went to meet him and a reconciliation followed. Nye and Kerns had an interview, which resulted in Kerns relinquishing the woman and selling out his household goods to Nye. The reunited couple have gone to Saginaw, Mich., to live.

Personal and Political.

Senator Logan is to write a series of war articles for a Washington journal.

It is said that Senator Jones, of Nevada, is the only member of the Senate who accompanied the remains of Senator Miller to California.

Maj. Gen. Pope was placed on the retired list yesterday. It is probable that Brig. Gen. Howard will be nominated as his successor.

George G. Small, a well known writer and humorist under the non de plume of "Bricktop," died last Wednesday in New York of consumption.

Mme. Patti who appeared at Valencia Faiday evening, in "Triviata," was loudly hissed owing to hitches in the first duet. She at once left the theatre and returned to her hotel, escorted by the police.

Mrs. Logan is more universally admired and respected than any other lady in Washington public life. Her weekly receptions are more largely attended than those of any other of the cabinet ladies.

Matthew Arnold, who for many years has been the inspector of schools for the English government, is at the present time traveling on the continent, making researches in educational matters for his government. He will visit America.

The President of the French republic also has a sister. She is the widow of the eminent chemist Pelouze, is immensely wealthy, and is going to give a little party in June next, to which she will invite 30,000 guests "to meet the President."

The entertainments given by Mrs Secretary Whitney are said to rival anything before seen in Washington. It is estimated that her receptions cost $3,500 a week. The story goes that Colonel Payne gave Mrs. Whitney his check for $500,000 not many months ago and told his sister that the money was not for her to keep but to spend for the entertainment of her friends.

COUNTY COMMENT.

A series of religious meetings are being held in Parish with good results.

An item of $5,000 for the Oswego Normal School is in the supply bill now before the legislature.

Rev. Dr. Wightman of Syracuse gave a scientific lecture in the Wesleyan church at Phœnix last evening.

The students of the Phœnix academy are enjoying a two week's vacation. The school opens next Monday.

The Cleveland, O., Leader says that Alfred Smith, formerly of Oswego, has been indicted by the grand jury on two charges of murder in the first degree.

The students of the Central Square union school recently gave two entertainments from which were netted $71.64. The fund thus obtained is to be used in procuring apparatus for use in the school.

A local branch of the Knights of Labor has been organized in Oswego. The organization is made up of machinists, blacksmiths, coopers, sailors, railroad men, longshoremen and workmen of different branches in the city.

Adam Doenburgh, aged 85, who died at his home in Boylston, some days ago was a native of Schoharie county, and a son of a soldier who served with distinction in St. Clair's campaign and at the siege of Fort Stanwix.

A bill has been prepared granting a charter to a railroad to run from Sandy Creek through Boylston into Redfield. Mr. D. C. Littlejohn is backing the scheme. The road will give an outlet for [illegible]

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, March 12th, 1886.

Washington society has gone into mourning for forty days. To observe, or to appear to observe Lent, is as fashionable in this city as it is to approach it with social events heaped rapidly upon one another. The young lady who has been going to balls, routs, receptions, and dancing attendance upon the German, has thrown aside her decollete satin robe and arrayed herself in a high cut suit of sack-cloth, metaphorically speaking, while she cries mea culpa, and contents herself with afternoon teas, drives and theatre parties.

Every day crowds of people go to the Capitol and make their way to the Senate galleries where they listen to the long-looked-for debate on the Presidential prerogative. Although all the discussion that could be crowded into a year would not remove the question at issue from the category of vexed political problems, the people will be glad to have the subject thoroughly exhausted. Then both parties to the controversy may settle down to the real work of the session. There will be general approval, however, if the debate shall produce, as one of its indirect results, the throwing open of executive business to the scrutiny of the public.

The new Administration is now but little more than one year old. It may interest Civil service reformers to read what changes have been made in the personnel of the Executive Departments during the twelve months, and how the President has carried out his pledges at the expense of his party.

The Treasury Department, which is by far the largest of them all, affords the most interesting example of what has been done. Its Assistant Secretaries have given place to Democratic successors and the score of bureau officers who were, with few exceptions, active partisans, have given place to successors chosen on about the same principles. The supervising Architect and Chief of the Secret Service, retain their places. Among the deputy chiefs of bureaus, about one half have been displaced or reduced to lower grades. Of the chiefs of division, about one half have been displaced or reduced to clerkships. Taking the Secretary's office as an example, of its nine division chiefs four have been displaced, one of whom was succeeded by the promotion of an efficient subordinate, the other five have been retained. The Treasurer's bureau has been protected absolutely from partisan changes, and vacancies in all its grades have been filled by promotion. Assistant chiefs of division have been recognized as under the civil service classification and free from partisan changes, the appointment of an assistant chief of the Appointment Division being the only violation of this principle and policy. In the four clerical grades the civil service law has been absolutely enforced and excuses for removals or evasions have not been sought.

The Bureau of Engraving and Printing, controlling more patronage unrestricted by the Civil Service law than all the Bureaus of the Treasury combined, has afforded the most conspicuous and perfect example of the triumphs of reform principles.

Throughout the Departments, where assistant Secretaries were employed, they have been superceded, with a single exception. With chief clerks, the rule has been very different. The veteran and efficient chief clerks of the State, War and Navy Departments, trained under Republican Administrations, have been retained. The chief clerk of the Department of Justice and of the Interior Department both continue to serve, and the only two who have been succeeded, those of the Treasury and Post Office Departments, voluntarily resigned.

The State, War and Navy Departments have been absolutely free from partisan changes above, below and in the classified grades. The Department of Justice has witnessed numerous changes in its higher positions, the Assistant Attorney General, the Solicitor General, special attorneys, etc., but its chief clerk, apapointment clerk and other prominent officers remain, and in the grades of division chiefs clerical grades, and among the laborers and messengers, partisanship has had no victims.

In the interior and Post Office Departments, changes and reductions have been made among bureau and division officers, but the heads of those Departments, have firmly resisted pressure for the removal of their most faithful and efficient aids, and from the lowest to the highest grades, a large proportion of the incumbents hold over from previous Administrations.

Dr. Mary Walker Arrested.

Dr. Mary Walker who is well known in this vicinity was arrested at Newport, R. I. last Friday evening. She had gone to Newport for the purpose of seeing her aged friend, Miss Sarah Briggs, in whose interest she recently appeared before the Rhode Island legislature in pressing payment of a revolutionary claim. While on the steamer she shocked several ladies by her male attire, and on their arrival there they reported the matter to the police. The result was the doctor was compelled to go to the police station, followed by a large crowd. The officer had no idea who his prisoner was. The chief of police promptly released the woman, but she remained in the chief's office and gave the officer who arrested her a severe rebuke. She intimated that the city had made a mistake which it would repent. The authorities subsequently apologized to the aggrieved doctor.

On Monday there were filed in the county clerk's office certificates of incorporation of "The Parish Manufacturing Company" for a term of existence of 25 years. The object of the new company is to manufacture machinery and articles of utility and to purchase, use and sell patent rights upon the same. The capital stock of the company is $100,000, divided into ten thousand shares of $10 each.

The amount taken at Parish is $25,000. Mr. Crandall, it is said, whose type writers are to be manufactured, taking the balance. The dirctors are Geo. R. Mosher, Romaine C. Robinson, J. A. Harter, John B. Todd, Orlow P. Rider of Parish, and Lucius S. Crandall of Cortland. The Works will be situated near the site of the old tannery, the construction of which will begin at once. We congratulate Parish and hope that their enterprise will be crowned with success.

Stockbreeders, Attention!

Mr. Henry Stevens of Sandy Creek and John Gardenier, of Oswego, have been talking of forming a stock breeding association for this county. It is for the encouragement of fine stock raising, whether Holstein, Jersey grades or natives. All who have an interest in this matter are invited to take a part in forming an association. Already the grade of cattle in Oswego county has been greatly improved by the fine stock bought here and yet there is room for still greater improvement. A call has been issued to those interested to meet in the Doolittle House parlors, Thursday, Mar. 25 at 10 o'clock a. m.

A Woman to be Hanged.

LITTLE VALLEY, Cattarugus Co, N. Y., March 13.—Mrs. Mary Wileman, accused of poisoning her husband at South Valley September 30th last by placing arsenic in his pie which she gave him for dinner, was convicted at midnight of murder in the first degree. The closing scenes in the trial were very sensational. Mrs. Wileman bore the verdict without flinching, but went into hysterics on being removed to jail. When asked by the judge what she had to say she replied, "as God is my judge I a'm innocent of the crime."

She was senteced to be hanged April 30. The defence was that Wileman himself administered arsenic with suicidal intent.

The Syracuse Courier gives the list of New York's living ex-governors as follows: Hamilton Fish, who was elected in 1848; John T. Hoffman, who served from 1870 to 1873; Samuel J. Tilden, who was governor in 1875-6; Lucius Robinson, who served from 1877 to 1880; Alonzo B. Cornell, who served from 1880 to 1883; Grover Cleveland, who was governor in 1883 and 1884.

Murdered by Robbers.

JOLIET, Ill., March 13.—One of the most daring and bloody express robberies ever perpetrated in Illinois occurred on the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific west-bound express last night between this place and Morris. The facts as learned from the baggageman are that shortly after the train which leaves here at 12:45 a. m. had left this city, he heard a rap at the baggage-car door. Thinking it was the express messenger he opened the door and was met by masked robbers, who covered him with revolvers and demanded his key to the express car. The key was given up and one robber, who was on top of the baggage car, held a revolver at the baggageman through a transom in the roof of the car while his confederates turned their attention to the express car. It is thought they tapped on the express-car door and informed the messenger, H. S. Nichols, that the baggageman wanted to get in. At any rate the express-car door was opened and the desperadoes entered, and then occurred one of the most bloody and desperate struggles on record. Being confronted by the murderous villains the messenger fought for his life and the property in his trust. The interior of the car shows that he fought the robbers from one end of the car to the other, but at last the murderous blows that they rained on his head with an iron poker forced him to succumb and he was left dead in the car. The robbers rifled his pockets of the keys of the safe, which they robbed of all its contents, variously estimated at from $25,000 to $100,000. Checks and valuable packages not containing money they left scattered about the floor. Nothing was known of the occurrance until the train reached Morris the first stop west of here. At Morris the local express messenger rapped on the express-car door, but as the summons was not answered it was thought that the train messenger was asleep. Upon the door of the car being opened the horrible evidence of the desperate struggle and the dead body of Messenger Nichols was discovered.

JOLIET, March 15.—Two men suspected of being two of the principals in Saturday's express robbery, have been arrested near here. Saturday afternoon three men went to a farm house a few miles from here and asked to obtain work. The farmer engaged the men, but thinking their action and appearance suspicious, kept a close watch on them and sent word to the authorities. One of the men got wind of the farmer's suspicion and disappeared, but the other two are in custoday.

CHICAGO, March 15.—Andrew Watts, the baggagemaster who was in the train when Expressman Nichols was robbed and murdered, has been placed under arrest on suspicion of being implicated in the crime.

The Howe Ventilating Stove warms the room and keeps the air pure. It Ventilates the room at the same time that it heats it. Cold, fresh air is taken into the Stove through a pipe from the outside of the house. Fresh air passes into the Stove, is heated and passes into the room through the open top, while the foul, impure air being heavier than fresh, pure heated air drops dead to the floor, is forced into a flue in the Stove and is drawn through a small pipe in the smok pipe into the chimney and escapes with the smoke.

Unclaimed Letters.

The following letters remain uncalled for at the [illegible] office at Fulton, Oswego [illegible] Y., on March, 17th, 1886: [illegible] Baker, C. P. Baker, [illegible] Chas. [illegible] Mary Goodell, [illegible] Green, Wm. Hill, [illegible] L. Littlefield, J. [illegible] (Miss) Lura [illegible]

[illegible]

To the [illegible]

A [illegible] question has presented itself during the examination before the Senate committee. The recent trial of an Italian who stole some postage stamps from an employe in the Postoffice Building and the discharge of the prisoner by the Recorder on the ground of no jurisdiction lead to the agitation of the question.

The Postoffice Building in which the committee meets is U. S. property—all jurisdiction having been ceded by the state. The question now is, can perjurers be punished for false testimony? Mr. Conkling affirms that a way can be found to meet this case. The question is new and a variety of opinion pro and con is being expressed. The evidence before the committee has reached the point of sensationalism. The Aldermen themselves are now on the stand and strange testimony is being given. They are as a rule noted for treacherous memories. During the examination of Ald. Jeahne he admitted winning large sums of money at poker, while the detectives of the central office traced to his jewelry establishment silver stolen from the house of Assemblyman R. R. Hamilton of this city. While no evidence of a criminal nature can be found our Alderman is guilty morally of the same charge that sent Maudlebaum to Canada for acting as a "fence" or receiver of stolen goods.

It is not beyond the memory of man when it was an honor to be a member of our local legislative body. In those days sterling honesty and high integrity sent the old stamp Knickerbocker merchant into the common council, but now to be the owner of a gin mill or the heeler of some "boss" is the "open sesame" to what somebody has not inappropriately called the "common scoundrels."

The Surrogate has issued letters of administration on the personality of General Hancock to his wife. The estate amounts to $3,000. It is surprising that the General left so little property. The receiver of a good salary and knowing that in a few years he would probably be retired it is strange he made no provision. The fund has reached $4,000 and it is to be hoped that Congress will not permit his widow to suffer.

The legislature at Albany is being watched very closely especially with reference to the Health officer's office. Some idea of the emoluments of that office may be had when we remember that more than 1,000 vessels enter this port each year which pay from $3 to $5 for examination besides other fees charged for removing sick passengers to the hospital. It has become an office of vast political importance to the party in power. To the Health officer it is worth $5,000 per year. To the average practicing physician this is a gold mine.

The politicians of both parties have ceased hunting the traitors of the last election and have settled down waiting the outcome of the Senate's action on the Governor's recent appointments.

There was great activity on the bear side of the market. Stocks made a general decline from ¼ per cent. to 3 per cent. The Western Union has declared a script dividend of 1½ per cent. on its capital of 80,000,000. In other words it has issued promises to pay and thus has violated the law. There is something strange about the Western Union stock. It has an immense business and for some years has paid 6 and 8 per cent dividends, yet its stock has never been above 75 while to-day it is quoted at 64. There is something wrong somewhere.

Some idea may be had of the profitableness of bank stock when the shares of the Chemical Bank are now held at 3,600 per share of $100 while no bank share sells for less than 200. Bank dividends are from 8 to 100 per cent.

The society season has closed with the advent of Lent. Now the votaries of fashion will repent forty days in sackcloth and ashes. The season has been a brilliant one. Many of the society balls and receptions have been characteristic for the absence of modest female apparel. The full dress has been remarkable full, perhaps I ought to say scanty. The more the chest, neck and arms are undraped, the more fashionable the attire. The more that has been written upon the subject, the greater has been the desire of the fashionable lady for immodest attire. Hence Lent is a sort of safety valve to relieve the minds of the sensible.

The death of James Treat Paine, a direct decendant of Robert Treat Paine, a signer of the Declaration of Independence, has led to many strang disclosures of this singular man and indications point to the fact that he must have been a millionaire. Yet he lived in the most abject poverty. A friend told me the other day that he had seen Paine buy a partially decayed apple because of its cheapness. He was one of the best dramatic critics in the city. Some idea of his pecularities may be had from the fact that he left $40,000 in the Metropolitan bank with nothing to show for it but four certificates of deposit in 1861 and only called once during the panic of 1873 to inquire of the safety of the bank.

Theatrical companies are preparing "to go into the provinces" as they express themselves. It has been a successful season. Perhaps no better examples of success can be furnished than that of Henry E. Dixey. For two years he has been amusing the public at the Bijou. Those that see him once are not satisfied and I doubt not but that there are those who have seen him a hundred times. Nat Goodwin takes charge of this theatre next season and Dixey with his "Adonis" goes to Boston after the 4th of July.

Verily, supple limbs and tripping toes are sometimes more profitable than a head full of brains.

Sent to Prison.

In the Circuit Court this morning, Justice Vann sentenced those prisoners indicted by the charges made against them on Saturday last. Joseph Nichols and Thomas Ingoldson, who pleaded guilty to burglary in the third degree were arraigned. The crime was committed in Baldwinsville on the night of February 4, in entering the jewelry store of Samuel C. Suydam and taking a number of valuable rings, and other articles of gold and silverware. The Nichols boy is only sixteen years old; Ingoldson is nineteen, and the parents of both live in Fulton. The Nichols boy, although the younger, has served a term in the House of Refuge, and this forenoon he was sentenced to three years, imprisonment in the Onondaga County Penitentiary. Ingoldson stood up in court, gave his name, age and occupation, and when asked if he had anything to say why sentence should not be pronounced, took occasion to ask for the mercy of the court. He said this was his first crime, and although the trip had been planned for the purpose of robbery, he was heartily sorry for it, and promised complete reformation. Justice Vann seemed touched by the boy's appeal. He said he had received a letter from the boy's employer, in which it was said that the young man heretofore had always born a good name. In view of existing facts he sentenced Ingoldson to the Elmira Reformatory. As the boy left the court room to go to the cells below, he stopped in front of his mother, and bending over her kissed her affectionately, saying, "good bye," with tears in his eyes.—[Syracuse Journal of yesterday.

Fire at Oswego Falls.

About half past six o'clock Monday morning the grist mill and machine shop of Smith Murgatroid, located on Fourth street in upper Oswego Falls, was discovered to be on fire. The flames had gained considerable headway when first discovered, and before a stream could be obtained from the nearest hydrant, the entire building and the adjoining barn of John Stevenson's, were burned to the ground. The shop was filled with tools, machinery, stock, etc., all of which is a total loss. The fire is supposed to have originated from the engine, in which Mr. Murgatroid had built a fire and then returned to his breakfast. When the fire was discovered, several lengths of hose were borrowed from the factory company, but there was not enough to prove effectual, and before any more could be obtained the buildings were in ashes. There was said to be an insurance of $700 on the shop building and tools, but none on material. There was no insurance on the barn.

Those Roman Lillies.

"The flowers that bloom in the spring tra, la."

The TIMES made mention a few weeks since of the smooth tongued individual who came here some time ago and sold to quite a number of persons his alleged Roman lily bulbs. It seems that our neighbors at Phœnix also purchased lavishly of these "rare flowers that would bloom in all the tints of the rainbow twice a year." The bulbs were planted, watched and tended with the greatest care, and in due time they blossomed into daffodils, common to almost every lawn. This vicinity is not, at present, a desirable one for a florist to canvass.

The Early Closing Movement.

For a number of months past the dry-goods stores and shoe stores have closed at 7:00 p. m., each evening except Saturdays and Mondays. That this is a very commendable movement on the part of the merchants, and that in order to be a success it must be heartily supported by each one, all will readily concede. The question is now being agitated as to whether the early-closing rule will be continued after April 1st. It is to be hoped that our enterprising merchants will warmly second the proposed movement.

A Narrow Escape.

A Fulton young man who attempted to jump from a rapidly moving train last Monday on the N. Y., O. & W. railroad, had a very narrow escape from being crushed by the wheels. As he jumped his feet flew from under him and he was dragged some distance on his knees. He hung on to the railing, lifted himself up and ran a short distance and eventually got off whole, but it was a close call. Whether he will profit by the lesson remains to be seen.

C. M. B. A's. Entertainment.

The C. M. B. A. of Fulton and Oswego Falls will give a grand entertainment in the opera house this evening consisting of a lecture by the Rev. L. N. St. Onge of Glens Falls, and an address by the Rev. William Early of this village. The musical part will be under the direction of Prof. F. K. Jones, assisted by Miss Maggie Darby, soprano, Miss Annie Parker contralto, and Mr. A. N. Palmiter violinist.

Ladies who are contemplating getting a new Sewing Machine should call on Mrs. Beals, or have her call on them to show the fine points of the Davis.

"The World" was played last Wednesday evening before a larger audience than on in its previous presentation, which is a sufficient guarantee of its popularity here.

Will Morton received a young alligator Monday from St. Augustine, Florida. It was sent by A. E. Nettleton, who is spending some time there. The reptile is eleven inches long.

Otto H. Sholtz is a candidate for village collector at the coming caucus for charter election. Otto made a very efficient officer and gave universal satisfaction during his service three years ago.

The house on the corner of Second and Cayuga streets owned by Mrs. Peets, is undergoing repairs and when finished will be occupied by Mrs. E. A. Cooper as a millinery store and residence.

John Fitzsimmons, a well-known young man of this village died last night after a lingering illness, aged 24 years. Funeral servicees will be held to-morrow afternoon at 2 o'clock from the Catholic church.

C. R. Nichols who recently fell and broke two of his ribs, has nearly recovered from his injuries. In company with his daughter, Carrie, he started yesterday for Saratoga, where they will visit friends a short time.

An auction sale is to take place at the late residence of Jacob Piper, deceased, about three miles east of this village, on Thursday, March 25, at 10 a. m. At which the stock, farming implements, a quantity of lumber, Household Furniture, etc., etc., will be sold.

Edward VanCamp who was arrested in Syracuse and brought to this village on a charge of forgery, has exhonerated himself from the charge. It was claimed that he signed the name of another in a subscription book in order to get the commission. He was released and returned to work in the Syracuse stove works.

Among the passengers of the ill-fated steamship Oregon, which sank last Sunday morning at 4:30 o'clock off Sandy Hook, were Mrs. M. K. Jefferds and son Charles, or as he was better known in this place, "Chap." After reaching New York, Mrs. Jefferds left for Philadelphia, where her father lies seriously ill. Charles remained in New York, where he will put in a claim for the loss of their baggage.

An act to provide a system of sewerage for the village of Fulton, which was recently introduced into the assembly by Mr. Howe and after passing the necessary preliminaries was ordered printed, is on file at the village clerk's office. The act gives power to the trustees of this village to establish a system of public sewerage, the expense for the construction of which to be put in whole or part upon the persons that are to be benefited. The matter will probably be discussed by the Board at their meeting this evening.

Diaries for 1886, for sale by

C. S. EGGLESTON.

[illegible] His latest acquisition is a very unique machine which is used as a money drawer and for the purpose of making change. It consists of a handsomely finished box about eighteen inches high, and in the top of the box are slots for different coins from one cent to one dollar. On the front of the box are 21 keys numbered 1c, 5, 10, 15, etc., up to $1.00. By pressing upon any of these keys the right change is instantly deposited in a little box and drops from there into the hand. The coins taken in through the day are deposited in the slots in the top, the box thus answering as a money drawer. The machine is made in Louisville, Ky., and is warranted to make no mistakes. A suggestion made by a reporter that he be allowed to play a tune on the keys was answered by a prompt refusal. As long as the machine "gives down," it certainly "fills a long-felt want and should be in every home."

Leased For Thirty Years.

Last Friday the lease between the N. Y. O. & W. Railroad company and the R. W. & O. company was filed in the county clerk's office at Oswego. This lease entitles the latter company to the use of the N. Y. O. & W. company's tracks between this village and Oswego for the term of 30 years. By the terms of the contract the R. W. & O. agree to pay to the N. Y. O. & W. company fifty per cent of the gross receipts of the trains, that may be earned on that portion of the road owned by that portion of the road owned by the N. Y. O. & W. company, and will maintain a switchman at the different junctions. All the passenger trains over the Phœnix road shall stop at the Oswego and Fulton stations of the N. Y. O. & W.; the R. W. & O. people agree to honor all tickets issued by the N. Y. O. & W. company between Oswego and Fulton; the R. W. & O. agree to do no express business in or out of the N. Y. O. & W. company's depots in Oswego or Fulton, except such business as may be destined for points on the Syracuse & Phœnix road.

"My eyes, but ain't them pants the stuff," said the small boy as he witnessed the above castigation.

Yes, boys, a good pair of pants in a time of sore need like this is a great boon, while a poor made, worthless pair sewed with cotton thread would prove disastrous and cause you many regrets. We extend to your parents a kindly invitation to call on us when you are in want of more clothes. They are perfect in every respect and guaranteed to stand the racket under all circumstances.

VICINITY NOTES.

Hannbal.

Albert Williams is expected home from Texas soon.

Mr. Charles Waterbury of Lindonville is the new telegraph operator at the station.

The property belonging to the estate of the late Eli Wilder of Oswego town was sold at public sale to-day.

When W. T. Warsop came home to tea last Wednesday evening, he found a party about a dozen of his gentleman friends, who had assembled to partake of the feast prepared by Mrs. Warsop in honor of her husband's 37th birthday. The affair had been kept a secret from Mr. Warsop, who was very much surprised to find his house in the possession of his friends. Mrs. Sumner, mother of Mrs. Warsop, and Mrs. Warsop, Mr. Warsop's mother, and Mr. and Mrs. Yonngs all of Oswego were present, as was also Mr. Will Curtiss of Jamestown, Dak., formerly of Oswego. All join in pronouncing Mr. and Mrs. Warsop adepts in the art of entertaining.

Stephen Stark, one of the oldest residents of this town, died Thursday night at the residence of his son Frederick Stark at North Hannibal after a short illness. It was thought Wednesday that he was getting better but the end came suddenly as he was sitting in his chair. The deceased was a man of the strictest integrity and had been noted all his life for his honesty in all his dealings with his fellow men. His word was literally as good as his bond. He had been a farmer during all the active years of his life, was in religious belief an old fashioned universalist, and in politics a democrat. He was highly respected by the whole community. The deceased leaves one son, Frederick Stark, a justice of the peace of this town, and five daughters, four of whom live at Skeneateles and the other is the wife of D. D. Metcalf, Esq., of this place.

Oswego Falls.

The factory ditch is nearing completion,

The singing school at Granby Centre has closed.

Charles Smith of Fairdale is to move to this place the first of April.

Jas Faulkner will build a residence next to Dr. Marsh's place.

Miss Laura Bradford of Syracuse has been visiting Miss Floy Baker.

Present indications point to a large amount of building here this season.

On the 10th inst. John Sherley and Carrie DeForrest were married by Rev. A. P. Perkins.

Several families of this place will build a cottage at Pleasant Point for a summer resort.

John Lynch and Thomas Kilfoyle while working in the factory ditch yesterday were hurt by flying rock from a blast.

Hose from the factory was used Monday at the Murgatroid fire which was attached to one of the water works hydrants. If it could have been brought into service at once Mr. Stevenson's barn could have been saved upon which there was no insurance.

A Mr. and Mrs. Chester have been living in the Emeny block, taking boarders. Mr. Chester has gone to Philadelphia, it is thought and last Wednesday night Mrs. Chester moved out her household goods and took them to the depot to have them shipped to Philadelphia. But several of our merchants got wind of her movements and attached her furniture to secure bills they held against her for groceries, etc. During Wednesday Mrs. Chester swore out an attachment against the trunks and belongings of a Mr. Russell whom she claims owes her for a board bill. His things were also at the depot ready for shipment.

South Scriba.

SOUTH SCRIBA, March 15—Mr. Chapman Percival and Mrs. Sarah Baker, both of Volney, were married Wednesday evening at the residence of Charles McDougal by the Rev. C. E. Miller.

The donation held at the G. A. R. hall last week for the benefit of the Rev. C. E. Miller, netted twenty dollars.

The Sons of Veterans organized a Post here last Wednesday night, It was named George DuBois Post, in honor of a former soldier from this place.

Several people went from this place to Vermillion last night to assist in an exhibition for the benefit of Post Doyle, S. of V.

Mr. W. Southard, who has been working Mr. Ed. Foster's farm for the past year, is going to work the Randall farm near Klock's Corners, this summer. Mr. Foster will work his own farm the coming season.

Worth Knowing.

Three creameries in Madison county, Iowa, pay $120,000 to $150,000 annually for milk and cream.

Bran, sprinkled with pepper and mixed with milk, is excellent food occasionally in winter for laying hens.

Let no animal be placed where it will be helplessly threatened by a stronger one with no chance of escape.

Shorthorns or Herefords are the best sires for crossed beef-yielding cattle, and Holstein and Jerseys for milkers.

A lamb will begin to eat when it is from ten days to two weeks old. There is nothing better for them than whole oats.

An elm transplanted is said to make no more wood in twelve or fifteen years than one in mother soil will in ten years.

The states producing over 25,000,000 bushels of wheat last year were, in the order of production, Minnesota, Michigan, Iowa, Dakota, Indiana and California.

You want a dozen or two of early pullets, so as to have them commence laying next fall. This month is the time to set one or more hens. Early pullets will pay you well for all the trouble of raising them.

It is not too soon to make the hotbed for early plants. The main point now is to save plenty of fresh horse manure, which should be kept in a dry house and should contain as little coarse matter as possible.

In feeding you want to notice that some animals are more dainty as to their choice than others; their likes should be respected.

On the small farm hog raising pays as well, or perhaps better, than on the larger one. For the farmer of moderate means hog raising is one of the surest and quickest ways of making money in the average season.

When skim milk or buttermilk can be secured at from 2 to 3cts. per gallon, it is one of the cheapest foods that can be given to chickens. It may largely take the place of flesh, and will induce them to lay early and often.

Because corn is low in price the present winter, don't think it will not pay to plant this crop another season. Corn is one of the best crops the farmer can grow, and when fed out on the farm as it should be, the land is made better year by year.

In preparing produce for market, honesty is the best policy—it pays to be honest in weight, measure and quality. Neatness is another thing that pays; have what you offer for sale look neat and attractive; customers still find out where the best articles are to be obtained, and are willing to pay a good price for them.

Boiled potatoes with a little bran over them or a head of cabbage placed within reach of the flock, or a liver cooked and rubbed up fine or put through a sausage mill and then mixed with mill feed, are all good to keep chickens in good health and make the hens lay at this season of the year.

A New England man has patented a process for improving the fertility of fields by trenching and cross trenching them three and one-half feet deep and four rods apart, partly filling the trenches with loose stones and throwing enough earth over them to allow the plow to pass over without coming in contact with the stones.

Quite a discussion is taking place among the agricultural journals regarding the dehorning of cattle by artificial processes, but as we have a breed of polled cattle it has been suggested that the result can easily be arrived at by breeding. The Scotch breed, divided into Angus and Galloway, is now being used extensively as beef producers, and possess the characteristic of being without horns.

Preparing for Spring Work.

The comparative idleness of winter makes the horses' shoulders tender, and unless they are hardened, plowing will soon make them sore. The best hardener is strong, pure brine. Apply it with a rag tied around the end of a corn cob. During the working season, as soon as the collar is removed, wash the shoulders and apply the salt water. It toughens the flesh, and also cools the shoulder allaying all irritation and inflammation. Discard all collars much worn, and select new ones when you have plenty of time. Take the horses to the harness shop; do not buy a collar until you get one that fits well. It is a common fault that one side is harder than the other; be careful to get a collar of equal firmness throughout, and not lumpy, and if it fits perfectly the firmer it is the better.

Give all the harness an oiling now, because the oil will absorb better than when the weather is warm. Take the harness to pieces and wash it clean with lukewarm water, using a dull knife about the buckles to remove the dirt. Use pure neats-foot oil (you will have to pay a good price for it but use no other), with enough castor oil to scent it, and keep the mice away. Apply the oil moderately warm on both sides of the leather, all that is rapidly absorbed. Then hang the harness in an airy place to dry thoroughly. Two oilings of harness, except the collars, a year is enough; but the collars should be oiled every two weeks during the working season, and the sweat and dirt be removed each morning with a dull knife. Give the wood-work of the plows a coat of paint. Mineral paint is very cheap and answers this purpose as well as more expensive paints. But use the best oil. If the plows are dull, take them all to the shop now, when work is not pressing. Strengthen weak places. Do not wait for breaks; they always occur when the [illegible] is in use, hence when they occur [illegible]. Give the whiffletrees the same attention recommended for the plows. About the easiest way to make a [illegible] is to take time by the forelock. —[illegible] for March.

[illegible]

on hand that was [illegible] to keep.

Robert McAdam said he had looked over this matter, and could hardly come to the same conclusion as the Canadians. It seems very uncertain to me whether any action taken by the Utica Dairymen's Board of Trade, to delay opening of the factories in the state for cheese making, would be obeyed. Therefore it would not be wise to interfere so much as to indicate a date when operations should begin. Circumstances differ very much in all sections. Moreover it is very likely to occur that good, early made cheese will bring more money than cheese made after the middle of May. And we must bear in mind that cheese, even at its present prices, is relatively dearer than other staple provisions which compete with cheese as a food. Any attempt to raise the price of cheese by abridging the make will simply induce consumers to use less cheese, especially as fine Australian mutton and Amazon pork are being retailed in England at seven cents per pound. The area from which supplies of food are now drawn are too large to be affected by cornering. Western speculators in in wheat find that holding back the produce of that immense region, has not prevented the fall of the price in Liverpool, below the price in Chicago and New York. And when supplies are once obtained from other sources, it takes much time and effort to regain the market. Therefore my mind is merely to advise delay in opening until sufficient milk is assured to make a good beginning. Also for makers to decline commencing until assured of a good supply; and before concluding with a motion to that effect, I would remark that the outlook for higher prices is not favorable. Yet with a general improvement in trade prices may recover. But farmers should direct their minds to obtain some relief, not so much from higher prices, but from that which increases their necessary outlays. Would not the lowering of the legal rates of interest of four per cent bring some relief? Would not the removal of taxes from all necessaries they have to purchase be a boon? These items in your outlay taken off and there would be some equivalent for low prices; then why not demand them from your law-makers?

Mr. McAdam then offered a resolution advising that the opening these factories be delayed at least until milk in sufficient quantities can be furnished, so as to admit of good cheese being made from it; and that cheese makers should decline to commence until assured of sufficient supplies, it being a fact that hitherto much of the inferior spring cheese has been a result of commencing such operations with too little milk, aggravated by patrons sending green milk to the factories.

The resolution was unanimously adopted.

It was decided to hold the first meeting of the board for the year on Monday, May 10.

A resolution was adopted condemning bogus butter and commending the action of the state dairy commissioner in endeavoring to suppress it.—[Rome Sentinel.

Tree Planting.

The hole destined to receive a shade or fruit tree should be at least three feet in diameter and two feet deep. It then should be partially filled with good surface soil, upon which the tree should stand, so that its roots could extend naturally according to their original growth. Good fine loam should be sifted through and over them, and they should be sifted through and over them, and they should not be permitted to come in contact with decaying matter or coarse, unfermented manure. The tree should be set as deeply in the soil as it stood when first taken up. As the earth is thrown gently through and over the roots it should be packed lightly against them with the foot, and water, should the season be rather dry and warm, poured in from time to time to settle the fine soil about them. The surface should be levelled at last with a slight dip toward the tree, so that spring and summer rains may be retained directly about the roots. Then a mulch of coarse manure is helpful, for it keeps the surface moist, and its richness will reach the roots gradually in a diluted form. A mulch of straw, leaves, of course hay is better than none at all. After being planted, three stout stakes should be inserted firmly in the earth at the three points of a triangle, the tree being its centre. Then by a rope of straw or some soft material the tree should be braced firmly between the protecting stakes, and thus it is kept from being whipped around by the wind. Should periods of drouth ensue during the growing season, it would be well to rake the mulch one side, and saturate the ground around the young tree with an abundance of water, and the mulch afterward spread as before. Such watering is often essential, and it should be thorough.

Make The Pigs Comfortable.

In spite of his blanket of fat which might be supposed was a great protection, the pig really is very sensitive to, and suffers much from extreme cold. But, as W. D. Boynton says in the Farmer's Review, a good, comfortable, roomy hog-house is usually the last building to be put up by the farmer. What does the word pig-pen suggest? A little, low structure made of odds and ends of lumber, battened, perhaps, to keep out the storm, and perhaps not. Nine times out of ten it is not furnished with any kind of a door.

Pigs cannot thrive under such conditions. It will take a largely increased quantity of food to keep up sufficient vitality to enable them to withstand the hardships of winter, to say nothing of laying on additional flesh or growth.

Sheath up on the inside of the posts with any lumber at hand thus forming a space between the two walls, that may be stuffed full of straw and well rammed down. Hang doors on hinges at the top, that the pigs can swing in and out at pleasure, and which will close after them and keep out the cold and storm. This makes a comfortable pen, if bedding be plentifully supplied. The labor and expense of fixing will save many times its cost in the food consumed, and the farmer will have the satisfaction of knowing that his animals [illegible].

In a druggist's store lovers
For sweet perfume went,
And they at that moment
Were—two for a scent.

A penny was dropped and
To find it they bent;
Again these dear lovers
Were—two for a cent.

Soon up in an ele-
Vator they went;
Once more those gay lovers
Were—two for ascent.

That night they asked papa
To give his consent;
And so at once they Were—Two for accent

Although cents had given
Them plenty of scents,
Papa told them plainly
That they had no sense.

What Baby Can Do.

The baby can wear out a dollar pair of kid shoes in twenty-four hours.

It can keep its father busy advertising in the newspaper for a nurse.

It can occupy both sides of the largest sized bed manufactured, simultaneously.

It can crowd to suffocation the smoking car of a railroad train with indignant passengers between two stations.

It can make itself look like a fiend just at the moment when mamma wants to show "what a pretty baby she has."

It can look its father inocently in the face and five seconds later spoil the only good coat he has got in the world.

It can make an old bachelor in the room adjoining use language that if uttered on the street would get him in the penitentiary for two years.

It can go to sleep "like a little angel." and just as mamma and papa are starting for the theatre it can wake up and stay awake until the beginning of the last act.—[Newman Independent

MORTGAGE SALE.—Whereas default has been made in the payment of the moneys secured to be paid by a mortgage executed by Joel Chubb and Jane Chubb delivered to Eunice A. Pardee, dated the first day of Jan'y., 1877, recorded with the power of sale therein contained in the clerks office of Oswego county, on the seventh day of February, 1877, in Liber 111, of mortgages, at page 260, given to secure the payment of the sum of $1260. And whereas the sum of $121.67 is claimed to be due on said mortgage at the time of the first publication of this notice and to become due the further sum of $960, and an action has not been brought to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof and said power of sale has become operative. Therefore notice is hereby given that by reason of the facts aforesaid and in pursuance of the Statute in such case made and provided the mortgaged premises discribed in said mortgage as follows, to wit.: All that tract or parcel of land situate in the Town of Granby (formerly Lysander) and known and distinguished as the south half of survey fifty acres of Lot No. nine (9) in the town aforesaid. Also all that other tract or parcel of land situate in said Town of Granby, and being a lot of one and one half acres of land on Great Lot No. nine (9) of the original township of Lysander, now Granby, and being on the east side of the river road leading from the south line of said town to the city of Oswego. The said lot hereby intended to be conveyed being bounded on the north by lands owned by Smith Southard, on the east by the survey fifty acres of said lot No. nine (9), on the south by lands formerly owned by Nahum Chubb, and west by the centre of said river road and being the same premises conveyed by Nahum Chubb to Jane Chubb by deed dated Jan'y. 17, 1876. Also all that other tract or parcel of land situate in the Town of Granby aforesaid known as subdivision No. four (4) of Lot No. sixty-two (62) in the original township of Hannibal, now Granby, as subdivided by Barnet Mooney, Samuel Farnham and Asa Dudley commissioners in partition appointed by the Court of Common Pleas in and for the county of Oswego—will be sold at public auction at the law office of Giles S. Piper in the village of Fulton, county of Oswego, New York, on the 24th day of April, 1886, at 10 a. m. of that day and said mortgage thereby foreclosed.

The Soldier Tramp.

CITY POLICE COURT EPISODE.

"Yer honor, I plead guilty; I'm a bummer;
I don't deny the cop here found me drunk;
I don't deny that through the whole long summer
The sun-warmed earth has been my only bunk.
I hain't been able fur to earn a livin;
A man with one leg planted in the tomb
Can't git a job—an' I've a strong misgivin'
'Bout bein' cooped up in a Soldiers' Home.

"'Whar' did I lose my leg?' at Spottsylvania—
Perhaps you've read about that bloody fight—
But then I guess the story won't restrain you
From doin' what the law sets down as right.
I'm not a vag from choice, but through misfortune,
An' as fur drink—well, all men have their faults,
An' judge, I guess I've had my lawful portion
O' rough experience in prison vaults.

"I served as private in the Tenth New Jersey,
An' all the boys'll say I done w'at's right—
Thar' ain't a man kin say that Abram Bursey
War' ever found a-shirkin in a fight;
Right in the hell-born frightful roar o' battle,
Whar' shot an' shell shrieked through the darksome wood,
Amid the blindin' smoke an' muskets rattle,
You'd always find me, doin' the best I could.

"We had a brave ol' feller for a colonel—
We called him Sweety, but his name was Sweet—
Why, judge, I swear it by the Great Eternal,
That brave ol' cuss'd rather fight than eat!
An' you could allus bet your bottom dollar
In battle Sweet'd never hunt a tree—
He'd allus dash into the front an' holler:
"Brace up, my gallant boys, an' foller me."

"Well, just afore the Spottsylvania battle
Ol' Sweety cum to me, an' says, says he:
'I tell you Abe, 'tain't many things'll rattle
A tough ol' weather beaten cuss like me;
But in my very soul I've got a feelin'
That I'm a-goin' to get a dose to-day,
An' tain't no use for me to be concealin'
The skittish thoughts that in my bosom play.

"'Fur many years you've been my neighbor, Bursey,
An' I've allus found you squar' an' true—
Back in our little town in New Jersey
No one has got a better name than you.
An' now I want your promise, squar'ly given,
That if our cause to-day demands my life,
An' you yourself are left among the livin'
You'll take me back an' lay me by my wife.'

"Well, judge, that day, amidst the most infernal
An' desperate bloody fight I ever seed,
'Way up in front I saw the daring colonel
Throw up his hands and tumble off his steed,
In half a minute I was bendin' o'er him
Some little distance back out o' the fight.

"The blood from out a ghostly wound was flowin',
An' so I snatched the shirt from off my back,
For I could see the brave ol' cuss war' goin'
To die, unless I held that red tide back.
An' purty soon I seed he was revivin'
An' heard him whisper: 'Abe, you've saved my life;
Yer ol' wool shirt, along with yer connivin'
Has kept me from that grave beside my wife.'

"Well, judge, while I stood thar' beside him, schemin'
On how to get him in a doctor's care,
A ten-pound shell toward us come a-screamin'
Just like a a ravin' demon in the air.
An' w'en it passed I found myself a lyin'
Across ol' Sweety's body, an' I see
That tarnal shell that by us went a-flyin'
Had tuk my leg along for company.

Well, judge, that's all, 'cept when the war was over,
I found myself a cripple, an' since then
I've been a sort o' shiftless, worthless rover,
But just as honest as the most of men.
I never stole a dime from livin' mortal,
Nor never harmed a woman, child nor man—
I've simply been a bum, and hope the court'll
Be just as easy on me as it can."

Then spake the judge: "Such helpless, worthless creatures
Should never be allowed to bum and beg;
Your case, 'tis true, has some redeeming features,
For in your country's cause you lost a leg.
And yet I feel the world needs an example
To check the tendency of men to roam;
The sentence is that all your life your camp be
In the best room in my humble home.

The soldier stared! Dumb! Silent as a statue!
Then in a voice of trembling pathos, said:
"Judge turn your head and give me one look at you—
That voice is like an echo from the dead."
Then forward limped he, grimy hand extended,
While tears adown his sun-brown cheeks did roll,
And said, with slang and pathos strangely blended:
"Why, Colonel Sweety, durn your brave ol' soul."

The Jester Sums Up.

The miser and the doubtful ward will lie to make again;
The glazier is a happy man when business is a pane;
If you have a chestnut to preserve just boil it down in ink:
You'll find the fancy slippers at the roller skating rink.
A snake skin's shed, a horse is shod, a prowling hen is shooed;
A deed is done, a dun is did, and nothing is a dude;
A politician is a flow, a Boston girl a flue;
A cow is sold, a lion stale, the horned horse is gnu.
The shower bath's a damp one, but the stove's a damper still;
You will never grind with water that is running up the hill;
The handkerchief you hem haw, haw! you mean to give to him;
The head that makes the joke is thick—why then the joke is slim;
The highest art can't paint the wind, but you can draw your breath.
It ain't the sickness but the shock, that kills in sudden death.
The man who bravely tells the truth about the apple tree

In August when the day is hot, you're apt to find it scold;
Umbrellas that your friends take off are worth their weight in gold;
Stick to the train conductor's punch, your head never swim;
When with the porter you're a brush, no quarter show to him.
And any more of this you want just reel it off yourself;
There's tons of raw material upon the dusty shelf;
The jingle trips it lightly in gas meter, as you see—
Tol leedle lo de deedle deedle lol de deedle dee.

Relative Size of South America.

South America is more than double the size of the United States. The empire of Brazil seems on the map quite as large as Australia. It is twenty-four times the size of England. The Argentine Republic is nearly as large as Europe taking Russia out. Bolivia and Venezuela are each twice the size of England and Scotland, Equador something less, Paraguay equal to Great Britain, Uruguay and Chili about the same, and the [illegible] regions of Patagonia and [illegible] at least double the [illegible] [illegible] Dutch, British, [illegible] are nearly as [illegible].

A DEFERRED DUEL.

We were all officers of the line stationed in a small town. In our circle there was one Prussian, a man about 35 years old, and of serious, almost gloomy, habits. He had distinguished himself as an officer of the Tenth hussars, and no one could imagine why he had left that regiment to live in a wretched little place where life was so monotonous.

His principal occupation was pistol shooting, and the walls of his room were literally honeycombed with bullet holes. Duels were often the theme of our conversation, but Sylvio never took part in such discussions. If asked if he had ever fought a duel, he would simply answer, "Yes," in a tone to indicate that any further questioning would be disagreeable to him.

One day while we were at cards a stranger who had joined us became angered at something Sylvio said, and insulted him. All supposed that the stranger would on the morrow fall a victim to Sylvio's skill; but next morning at review, while we were wondering whether the young lieutenant was alive, he suddenly appeared in person. Sylvio did not allude to the matter. As he had received an insult without resenting it we gradually dropped him from our circle.

One morning he received a letter. I watched him as he tore it eagerly open and perused its contents with flashing eyes. His strange manner passed unnoticed, each one being absorbed in his own affairs. "Gentlemen," he said, "I am obliged to leave here at once—to-night, in fact—but beg you will all dine with me for the last time. And I expect you, especially, without fail," he added, turning to me. He then hurriedly left us.

When I reached Sylvio's lodgings in the evening, my fellow officers had preceded me. The furniture had already been removed, leaving nothing but the bare walls, so curiously honeycombed with bullet holes. Our host was in good spirits, and we soon all followed suit; champagne-corks flew about, glasses were filled and refilled, and all heartily bade our friend God-speed. It was late when we rose to go. When my turn came to say good bye, Sylvio seized my hand and whispered:

"I must speak with you."

I remained. When the guests had gone, he seated himself opposite me and for some time we smoked in silence. Sylvio was deep in thought; not a sign remained of his nervous gayety. As I looked at his pale face and eyes, encircled by the thick smoke of our pipes, he had the appearance of a spirit of the nether world. At last he broke silence:

"We shall probably not meet again. I wish to speak a few parting words. You may have observed that I care little for public opinion, but I like you, and would regret leaving you under a false conception of my character."

He stopped to fill his glass. I remained silent.

"You have thought it strange I did not exact satisfaction from that drunken idiot who insulted me at cards. Having the choice of weapons, his life was in my hands, and mine in comparative safety. I might attribute my behavior to grandeur of soul, but disdain to lie; could I have punished him without risking my life, he would not have escaped."

I raised my eyes to Sylvio in horror; such a confession repelled me.

"Yes, that is the truth," he continued. "I had no right to risk my life. Six years ago I received a blow, and the man who struck me still lives."

My curiosity was quickly excited. "You did not fight?" I asked.

"We fought, and here is the proof," he answered, at the same time taking up a soldier's cap and placing it upon his head. I noticed a small round hole just above his forehead.

"I served in the Tenth hussars. You know me, and perhaps have seen that I used to be first in everything. In my youth it was to me an absolute necessity that it should be so. In my day it was fashionable to be fast; I was the wildest youngster in the regiment—in the army I might say. Hard drinkers were much applauded. I could outdrink the famous Dobroski, whose prowess in that line was celebrated. In our regiment duels were of more than daily occurrence, and in each one I was either principal or second. My brother officers worshipped me, and my superiors let me alone as an incurable case.

"I was enjoying my laurels when a young man, rich and of illustrious lineage—permit me to withold his name—joined us. Never had I met a more gifted man—young, talented, handsome, gay to excess, brave as a lion, of unbounded wealth—all these advantages were his besides his great name. You can well imagine the place he at once took among us. My away was over. He at first sought my friendship, but was repulsed and drew back with indifference. I hated him; his popularity filled me with rage. I tried to draw him into a quarrel, but his answers to all my sarcastic speeches were so much wittier than mine that my rage and jealousy grew apace, for I felt his superiority. At length, one night at a ball seeing him courted by all, and specially by a young lady I greatly admired, I approached him and whispered a bitter insult in his ear. This was too much, and losing his temper, he struck me full in the face. We drew our swords, the ladies fainted; and although bloodshed was prevented on the spot, a duel was arranged for that very night.

"At daybreak I was at the appointed place with two seconds, awaiting my [illegible] hand. I had the right to shoot first, but my pulse beat so that I could not be sure of my aim, and therefore insisted that he should shoot first. He refused. We then agreed to draw lots. Fortune favored her darling. He shot and the bullet pierced my cap.

"It was my turn now—at last his life was in my hands. I looked eagerly at him, trying to find the slightest sign of fear. He was quietly awaiting my shot, eating his cherries, the pits of which he threw at my feet. It was exasperating. 'What is the use,' thought I, 'of taking a life so little valued?' A devilish thought struck me. Dropping my hand, I said:

'Since you are breakfasting so calmly, you are scarcely prepared to die. Allow me to wait until you have finished your cherries.'

"'Do not distress yourself, I pray,' he answered. 'You have one shot at me. At present, or at any time, I am at your service.'

"I turned to my seconds, saying: 'I will not shoot to-day.'

"The duel was over.

"I asked for leave of absence, and came to this little town, where revenge has been my daily thought. The time has come.

Sylvio handed me the letter he had received that day. Some one—an agent I believe—wrote to say that "the individual in question was about to marry a beautiful young girl."

"You know," continued Sylvio, "who is the 'individual' alluded to. Well, I go to Moscow to-night, and we will see if to-morrow or the day after he will be as indifferent to death as the morning he was eating cherries."

Sylvio stood up, and paced up and down the room like a caged tiger. I watched him intently and could see the fierce struggle the conflicting passions held in his breast.

In a moment the servant entered to say the horses were ready. Sylvio grasped my hand, we embraced, and, hurriedly seizing a traveling bag and a brace of pistols, which proved his only baggage, he sprang quickly into the carriage and was gone.

Many years after, business made it imperative for me to settle in the little town of Staroduv. Within four miles of my house lay a fine property belonging to the Countess Bercheneff. No one but the overseer lived there—the countess had spent only the first month of her marriage on her beautiful estate. About two years after my coming to Staroduv, it was rumored that the countess and her husband would come to spent the summer at their beautiful country seat. In fact, they arrived in the beginning of June, and, as was to be expected, their advent caused quite a commotion in our little town. For my part, the coming of such charming neighbors made quite a change in my life. I was especially anxious to meet the countess, and accordingly, the first Sunday after their arrival I called to present my respects, as being their nearest neighbor. I was shown into the count's private sitting-room, which was luxuriantly furnished—books, bronzes, rugs, bric-a-brac, an immense mirror over the mantlepiece, etc. It was so long since I had seen any finery of the kind that a strange shyness came over me, and I awaited my host's entrance with feelings akin to the trepidation of an office-seeker.

The door opened to admit a handsome, noble-looking man, about 33 years of age, who advanced and held out his hand with a pleasant smile. His frank and cordial reception somewhat restored my equanimity, and I was beginning to regain my usual manner, when the countess entered and I at once relapsed into my former shyness. A truly beautiful woman! The count presented me and I floundered about trying to appear at ease, but in reality feeling very hot and uncomfortable. Perceiving my embarrassment, and with true tact and good breeding the count and countess conversed between themselves, treating me as they would an old acquaintance.

As my eye wandered around the room it fell upon a picture hanging opposite me. It was not the painting itself—a Swiss landscape, I think—that arrested my attention, but two small round bullet holes which pierced the picture, one immediately above the other.

"Humph! That was a wonderful shot,' I could not help remarking.

"Yes, indeed," said the count. "And you, are you a good shot?"

"Middling; with a pistol I am used to I can hit a card at thirty paces."

"Pretty good," said the countess; then turning to her husband: "Could you do as well?"

"I doubt it," he answered. "I used to be a good shot, but have not tried my hand for over four years."

"In that case, I'll wager you could not even hit a card at twenty paces. Without constant practice, one loses all dexterity. The best shot I ever knew split three bullets on the edge of a knife every day before dinner—but the practice was as great a necessity to him as the meal. Why, if there was a fly on the wall—you smile, countess, but I swear 'tis true—he call to his servant, 'Cousma, a pistol!'—and bang! scarcely taking aim, there was the fly flattened out on the wall."

"Wonderful!" ejaculated the count. "And what was your friend's name!"

"Sylvio."

"You knew Sylvio?" exclaimed the count, excitedly starting up. "You knew Sylvio!"

"I more than knew him—we were friends. In the regiment he was considered one of us. I have not heard of him for five years; but to judge from your exclamation, count, you also knew him?"

"Right well. If you were his friend, he must have told you a somewhat singular story—"

"About a [illegible]

memento of our last interview."

"Oh, dearest," pleaded the countess, "do not tell that story. I cannot bear it."

"I must. This gentleman knows how I insulted his friend. Let him now hear how that friend was revenged. I was married," he proceeded, "five years ago. The first month of our honeymoon was spent here. This house holds the happiest and saddest memories of my life. One evening, returning late from a ride, I found before the door a traveling chaise, and was told that a stranger, who refused to give his name, was awaiting me in my study, having come on business relative to myself alone. I entered, and saw a tall, bearded man, dusty and travel-stained, leaning on the mantlepiece. I stood for a moment gazing at him.

"'You do not know me, count?' he asked.

"'Sylvio!' I exclaimed, and confess that my hair stood on end.

"'It is my turn to shoot' he said, 'are you ready?'

"There was a pistol in his belt. I bowed in recognition of his right, and stood fronting him, only requesting him to shoot at once, before my wife came in.

"'I cannot see clearly,' he said, 'send for lights.'

"This was done, and I returned to my place, again asking him to be quick. He took aim, and I counted the seconds. My thoughts dwelt on my bride; it was a frightful moment. He dropped his hand and remarked:

"'Pity this pistol is charged with a bullet in lieu of a cherry.' Then after a moment's pause, which seemed a century; 'Truly, I am not in the habit of shooting at a defenseless man; that would be more like a murder than a duel. We will draw lots again, and see who is to shoot first.'

"I think at first I refused, but remember finally loading my pistol. We wrote our names on slips of paper, and drew from the very cap my ball had pierced in our first duel. Fortune favored me again.

"'You are very fortunate, count,' said Sylvio, with a smile I shall never forget. I know not how it happened, but my ball struck that picture. Sylvio raised his hand again and took aim. The expression on his face told me I had no mercy to expect. At this moment the door opened, Maria rushed in, and with a cry of horror put her arms around my neck. Her entrance restored my equanimity. Laughing gayly: 'You foolish girl, I said, 'why are you so frightened? Do you not see it is a joke—a wager? Come now, go and drink a grass of water, and come back to be introduced to my old friend. But she did not believe me.

"'In heaven's name, sir, she said, turning to Sylvio, 'is this true? Is is only a wager—a joke.'"

"'Of course,'—answered he, 'it is only a joke. The count likes to joke. He once, in joke, struck me a blow; again, in joke, he put a bullet through this cap; and now, of course in joke, he missed killing me for the second time. It is now my turn to joke,' and Sylvio leveled the pistol at my breast.

"Maria understood, and cast herself at his feet.

"Oh, for shame! I cried; then turn-to Sylvio: 'Come, sir, enough of this. Will you shoot—yes or no?'

"'No,' he returned, I am satisfied. Twice have I made you shoot at me, and twice have you missed. I have seen your fear, your anguish, your terror. Remember, I leave you to your conscience.'

"He turned toward the door to leave, but wheeling suddenly, almost without an instant's aim, fired and went out. To mark his skill he had put a ball through that picture immediately above mine.

"My wife had fainted. Sylvio passed out unmolested, the servant who saw him go not daring to interfere. He was off before I had recovered my surprise."

The count ceased to speak.

I had just heard the end of a story, in the beginning of which I had been so deeply interested.

The count had never seen Sylvio again. Later, in 1820, when Alexander Ipsilanti gave the signal for the uprising in Greece, it was surmised that Sylvio was in command of a Greek regiment, and met his death in the battle of Drazachan.—[Translated for The Argonaunt from the Russian of Pushkin.

She Danced.

Al Sproule, one of Chicago's prettiest and sweetest traveling men, was up in Michigan not long ago and was caught over night in a very little town. There was a dance on for that evening, and Al concluded that he would accept an invitation and swing the country lassies for awhile. He went to the dance and danced with every girl there except one scrawny one, who had sat all the evening in the corner waiting for a partner. Al took pity on her at last, and putting on his most angelic smile he shassayed up to her.

Ah, mum, he said, do you dance, Miss?

Yes sir, she replied quickly.

Yes? May I have the pleasure of dancing with you in the next set?

You bet you kin, young feller, for I've sot and sot, till I've about tuck root.

Al did the graceful in great shape and the girl stuck to him the balance of the evening.—[Merchant Traveler.

MARK TWAIN AS A PRINTER.

The Printer of To-day and He of Thirty-five Years Ago.

Mark Twain was one of the after dinner speakers at the banquet at Delmonico's, New York, of the Typothetæ association, a club of wealthy printers and publishers. His text was, "The Compositor." This is what he said:

"The chairman's historical reminiscences of Gutenberg have caused me to fall into reminiscences, for I myself am something of an antiquity. [Laughter.] All things change in the procession of years, and it may be that I am among strangers. It may be that the printer of to-day is not the printer of thirty-five years ago. I was no stranger to him. I knew him well. I built the fire for him in the winter's morning; I brought his water from the village pump; I swept out his office; I picked up his type from under his stand; and if he was there to see, I put the good type in his case and the broken ones among the 'hellmatter;' and if he wasn't there to see, I dumped all with the 'pi' on the imposing stone—for that was the furtive fashion of the cub, and I was a cub. I wetted down the paper Saturdays, I turned it Sundays—for this was a country weekly; I rolled, I washed the rollers, I washed the forms, I folded the papers, I carried them around in the disagreeable dawn Thursday mornings. The carrier was then an object of interest to all the dogs in town. If I had saved up all the bites I ever received, I could keep M. Pasteur busy for a year. I enveloped the papers that were for the mail—we had 100 town subscribers and 350 country ones; the town subscribers paid in groceries and the country ones in cabbage and cord-wood—when they paid at all, which was merely sometimes, and then we always stated the fact in the paper, and then gave them a puff; and if we forgot it they stopped the paper. Every man on the town list helped edit the thing; that is, he gave orders as to how it was to be edited; dictated its opinions, marked out its course for it, and every time the boss failed to connect, he stopped his paper. We were just infested with critics, and we tried to satisfiy them all over. We had one subscriber who paid cash, and he was more trouble to us than all the rest. He bought us once a year, body and soul, for $2. He used to modify our politics every which way, and he made us change our religion four times in five years. If we ever tried to reason with him, he would threaten to stop his paper, and, of course that meant bankruptcy and destruction. That man used to write articles a column and a half long, leaded long primer, and sign them 'Junius' or 'Veritas' or 'Voxpopuli,' or some other high sounding rot, and, then after it was set up, he would come in and say he had changed his mind—which was a gilded figure of speech, because he hadn't any—and order it to be left out. We couldn't stand such a waste as that. Well, we did have one or two kinds of 'bogus.' Whenever there was a barbecue, or a circus, or a baptizing, we knocked off for half a day; and then, to make up for short matter, we would 'turn over ads.'—turn over the whole page and duplicate it. The other bogus was deep, philosophical stuff, which we judged nobody ever read; so we kept a galley of it standing, and kept on slapping the same old batches of it in, every now and then, 'till it got dangerous. Also, in the early days of the telegraph, we used to economise on news. We picked out the items that were pointless and barren of information, and stood them on a galley, and changed the dates and localities, and used them over and over again 'till the public interest in them was worn to the bone. We marked the ads., but we seldom paid any attention to the marks afterward; so the life of a 'td' ad, and a 'tf' ad, was equally eternal. I have seen a 'td' notice of a sheriff's sale still booming serenely alone two years after the sale was over, the sheriff dead, and the whole circumstance become ancient history. Most of the yearly ads. were patent medicine stereotypes and we used to fence with them. Life was easy with us; if we pied a form we suspended till next week, and we always suspended every now and then when the fishing was good, and explained it by the illness of the editor, a paltry excuse because that kind of a paper was just as well off with a sick editor as a well one, and better off with a dead one than with either of them. He was full of blessed egotism and placid self-importance, but he didn't know as much as a 3-m quad. He never set any type except in the rush of the last day, and then he would smouch all the poetry, and leave the rest to 'jeff' for the solid takes. He wrote on with impressive flatulence and soaring confidence upon the vastest subjects; but puffing alms gifts of wedding cake, salty ice cream, abnormal watermelons, and sweet potatoes the size of your leg was his best hold. He was always a poet—a kind of poet of the Carrier's Address breed—and whenever his intellect suppurated, and he read the result to the printers and asked for their opinion, they were very frank and straightforward about about it. They generally scraped their rules on the boxes all the time he was reading, and called it 'hog wash' when he was through. All this was thirty-five years ago, when the man who could set 700 an hour could put on just as many airs as he wanted to; and if those New York men, who recently, on a wager set 2,000 an hour solid minion for four hours on a stretch had appeared in that office they would have been received as so[illegible] [illegible] of the extremely hospitable, and dispatched with the hospitable boss till the [illegible] was bankrupt.

"I [illegible] symbols that marked the establishment of that kind in Mississippi valley; and I can see also the tramping 'jour' who flitted by in the summer and tarried a day, with his wallet stuffed with one shirt and a hatful of handbills; for if he couldn't get any type to set he would do a temperance lecture. His way of life was simple, his needs not complex; all he wanted was plate and bed and money enough to get drunk on and he was satisfied. But it may be, as I have said, that I am among strangers, and sing the glories of a forgotten age to unfamiliar ears, so I will 'make even and stop.

THE PROPER THING.

Pale bronze is a popular color in spring goods.

Skirts of evening dresses are made clinging in front.

Short mantles will continue to be worn for dress wraps.

Tan color will be the favorite for spring and summer.

Dressy jackets are of smooth cloth and are elaborately braided.

White undressed kid gloves are again worn with evening dress.

The fancy for black hosiery will prevail during the coming season.

Big and little bonnets will both be fashionably worn this spring.

Entire mantles are made of jetted grenadine lined with any color.

Light tan-colored jackets will be worn with dresses of almost any color.

Soft crowns of mull with double frills are worn by ladies past middle age.

Rough cloths are used for plain jackets and these are usually of two colors well blended.

The newest jackets and newmarkets have the sleeves larger below the elbow than formerly.

Long cloaks of twilled cloth with straight fronts and close back will be worn by elderly ladies.

There is a tendency to lengthen jackets for the spring and summer, and to make them of even length all around.

Among the new shades of color are some very beautiful pale rose tints for evening wear under transparent materials.

Dresses worn by elderly ladies have round basques and long draperies and are made of soft cashmere and camel's hair.

The Song of the Decanter.

There was an old decanter, and its mouth was gaping wide; and the rosy wine had ebbed away and left its crystal side and the wind, went humming
h u m m i n g,
up and down the sides it flew and through the r e e d-l i k e hollow neck
the wildest notes it blew. I placed it in the window, where the blast was blowing free, and fancied that its pale mouth sang the queerest strains to me "They tell me—puny conquerors
—the Plague has slain his ten, and War his hundred thousands of the very best of men; but I"—'twas thus the bottle spoke— "but I have conpuered more than all your famous conquerors, so feared and famed of yore
Then come ye youths and maidens come drink from out my cup, the beverage that dulls the brain and burns the spirit up; that puts to shame the conquerors that slay their scores below; for this has deluged millions with the lava tide of woe,
Though in the path of battle, darkest waves of blood may roll; yet while I killed the body, I have damned the very soul. The cholera, the sword such ruin never wrought as I in mirth or malice on the innocent have brought. And still I breathe upon them and they shrink before my breath, and year by year by thousands tread
THE FEARFUL ROAD TO DEATH."

THEY ARE LIABLE!

The doctors are all liable to be mistaken. They were in my case. It cost me $200.00, because they said I had the Heart disease, and then told me I must die. Grandmother said it was Liver complaint, and $2.00 worth of Sulphur Bitters cured me.—Jennie Poor, Rockport, Mass.

Rheumatism

It is an established fact that Hood's Sarsaparilla has proven an invaluable remedy in many severe cases of rheumatism, effecting remarkable cures by its powerful action in correcting the acidity of the blood, which is the cause of the disease, and purifying and enriching the vital fluid.

It is certainly fair to assume that what Hood's Sarsaparilla has done for others it will do for you. Therefore, if you suffer the pains and aches of rheumatism, give this potent remedy a fair trial.

A Positive Cure.

"I was troubled very much with rheumatism in my hips, ankles, and wrists. I could hardly walk, and was confined to my bed a good deal of the time. Being recommended to try Hood's Sarsaparilla, I took four bottles and am perfectly well. I cheerfully recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla as one of the best blood purifiers in the world." W. F. WOOD, Bloomington, Ill.

For Twenty Years

I have been afflicted with rheumatism. Before 1883 I found no relief, but grew worse. I then began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, and it did me more good than all the other medicine I ever had." H. T. BALCOM, Shirley, Mass.

"I suffered from what the doctors called muscular rheumatism. I took Hood's Sarsaparilla and am entirely cured." J. V. A. PROUDFOOT, letter carrier, Chicago, Ill.

WE are under obligations to Hon. Geo. B. Sloan, Senator 21st Dist., N. Y., for the annual Report of the Treasurer of the State of New York for the fiscal year ending Sept. 30, '85.

The receipts were as follows:

General Fund $8,208,680.24; Common School Fund, $328,854.16; College Land Script Fund $19,488.02; Literature Fund, $46,180.02; Military Record Fund, 2,841.-27; U. S. Deposit Fund, $304,120.87; Free School Fund, $3,185,429.25; Canal Fund, $3,145,066.06; Total Receipts, $15,287,-583.39. The total payments which amounted to $15,829,124.97 are recapitulated as follows: General Fund, $8,899,-482.00: Common School Fund, $342,057.-42; Free School Fund, $3,028,903.21; Literature Fund, $44,249.74; U. S. Deposit Fund, $281,864.59; College Land Script Fund, $12,000.00; Military Fund, $642.45; Canal Fund, $3,220,425.56. The balance in the Treasury Jan. 1, '86 as submitted by ex-Treasurer R. A. Maxwell was $996,188.08.

Under the contributions from Gaslight companies Fulton is credited with $1.01.

In the Free School Fund Oswego Co. is credited with $22,286.07 the amount received from school taxes.

The Oswego Normal School received from the state $37,980.00; Oswego Co. Agricultural Society $319.21; Oswego Co. on Free School Fund $46,874,71 on Common School Fund, $3,617.51.

Union School received an apportionment of $221.21 from the Literature Fund.

The statement in regard to the three States' prisons cannot but be read with interest. The Report gives it as follows, Receipts, Sing Sing, $246,284.60; Auburn $166,542.84; Clinton, $93,866.27. Payment for maintenance, repairs, &c., Sing Sing, $188,601.74; Auburn, $370,-245.55; Clinton $428,381.68.

IT is to be hoped that the letter said to have been written by Mrs. Elizabeth Stanton to Miss Rose Cleveland, sister of the President, protesting against the extreme to which decolette dresses is carried, especially by ladies in Washington society, and the latter's answer to the same, will have a tendency to bring about a much needed reform. This correspondence has been made public and will possibly produce a wholesome effect. The excess to which low necked dresses and partially denuding costumes has been carried during the past few seasons by many of society's devotees is not only injurious to the party wearing them, but is considered by nine tenths of the American people of common sense and refinement as revolting and vulgar.

Why the "Royal" is the Best.

The improved method by which it has been made possible to produce pure cream of tartar, has had an important bearing upon the manufacturing of baking powder. by the process heretofore generally employed, it has been found impossible to remove all impurities, more particularly the tartrate of lime, which remained to such an extent as to greatly impair the quality of the cream of tartar, and to interfere seriously with the strength and wholesomeness of the baking powders into which it entered.

In the new process, which is owned by the Royal Baking Powder Company of New York, and exclusively employed in its extensive tartar works, the imported crude gray acid is so treated as to remove all vestige of tartrate of lime or other impurities, giving a product before unknown—a chemically pure cream of tartar.

By the employment of these superior facilities, the Royal Baking Powder Company has made the Royal Baking Powder, as the chemists all certify, of the highest possible degree of strength, "absolutely pure" and wholesome, and with an always uniform leavening power. It is for these reasons that the "Royal" never fails to produce bread, biscuit, cakes, etc., that are light, sweet, digestible, and wholesome; the eating of which is never followed by indigestion, or any of those physical discomforts attendant upon the partaking of improperly prepared food. In rendering possible the production of a baking powder possessed of of these qualifications, the improved method of refining cream of tartar becomes at once a matter of material importance to the culinary world.

Justice Stanley Matthews of the United States Supreme Court, will deliver the annual address before the Law department of the Michigan University June 13.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

[From our Regular Correspondent.]

WASHINGTON, March 19th, 1886.

Within a week Congress has had two opportunities to suppress a custom that has been criticised by the whole country.

I refer to the custom of junketing funeral excursions whenever a Senator or Representative happens to die. It is one against which public sentiment has long manifested itself. Yet the junketing goes on. It is estimated that the expense of transporting the remains of Senator Miller to California by special train and sending with it a Congressional committee which will return in the same way, will be $20,000. The expense of the funeral train and committee that have gone with the deceased Rep. Hahn to New Orleans, will cost at least half that amount.

One member of Congress has had the courage to declare himself against this senseless way of spending the people's money. It was Mr. Oates, a one armed Democrat from Alabama. He offered a resolution to amend the House rules so as to prohibit the appointment of funeral committees to accompany the dead bodies of members beyond the limits of Washington City. If it should be adopted, then the proposed plan of confining the delivery of eulogies over deceased members to special Sunday sessions would be next in order.

It is carrying the matter further than either duty or good taste demands to lay aside the nation's business for a whole day when a member's death is announced and for another whole day to honor his memory with panegyric oratory. No patriotic member of either House of Congress would wish to have his demise stop public business or desire a junketing exhibition to celebrate it.

Death has been busy in the Forty Ninth Congress, having taken already two Republican and two Democratic members from the lower House, and from the Senate, one Republican Senator and a Democratic Vice President. The sudden death of ex-Governor Hahn of Louisiana, a prominent Republican Congressman from that State, was ascribed to the bursting of a blood vessel from violent coughing. In his private parlor at Willard's hotel, he was found outstretched on the floor, lifeless, attired in his night robe, and covered with blood.

Among other changes proposed in Congress is one substituting the thirteenth of April for inauguration day in place of the fourth of March. It is held that the latter day, which was selected by the continental Congress for the installation of the new government, now causes public inconvenience by curtailing and limiting the second session of every Congress. The first President was inaugurated on the thirteenth of April and it is proposed that the one hundredth anniversary of the inauguration of George Washington be commemorated by the inauguration of his successor in 1889 upon the same day, and that this shall be the day hereafter for the beginning of successive administrations.

Interest in the Senate debate on the "papers" question had flagged this week until a sharp tilt occurred between Senators Beck of Kentucky and Edmunds of Vermont which gave new life to it.

Mr. Edmunds accused Mr. Beck of betraying Senate secrets by alluding to the Duskin case in open session, and a question of honor was finally raised between these two Senators. Even the Washington idlers had begun to consider the debate a bore, and the Senate galleries were comparatively empty on Tuesday when Senator Cullom took the floor to reinforce Mr. Edmunds. The Illinois Senator read his speech from beginning to end, and received but little interested attention. No new points were brought out, the line of argument followed being that hitherto presented by Mr. Edmunds. Senator Maxey of Texas who followed on the Democratic side held that the object of the present fight was to keep Republican office holders in possession of their places, even against the will of the Administration and of the people who put the Administration in power.

The President affords but little material for gossip in his ceaseless application to his duties. He continues to find time, however, to come down into the East room for a few minutes three times a week and shake hands with the people who have gathered there for this purpose. Among the cards left at the White House to-day was the following: "J. T. Newman, I have been voting for Democratic Presidents for forty-eight years. I would like to see one before I die." He was accorded a special interview.

The President continues to dine Congress in sections. Last evening forty-one Senators were invited. They were seated at table in the alternate order of Democrat and Republican. The State parlors were brilliantly lighted, but there were no flowers, no music, and no women.

THOUSANDS SAY SO.

Mr. T. W. Atkins, Girard, Kan., writes: "I never hesitate to recommend your Electric Bitters to my customers, they give entire satisfaction and are rapid sellers." Electric Bitters are the purest and best medicine known and will positively cure liver and kidney complaints. Purify the blood and regulate the bowels. No family can afford to be with out them. They will save hundreds of dollars in doctor's bills every year. Sold at fifty cents a bottle by R. E. Phillips.

There are many things pertaining to village matters that might be mentioned which would be of interest to taxpayers, of one of which much has been said the past year, namely, water works. For aught I know the works are giving satisfaction, those using the water speak highly of it; as for fire purposes thus far it has been a success and I trust it will be in the future. The Board of Trustees have made a contract with the Water Works Co. for one year for water for fire purposes only, and that was ordered by a vote of taxpayers, so you see the wishes of the people have been carried out; no money to be paid in advance but there will be a payment due in six months from Jan. 1st, 1886, and if at that time the Water Works Co. have failed to fulfill the contract to the very letter, do not pay them: if at the end of one year they have fulfilled the contract my views would be to let the taxpayers by a vote say how they want contract made for the future.

We have had a new railroad enter the village, and when all completed, crossings etc. fixed up as agreed upon, I think it will be a good thing for all. I do not think it wise to cramp the fire department this year but they should curtail expenses as much as possible and any money not actually needed let apply on next year; I mean save expense and give the water works a good chance to do all the work. The fire department should make some changes, such as forming hose companies, and locating them in different parts of the village; for instance, one south of Broadway, and near No. 3 School House and one remaining at the Engine House; then, in case of fire in any part of the village we could have water from the hydrants in a very few seconds.

There has been some talk of a street railway in the village, [illegible]

[illegible] our streets [illegible] could be done [illegible] here that by the terms of the contract with the Water Works Co. they are bound to keep the streets directly over their pipes in good order all the time or, in other words, any defects in streets caused from laying of any water pipes must be put in order at once.

I have recommended money to clean out Water House creek and I think the whole village is interested in this as the sand and dirt from our streets tend largely to fill it up, and if for no other reason than for sanitary purposes it should be kept open.

I have recommended $500 permanent improvement of highways and would think it wise in your next Board of Trustees to draw upon this fund for money enough to put in iron girders across the race on First street, near the plaster mill; it would be a good investment I think.

It being so late in the fall before the water works were completed the Trustees did not think it best to put in the drinking fountains before spring. I desire to give the Board credit for fixing up the matter of widening Cayuga street, between Fifth and Sixth streets which has been underway so many years. It has been satisfactorily arranged.

The Board of Trustees have been very prompt in attendance at their meetings and whenever called upon to act in any capacity pertaining to village matters. I can assure you they have been called upon very often; what with water works, building iron bridge, railroad etc. they have been the busiest Board of Trustees I have ever known in Fulton. I thank every member of the Board for the many favors shown me the past year.

WM. WAUGH,
President.

Board of Trustees' Proceedings.

FULTON, N. Y., Mar. 17, 1886.

Board met persuant to adjournment.

Present, President Waugh and Trustees Bradford, Chase, Gage, Hulett and Johnson.

Minutes of last meeting were read and approved.

Mr. Gage reported that all the Trustees except Mr. Kendrick had met with Mr. Britton, manager of the R. W. & O. R. R. to consider the matter of extending the track of the Fulton Oswego R. R. Co. across Broadway—and all agreed that the petition should be granted.

On motion of Mr. Bradford the following resolutions were adopted.

Resolved, That the Fulton & Oswego R. R. Co. be and are hereby permitted to make, grade and lay the track of its Rail Road and operate the same within the village of Fulton, from the south side of Broadway along on Second-st., across Broadway and far enough to make a suitable and proper switch connection with the track of the N. Y. O. & W. Railroad Co. and the conditions of such permission being

First, That the Fulton & Oswego Rail Road Company shall make and maintain the crossing at the intersection of its track with said Broadway and the approaches thereto, shall construct and maintain all sluices and ditches necessary for the passage of water and the protection of the said Broadway intersected as aforesaid at the place of such intersection, and made necessary by the construction of said road, and shall at all times fully and faithfully perform all requirements of the Board of Trustees of the Village of Fulton, relating to obligations hereinbefore set forth.

Second, That nothing in the foregoing grant of permission to said Fulton & Oswego Rail Road Company shall be deemed in any manner to interfere or effect claims for damage of any person or corporation by the reason of the laying of said track as hereinbefore permitted, or the operation and maintenance of said Rail Road.

The following bills were reported from the Finance Committee and on motion of Mr. Johnson the same were audited at the amounts claimed, viz:

A. W. Stoneburgh, jail key,	$ 1.50
Arvin Rice, services	35.00
D. C. Baker, repairing tools, etc.	5.61
J. S. Palmer,	5.45
G. G. Althouse, janitor,	2.50
Lester & Worden, painting scrapers,	12.00
S. S. Cook, pounder for streets,	1.00
	$63.06

On motion of Mr. Johnson it was resolved that when this Board adjourn it adjourn to meet tomorrow at 8:30 a. m., at the corner of Second and Broadway.

The President presented his Annual Report, as required by the Village Charter.

Mr. D. C. Baker appeared before the Board and made a statement regarding injury to his building by parties constructing sewer on Rochester street.

On motion of Mr. Gage the Board adjourned.

ARVIN RICE, Clerk.

March 18, 1886.

Board met at the corner of Second-st. and Broadway pursuant to adjournment

Present, the full Board except Trustee Kendrick.

After examining the walk across Broadway on the west side of Second street, and the sidewalks adjacent, Mr. Johnson offered the following resolutions, which were adopted.

Resolved, That the grade of the cross-walk on Broadway on the west side of Second-st. be and the same is hereby fixed as follows: Beginning in the Centre of said Broadway at the present grade of said walk, and extending north on a grade to the south line of the sidewalk on the north side of said Broadway, at which point the said cross walk shall be eleven inches higher than the present sidewalk now is; and from the center of said Broadway south on a grade to meet the walk now being constructed by the R. R. Company at the south line of said Broadway.

Resolved: That the grade of the sidewalk on the west side of Second-st from the cross-walk across Broadway north along premises occupied by H. J Case and Mrs. Milo Lawrence be and the same is hereby fixed as follows: Beginning at a point 81 feet north from the north line of Broadway at the present grade and extending south on a grade to meet the end of the cross-walk across Broadway, being at such point of meeting eleven inches higher than the sidewalk now is.

The Clerk reported that at the request of individual members of the Board he had prepared a bill to provide a system of sewerage for the Village of Fulton. That the bill had been introduced in the Assembly and committed to the Committee on Affairs of Villages, and that printed copies of the same have been sent here for examination.

On motion of Mr. Bradford the Board adjourned to March 20th, 1886, at 7 o'clock p. m. at the office of the Clerk, at which time the provisions of said Sewerage Bill will be considered by the Board.

ARVIN RICE, Clerk.

A CHAT WITH THOSE WHO READ NEW YORK NEWSPAPERS. AND OTHERS WHO DON'T READ ANY.—The newspaper is becoming more and more a necessity to intelligent men and women, and residents of Central and Northern New York will find upon trial that the

UTICA MORNING HERALD
AND

meet their wants as no other newspapers can succeed in doing. The UTICA MORNING HERALD since its recent enlargement, is able by means of its special wire connection with the Associated press to publish every morning the telegraphic news of the world in larger quantity, and of a later date than any New York newspaper, owing to the fact that the latter are compelled to go to press about two hours earlier than the HERALD. Containing all the general news, with complete market reports, the UTICA HERALD also supplies, with minuteness that permits no rivalry, the local news of all Central and Northern New York, carefully gleaned by an army of special correspondents. Thus it does for its patrons what no New York paper can do, supplies a general and local newspaper in one. More than that, it presents in each issue a wealth of reading matter of the choicest and freshest description, culled from every source; and so answers for a dozen newspapers and one or two magazines thrown in.

The same characteristics distinguish the UTICA WEEKLY HERALD, so long the favorite family journal of the rich agricultural section through which it continues to enjoy an unrivaled circulation. Its ten generous pages overflow with news, local and general, the latest markets, an admirably equipped agricultural department, and miscellany to enliven the long winter evenings. It is a healthy newspaper, that can be admitted into every family and read with genuine profit, in this respect differing widely from the flash publications that are offered in the guise of weekly newspapers, containing sensational and demoralizing reading which is poison to the young.

If you don't know this from actual experience, subscribe for the daily or weekly UTICA HERALD for a month, and you will be convinced. The Herald keeps its old friends, and welcomes new ones. A sample copy of either issue will be sent to any address, on receipt of a postal card asking it. The UTICA MORNING HERALD costs 67 cents a month, $2.90 for three months, or $8 a year.

The UTICA WEEKLY HERALD is $1.50 a year. Postage free in the United States. Address

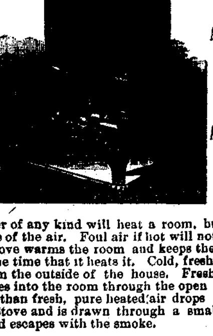
—THE—
Howe Ventilating Stove.



A NEW STOVE.
ON A NEW PRINCIPLE.
A HANDSOME STOVE.
AN EXCELLENT HEATER.
AN ECONOMICAL STOVE.
A PERFECT VENTILATOR.

☞ A good Base Burner of any kind will heat a room, but it also destroys and burns up the life principle of the air. Foul air if hot will not keep a person warm. The Howe Ventilating Stove warms the room and keeps the air pure. It Ventilates the room at the same time that it heats it. Cold, fresh air is taken into the Stove through a pipe from the outside of the house. Fresh air passes into the Stove, is heated and passes into the room through the open top, while the foul, impure air being heavier than fresh, pure heated air drops dead to the floor, is forced into a flue in the Stove and is drawn through a small pipe in the smok pipe into the chimney and escapes with the smoke.

Farmers, mechanics and workingmen are very apt to be governed more by the price than other more important points in selecting their clothing. It is a mistake usually. A poor suit of clothes is expensive at any price. The best is always the cheapest, though not necessarily the highest priced. The "T, C. & Co." clothing is made for service. It fits perfectly, is custom finished, and costs no more than the "baggy" stuff [illegible]

The people of [illegible] over the [illegible] Railroad scandal of the common council. The climax has been reached and one of the guilty Aldermen has confessed. I refer to Alderman Jaehne of whom I wrote last week. Much credit is due to Inspector Byrnes for the way in which the case has been managed. The Inspector gained the confidence of this Alderman, and after nearly two years of patient effort has brought him to justice. Last week he was arrested on a charge of receiving $20,000 for his vote on the Broadway franchise. Bail was given in $15000, but on Sunday the bondsman had reason to believe that Jaehne meant to take "French leave," so he surrendered him to the District Attorney and now this Alderman lies in a prison cell.

The scenes now at the Senate committee are worthy of notice. Before the developments of the last week, the Aldermen have had smiling faces and have pooh-poohed at the idea of their taking a bribe, but now they cling together with sullen faces and scowling brows. Long, deep lines begin to appear on their faces which betoken anxiety for their safety.

Here is a problem for your readers. Given a man, receiving a salary of $3 per day, elected to the Common Council at an expense of $3,500 to $5,000, receiving a salary of $2,000 during his one year of service, how does he honestly become worth at the end of that term from $40,000 to $200,000? That is an exact state of affairs here. Well may a recent editorial put it, "It is time for private duty to cease to be a virtue among men of opulence and wealth." I was talking with a prominent gentleman in this city recently. He is one of the "has beens" so to speak. His knowledge of this city for the last 30 years is intimate. We were remarking on the investigation and he told me of a friend of his who had been an Alderman some years ago. This Alderman told my friend that before he was in office, he considered himself a pure minded merchant, but that during his term of office there had been suggested to his mind more corruption and official impurities than he thought mortal man was capable of, so much so that he could not safely say whether he was the man morally he was before his serving in the office.

While I am speaking of this matter, let me give you a specimen of what kind of men are elected. A certain Alderman was asked if he was going to run for the office again, "It is just as Johnnie says" was the reply. Now Johnnie is one of the many ward bosses who parcel out these things to the men who best serve his interest.

There's Senator Reilly, a member of the Investigating Committee of the Senate. He is not more than thirty but has the confidence of the bosses on the east side and the bosses have the tenement house population under their control, hence whoever they select go in.

The Liberty Statue is inviting attention again. Gen. Stone, who has the matter in charge, wants $20,000 now. 40 courses of the 46 required to build the pedestal are completed, and when these last six are laid, the good lady will be put together.

The proper thing in society is, among other things, to have your carriage "English you know," that is obtain a tall coachman and a little footman. The greater the contrast in height, the higher toned. A few years ago the opposite was the case. It would be a good plan to have a tall and a short man always on hand in the service of your family, and the dictates of society would be obeyed.

The death of Austin Flint, M. D., is a bad loss to medicine. Dr. Flint was an authority in medicine and his works are held in high repute by the profession. Like many others Dr. Flint was not a native of this city. He will be remembered as the originator of the Medical Polyclinic, a school for post-graduate study in specialties.

It is put down as true that Sherman will make his home in New York. Sherman is a strange man, yet there is no man with whom he is more scrupulously honest than with himself. His controversy with Gen. Fry was characteristic of him, and now to be his fellow townsman will bring about perhaps a personal encounter and let us hope reconciliation.

The mention of Sherman brings to mind the enormous sale of Grant's book. A little over a year ago the contract was signed by which Grant was to receive 70 cents per volume. With how much determination, and enduring, how much pain, Grant wrote the book nobody knows, but it is exceedingly gratifying that the first volume has already paid his widow $200,000. It is also very creditable to the family that already she has begun reimbursing those who lost by the rascality of Ward through their confidence in Grant.

Speaking of Ward, reminds me of the fact that the referee to whom was referred the question, Can Warner be made to pay his profits back to Receiver Davis? has made his report. Mr. Cole, the referee, argues the case at great length and answers the question in the affirmative. Warner was the friend of Ward. He put in a comparatively small sum of money and his so-called profits were more than one and one-half millions. This sum he must pay back. When this decision became known Warner left town and now his household goods in his Fifth Avenue mansion are in the sheriff's hands unfortunately, for the ends of justice will be defeated since most of his property is in the name of his wife.

The failure of the U. S. Courts to convict Warner & Work on an improperly drawn indictment under the administration. Dist. Atty. Dorsheimer will give the new Dist. Atty. a chance for praise should he succeed in convicting them. There is no reason why those who were guilty with Ward should go unpunished. Even our reform Mayor is placed in a very uncertain light.

The Pathfinder Canoe Club.

The club met at 7:30 p. m., Mar. 17th, and elected the following officers for the coming year:

J. M. Foster, Commodore; Justin J. Morrill, Vice Com; W. S. Royce, Sec. and Treas; H. L. Lake and M. M. Williams were elected members of the club. The Sec. and the Vice Com. were appointed a committee to obtain flags for the club, the flags are to be of blue bunting with a white diamond, and a blue letter "P" on the diamond. It was also decided that the flag should be increased in size to 12 x 18 inches, and of the same shape as heretofore. The meeting adjourned for one month.

A New Enterprise.

E. Hulett has established what has long been wanted in Fulton, a hack service for the public use. He has a fine turnout and will have a hack stand on First street, ready at a moment's notice for those who desire one. It is probable that arrangements will be made by which a hack can be called by telephone. The charges will be very moderate and after the public have become used to the service, a liberal patronage will be given. The advantages of having a hack nearly always within call for a long or short service, can be seen at a glance.

New Law Firm.

Giles S. Piper and Frederick D. VanWagenen have formed a copartnership and will hereafter do a general law business under the firm name of Piper & VanWagenen. The new time-table will be found in another column.

Prof. Amos Farnham, the retiring principal of Union school No. 2, was on Friday afternoon presented with a beautiful picture by the pupils and his associate teachers. The presentation was made by Homer Marsh with a few appropriate remarks. In the evening, to the great surprise and delight of the Professor, the teachers, twelve in number, visited him at his residence on Rochester street, where a most enjoyable evening was passed. At the close of his duties here Professor Farnham will move with his family to Hannibal where he will rest and endeavor to regain his health.

John C. O'Brien of the Opera House dry goods store, has purchased the lease and fixtures of the book store in the Lewis house block and will occupy it after April first. Mr. O'Brien has found his present quarters much to small for his increasing business, and when located in his new store will nearly double his already large stock. He is an enterprising business man and during his stay here has made many friends who will be pleased to learn of this evidence of his prosperity. The new store is one of the most desirable ones in town and Mr. O'Brien is to be congratulated upon securing it.

[illegible]

Since [illegible] charges have been circulated in Wall Street, respecting the [illegible] of Vice-President John [illegible] Kerr, and General E. F. Winslow and A. Marcus, Directors of the Company, the reports have received a most emphatic denial. It was stated that their resignations are owing to charges of mismanagement of the company's affairs and that these were brought to the attention of the public by Directors Price and Pearson, who represented the English stockholders, and that an investigation had already been instituted in respect to the matter.

General Winslow and Mr. Kerr pronounce the entire statement "a tissue of lies." It is true that Mr. Kerr, has resigned as Vice-President; but he still retains the position of counsel for the Company, while General Winslow, in consequence of most pressing duties as President of the St Louis and San Francisco Railroad Company, necessarily gave up the directorship; besides he had no longer any pecuniary interest in the Ontario and Western. The charges of mismanagement and corruption are entirely false, while the affairs of the company are in a most flattering condition as show by their financial statement published in January last and of which the Record made a most favorable comment at the time of its first appearance

Mr. Thomas P. Fowler, who is in all respects a most thoroughly efficient and capable man, continues to act as president, and Mr. Joseph Price, who represents the English stockholders is the Vice-President. The present Board of Directors are everything to be desired, being composed of experienced and competent men, and the prospects of the road were never in a better or more promising condition than at present.—[N. Y. Record.

The employes of the Oswego manufacturing Company have formed an association for the mutual benefit of its members. The following officers were elected at their first meeting. John F. Fuller, pres.. John VanVaulkenburg, vice pres., Chas. Ingalls, sec; G. A. Burtch, fin. sec.; J. F. Herrick, superintendent of the works, treasurer. Dues are 30 cents a month, benefits $4. a week for sick members, $50. in case of death. The membership will reach about 300.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Harriet Briggs, wife of William Briggs, of this village, died at her home on Utica street last Friday afternoon at 5 o'clock, at the age of 66 years. Mrs. Briggs has been a well and favorably known resident of this town for many years. She has long been connected with the M. E. Church and latterly with the F. M. Church. She leaves a husband, and three daughters, who, with a wide circle of relatives and friends, will mourn her loss. The funeral services will be held to-morrow afternoon at 2 o'clock from her late residence, Rev. Mr. Fulford officiating. The remains will be placed in the receiving vault at Mt. Adnah.

Burdette Miner, an old and well-known resident of this village died last Thursday at Mexico, aged about 60 years. The remains were brought to this village and will be buried in Mt. Adnah.

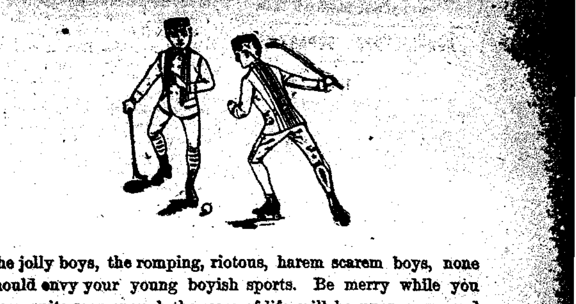
THE HAPPY BOYS!



The jolly boys, the romping, riotous, harem scarem boys, none should envy your young boyish sports. Be merry while you may, quite soon enough the cares of life will be upon you, and sad is the man who cannot look back to bright spots in his boyhood days, which line the sunbeams through the clouds of care and mayhaps of adversity, which have since dimmed the pathway of his life sad, but sadder yet the memory of the bastings he got for the trowsers torn and jackets rent and sighs to think of the advantages enjoyed by the boys of to-day, who can get clothing that neither rends nor rips out.

AGRICULTURAL DEPARTMENT.

Worth Knowing.

Winter dairying is more profitable than summer.

Brine put in the churn causes butter to rise and not run out in the buttermilk.

It has been ascertained that 8160 pounds of corn products, including grain, cobs and stalks, is equal in nutritive value to 9,612 pounds of hay.

Watch the pototatoes. If they are sprouting rub off the sprouts and reduce the temperature of the cellar as much as you safely can.

Chicken raising is more successfully carried on when the coops are placed in such a position that the young birds can with the opening of spring run on fresh, dry ground.

The supposition that a pig can endure as much cold as a horse or a cow is an error. In the morning they should have a warm mess, and a sprinkling of ashes or dirt over the floors will be found of assistance in absorbing moisture.

It is told of a kicking horse that he was cured by suspending a sack behind him filled with hay. At first his kicking was somewhat terrible, but he subsided entirely when the hay returned toward his heels every time.

Here are two good ways which are in vogue in England of preserving eggs: Rub the eggs all over with clarified suet, or with a mixture of boiled olive oil and beeswax. Either way will preserve them.

Fifteen million horses are now owned in America, and more than one million a year must be bred to keep up the demand. The largest proportion of these are used for agriculture and heavy draft horses, and such horses bring from $175 to $240 each.

By going over the meadows with a finetooth harrow, using a heavy one, until the sod is torn to pieces, mixed grass seed may be sown and the meadow renewed. In each case a heavy coating of well rotted manure should be applied and the entire field rolled with a heavy roller.

It is asorted by shepherds that so acute is an ewe's sense of hearing that she can distinguish the crying of her own lamb among a thousand others, all bleating together; and the lamb is able to recognize its mother's voice, even though it be in the midst of a large flock.

A western man says he keeps the swine plague from attacking his hogs by the free use of copperas scattered all about the feeding place and allowing them to eat all they want. Copperas is a good disinfectant, and as an astringent and a tonic. It is the sulphrate of iron, and iron is a common tonic.

Manure should be put around rhubarb roots and small fruits, and upon asparagus beds as soon as the ground thaws, if it was not done last fall. All of them will bear liberal manuring and will pay well for it. Prepare the hotbeds as early as possible. Every farmer should have one, in which to grow his supply of lettuce, cabbage and tomato plants.

The beet draws its nourishment from an area of twelve square feet for each plant. This has been proved by exploring to the ends of the roots carefully, it being found that three extend downward in all directions for several feet It is evident that where size of root is desired the plants must be given plenty of room.

The Country Gentleman says that the men in the market gardening business who are making money are those who are cultivating only as many acres as they can thoroughly manage, while the men who are failing are those who are trying to get a twenty-five acre crop from a five-acre application of manure and labor.

For early maturity the yearling Shorthorn steer Cleveland has the best record at the Chicago fat-stock shows yet made. He was slaughtered at 467 days old, with a gain per day of 2.60 pounds from birth; live weight, 1,105 pounds; dressed carcass, 849 pounds; per cent dressed of light, 70; weight weight of carcass, hide and tallow, 989 pounds weight of forequarters, 216 and 213 pounds, and hind quarters 210 pounds each.

An Illinois farmer was prosecuted for cutting off the horns of his cattle. Eminent doctors testified that it was a cruel, barbarous and unnecessary practice. On the other hand, one farmer said he had dehorned thousands of cattle, and, except for the momentary pain, which was slight, they did not suffer from the effects of the operation. Dehorned cattle consumed at least one-fourth less food than those whose horns were left on the head, more of them could be crowded into a shed, and the strong could not drive the weak from the food. A score of local farmers swore that they had been converted to dehorning, and believed it humane and advisable. The Humane Society withdrew the suit.

A Queer Hog Disease.

A most peculiar disease, which baffles the skill of the veterinarians not only to diagnose but to treat, has prevailed among the swine of Tamaqua, Pa., for some time. Recently the last of a fine lot of hogs owned by J. P. Knight, of Beard's Hotel, died, the disease having been prevalent among them for the last four months. In all cases it has proved fatal. The strange disease first shows itself in an eruption which appears back of the ears and on the neck and which slowly spreads itself over the entire surface of the body. Loss of appetite follows the appearance of the eruption and the swine droop and seem dazed and half asleep. In most cases the eruption [illegible] month or more in spreading over the body and the skin becomes hard and [illegible], losing its elasticity and becoming [illegible]. There is more or less fever [illegible] the progress of the disease and [illegible] is marked by the [illegible] of the body [illegible]

[illegible] ground. He [illegible] watermelon hills 12 x 12 [illegible] Then, between the hills [illegible] melons he planted, Feb. 22, [illegible] Adams' extra early corn, compost in hill. June 10th the crop of green corn for table use was exhausted. It began to be fit for use the last day of May.

The melon ground had been prepared with compost in hill. The seed he planted in three lots—the first one the last week in April, the next a week later and the third a week after the second. The melons were the Kolb jem watermelon. On two acres of ground Mr. Alexander raised 1,400 watermelons. He was convenient to market for his corn and vegetables.

At the first plowing of the melon vines he dropped between every two hills two or three seeds of the Conch pea. When the melon crop was all cleared out he dropped into the hills a couple of Conch peas. The vines of this pea are cured for hay in the south. Two wagon loads of hay were made. Some of the melons weighed over fifty pounds. After the pea vines were removed the land was seeded for a fourth time in Burt oats. The crops were all first class. The ground was a high, sandy loam, lying very level.

If any northern farmer can equal this, let him report.

Destroying Weeds.

All small, delicate crops which require hand weeding should be cleaned out at once as soon as they can be seen in the row. A delay of forty-eight hours will often double the work, and a week may entirely ruin the crop. The best time to destroy a weed is before it comes up, and the mere stirring of the surface for an inch as soon as the land is dry enough to work after a rain will kill nine-tenths of the weeds that have started. Make it a rule that a weed shall never go to seed on your garden. The average farmer's garden of one-fourth of an acre ripens enough weed seed to supply the entire farm, and it will take more than five years to get such a garden clean, but if clean cultivation is persevered in, the time will come when the labor of cultivating the garden will be reduced one-half. It is not difficult to keep a garden clear of weeds if all the crops are planted in rows running the length of the garden; those that mature at the same time should be put near together, and as soon as past use, removed, and the land thoroughly worked with the horse culivator and some other crop planted.

Common Sense in Housekeeping.

A girl cannot grow up in a well-ordered home, under the care of a good mother, without unconsciously learning much of the method by which the home is made what it is. A bright girl who is unfortunate enough to be a member of a badly managed household in not utterly out of the way of learning how to do better. The very fact of the discomfort in which she lives often stimulates her to find out the possible improvement of her condition. "How can I ever learn to keep house?" said a young girl one day, lamenting her peculiar circumstances which prevented her from gaining any practical knowledge or experience. "Common sense is all you need in housekeeping," replied the experienced and very successful housekeeper to whom the question was addressed. Common sense, supplemented by the best instruction attainable and by observation will make housekeeping a pleasure rather than a burden. But all the teaching in the world will not avail without the common sense. In these days of cooking schools and lectures and opportunities of all sorts, it is an easy matter to obtain instruction, yet a few months of actual trial in one's own home teaches far more. Times change and requirements change with them, people differ in tastes and opinions, and not even the wisest mother can tell what another household than her own will desire.—[Henrietta Davis, in Good Housekeeper.

SCROFULA

Usually develops in early life, and is a peculiar morbid condition of the system, usually affecting the glands, often resulting in swellings, enlarged joints, abscesses, thickening of the lips, enlarged neck, sore eyes. A scrofulous condition is often hereditary, but bad diet, too free use of fat meats, bad air, want of sunshine and nourishing food will induce it. Some people are troubled with scrofulous swelling of the glands, and with ulcers and kernels, which may cause very little pain; others may have inward scrofula, scrofula of the lungs, scrofula of the spleen, scrofula of the kidneys, and scrofula of the bones. BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS will drive away any case of scrofula and not to appear in another place, for their action on the blood and bowels will carry the disease entirely from the body.

Remember, Boys Make Men.

When you see a ragged urchin
Standing wistful in the street,
With torn hat and kneeless trowsers,
Dirty face and bare red feet,
Pass not by the child unheeding;
Smile upon him. Mark me, when
He's grown he'll not forget it;
For, remember, boys make men.

When the buoyant youthful spirits
Overflow in boyish freak,
Chide your child in gentle accents;
Do not in your anger speak.
You must sow in youthful bosoms
Seeds of tender mercies; then
Plants will grow and bear good fruitage,
When the erring boys are men.

Have you never seen a grandsire,
With his eyes aglow with joy,
Bring to mind some act of kindness—
Something said to him a boy?
Or relate some slight or coolness,
With a brow all clouded, when
He said they were to thoughtless
To remember boys make men.

Let us try to add some pleasures
To the life of every boy;
For each child needs tender interest
In its sorrows and its joys;
Call your boys home by its brightness;
They'll avoid a gloomy den,
And seek for comfort elsewhere—
And remember, boys make men.

The Answer.

Forgotten you! Well, if forgotten
Be thinking through all the long day
How the slow seconds drag since I left you—
Days seem years now that you are away.
If counting each moment with longing
For the one when I'll see you again—
If this be forgetting—you're right, dear,
And I have forgotten you, then!

Forgotten you! Well, if forgetting
Be reading each face that I see
With eyes that mark never a feature
But yours as you last looked at me!
Or hearing, through all the strange babble
Of voices, now grave and now gay,
Only your voice—can this be forgetting?
Yet I have forgotten, you say.

Forgotten you! Well, if forgetting
Be longing with all a full heart,
With a yearning half pain and half rapture,
For a time when we no more may part;
If the wild wish to see you, to hear you,
To be held in your arms once again—
If this be forgetting, you're right, dear,
And I am forgetting you, then!

Brother and Sister.

March is a boistrious fellow,
And, undeterred by fear,
With many pranks proclaims himself
The tomboy of the year.

Sweet April is his sister;
Her eyes are often dim.
Pained by the thought that he is dead,
She sheds her tears for him.

A REMINISCENCE OF CALIFORNIA.

[Written for The Times.]

IN the year 1853 I was employed as express messenger by an express and banking firm in Shasta City, Cal., by the name of Rhodes & Lusk, and twice a week rode from that city to Weaverville, a distance of forty miles, seven or eight of which laid through the Trinity mountains, which in that early day was infested with robbers and cut-throats, and the Trinity mountains, over which valuable expresses were frequently carried, offered inducements not to be overlooked to many of them as a good point at which to ply their trade. I had often approached their somber fastnesses with a pronounced rising tendency to my hair and forebodings of the most unpleasant character possible, but during the period in which I had that route no misfortune had overtaken me. Rhodes & Lusk provided their messengers with a small arsenal in the way of fire arms, two belt pistols and two immense holster pistols, but they had much the same influence upon their wearer that whistling has upon the small boy in the dark, they lulled one into a sense of comparative security and occasioned a most comfortable feeling in a time and place of safety, but were were far from giving so much satisfaction when the moment of peril arrived, as the knights of the road had an extremely disagreeable, not to say alarming custom, of drawing a pretty accurate bead on the unhappy wayfarer before he was made aware of their presence and under such circumstances it was considered quite indiscreet to be reaching around after one's pistols.

About September of the same year, Mr. Lusk, one of my employers, a most courteous and obliging gentleman, went east to Baldwinsville, N. Y., to accompany his wife and some other ladies out to California. My wife was in the vicinity of Fulton, and at my request Mr. Lusk saw her and made arrangements for her joining the party, which she did and all reached Shasta safe and happy about two months afterwards. My wife being now arrived, I thought I would resign my position as express messenger and return to my ranch, a very pleasant spot in the Bald Hills about twenty miles outside of Shasta City. Express riding was in no sense an agreeable business, but there was $125.00 per month pay attached to it and $5.00 per day allowed for expenses, which softened its many unpleasant features.

A few days after, I left and my position was filled by a young gentleman named Barstow. The next night he left Shasta for Weaverville and arrived all right with the gold coin that was sent over with which to buy gold dust to bring back. The following afternoon he started for Shasta with about [illegible]. It was the custom with [illegible] companies to let anyone [illegible] whom they knew to [illegible] know when they were about [illegible] express over the mountains, [illegible] of an attempt on the [illegible] to rob the express. [illegible] Shasta and Trinity counties by the name of Uncle Jimmy. Everybody who knew Uncle Jimmy and heard of his good luck in finding at last a good claim were very glad of it, as he had worked hard and long to accumulate a little money that would allow him to return to his native state in the East and pass the remainder of his days with his children and old friends without feeling that he was a burden upon them. Uncle Jimmy was not one of those miners who was always poor in consequence of spending his earnings in drinking, gambling and riotous living but had been hard up because he was unfortunate. Some men seemed to be continually pursed by a relentless streak of hard luck that never forsakes them and though they strive ever so earnestly are unsuccessful. Uncle Jimmy had been such a one and no amount of economy, sobriety and hard work had proved availing until he had at last by his presistency apparently outwinded the goddess of fortune and struck it rich in his claim near Weaverville. After months of industry and frugrality he had worked out his claim and had cleaned up between $4,000 and $5,000. That amount would be ample to satisfy his modest wants and he determined to set out for the East, to return to that home the memory of whose cheerful fireside surrounded by kind familiar faces had sustained and upheld him through all his adversities.

In those days the express charges on money was simply enormous and as drafts were but little known among miners the common practice was to secrete the gold about the person and so carry it home. Indeed one signal illustration of that custom happened on board a steamship the name of which I do not now recall, running between San Francisco and the Isthmas. The vessel caught fire and burned, about 300 miles out of the former place and the decks of the vessel were literally strewn with gold thrown down by the despairing passengers who knew that they had no chance of escape while weighed down by bags of gold. Uncle Jimmy had been down to the express office and made arrangements to ride over the next day with the express train to Shasta City which was upon his route to San Francisco and where he intended spending a few days visiting friends before quiting California. The whole train left Weaverville the following afternoon and expected to make Shasta by evening of the same day. The trail over the mountains in some places extending through clumps of bushes was so narrow that but one horse or mule could be ridden at a time and it was while passing in single file through such a one that the party were surprised by the sudden appearance of five robbers.

The robbers had allowed the mule train to pass along so that each of their number could cover his man, when they quickly emerged from behind the bushes and the astonished miners found themselves staring along the barrel of a Colts navy and utterly in the power of the robbers, as resistance under such circumstances was useless and hopeless. One of the robbers then relieved the man he was covering of his firearms and going to each in turn soon had the weapons of the entire party. That precaution being accomplished they marched back a short distance to a small clearing a little way off from the trail. Here they were halted, dismounted and searched by the robbers. It is needless to say that everything of value was taken. The captain noticed that Uncle Jimmy's watch whose chain was visible had not been taken. Reprimanding with an oath the man who had passed over it he ordered him to go and take it which he did, and then the miners and expressman were each secured with their hands tied behind them and their arms encircling a little tree about four or five inches in diameter. There they were left to their fate. The robbers mounted the express mules and galloped down to Clear Creek at the base of the mountain and there divided thir plunder, each one hiding his share by burying it in some out of the way place along the creek, after which they separated riding away in different directions.

After twisting about and struggling with his bonds all night the express Messenger Barstow succeeded in freeing himself and immediately released his unfortunate companions. They set out on foot to Shasta City and arrived there heart sick and utterly exhausted about noon the next day. Their story caused great excitement in the city as the robbery had been a very large and bold one, and much sympathy was aroused for the miners, especially Uncle Jimmy who had lost everything he had in the world and under circumstances particularly painful. His bright hopes and dreams had been quickly destroyed and the shock had proved almost too much for the old man. Notwithstanding the most vigorous efforts to trace the robbers and recover the property, no clew had been obtained and Uncle Jimmy, who had neither the youth or buoyancy of spirits to stand such a blow had settled into a dumb stony despair that would evidently soon cost him his reason. His friends who were much moved by his pitiful situation, raised a few hundred dollars and were anxious to send him back to his home in the East thinking the sight of old scenes and faces of loved ones might save the old man and give him yet some happiness in his declining years, but he seemed too unconscious of what was going on and too indifferent to what might happen to him to take any interest in their plans on his behalf as he still continued to wander [illegible]. One day when he [illegible] erhood. Uncle Jimmy had been for a long time an enthusiastic Mason himself and then belonged to Western Star Lodge No. 2, located at Shasta City.

Nothing could have arrested his attention or aroused his interest in the stranger more quickly than to discover that he belonged to the order, so conversing easily about general topics, Uncle Jimmy accompanied him down to the end of the town near the site of an old saw mill whether the stranger had directed their steps, that he might find a secluded spot in which, free from interruption and intruders he might disclose to the old man that which was in his mind.

Seating themselves upon the decaying trunk of an old tree, the stranger asked Uncle Jimmy if he knew him.

"No," he replied, "I don't think that I have ever seen you before."

Then the stranger said, "you are a mason and I suppose can keep a secret."

"I am," answered Uncle Jimmy.

"Well," remarked the stranger, "I have a secret, and if you will pledge me to faithfully keep it I will tell it to you."

Uncle Jimmy promised that he would, and then the stranger took from his pocket a watch of old-fashioned design and odd workmanship and asked him if recognize it.

"My God," Uncle Jimmy excitedly exclaimed, "where did you get that! Why it is mine, taken from me by a robber on Trinity mountain when the express was robbed."

"Yes," thoughtfully responded the stranger, "that is true and I am the person who took if from you."

In mingled amazement and delight, Uncle Jimmy grasped his old timepiece. It was one that he had carried a very long time, and was doubly precious to him, as it was a present from his dear wife just previous to her death many years before. He regarded the return of the watch as an evidence of still greater fortune, and a sort of feverish elation took possession of him as the stranger continued: "Yes, I am the one who took it from you, but as you are aware, I was not a willing party to the act. Seeing your sign of distress, I would gladly have rendered you assistance, but it was not then in my power. I did not dare to openly disobey the captain's orders as such a course would only have cost me my life and not have helped you, so I chose rather to take it, hoping to be able to restore it to you, which I intended doing if it was in any way possible. I also took as my share of the plunder, the gold of which you were robbed and having like the others hid it on the bank of Clear Creek, have preserved it for you. This evening if you will go with me to Clear Creek, I will dig up and return it to you and then I shall have made all the amends in my power for the unwilling injury I have done you."

It would be impossible to describe the perfect transport of joy with which Uncle Jimmy listened to this intelligence, strange and unlooked for as it was, he could scarcely believe it true. He was impatient to set off for the creek and actually see and possess his lost treasure once more.

After a few more words they walked back through the town and that evening started for Clear Creek, a distance of fifteen miles. It was a clear, beautiful night, and they rode along in silence until after they had gotten clear of all habitation, when the stranger with an air of sadness said: "I suppose you wonder greatly how I came to be even temporarily attached to that band of robbers. Well, it happened in this manner. Last spring I bought some mules down in the Sacramento valley and started north with them, intending to dispose of them up in the mountains. One day I noticed a stray mule among the band and not knowing where or to whom it belonged, I thought I would take it along to the next ranche and leave it to await the owner, however, before I arrived at the next ranche I was met by a party of horsemen, headed by a fellow whose name I subsequently learned was Duncan. He was in search of a lost mule and looking over my band, identified this stray mule as the one he had lost or had had stolen from him.

"I told them how I had become possessed of it but they scouted the idea of my getting it honestly, notwithstanding the fact that they had no proof against me except the lost animal being in my possession, which I very reasonably explained. They chose to act on the belief that I was guilty of stealing it and overpowering me tied me to a tree and whipped and lashed me in the most brutal manner until I became insensible. When I recovered consciousness I was lying on the ground alone, Duncan and his men having probably cut me down before they left. I was too weak and sick to move on for some days but after camping there for a while I regained sufficient strenght to proceed to the mountains and dispose of my mules. After the brutal outrage upon me my one desire was to kill Duncan and I bent every energy to its accomplishment. I followed him down to Sacramento and then heard that he had just gone up into the mountains whith some mules. I started back for the mountains and there found that he had returned to Sacramento and so I have been baffled ever since.

"Once I heard he had gone to Oregon and hastened there but without finding him. A few weeks ago while down in Sacramento I met a man with whom I became acquainted at the hotel. I recounted my wrong to him and told him of my intentions. That man turned out to be the captain of the robbers whom you saw. [illegible] some of the gang and handed over to me.

"I did not shudder at the thought of becoming an outcast and an enemy to society, all the feelings of repungance and moral sense seemed to be swollowed up in my desire to get Duncan in my power so I accepted the proposition and went with him to their headquarters at a little shanty near Folsom and became for the time what you saw me a robber.

"Since you were robbed I have learned that Duncan was killed a short time since in a gambling row with some miners at Humbolt. Perhaps it is as well that I did not meet him, but now he is dead and I have nothing more to stay for in this country, which has only unpleasant memories to me and possibly detection and disgrace, so after restoring to you your gold I shall leave it forever."

After a ride of about two hours they reached Clear Creek, where the stranger immediately going to a little nook proceeded to dig up Uncle Jimmy's gold. He had lifted up a stone in a retired spot and digging out the ground underneath had made a receptacle for the little bags of gold dust. Here they were found just as they had been left and were soon again in Uncle Jimmy's hands.

The old man was completely overcome and sitting down on the bank cried like a child. He had worked hard for it, was old and infirm, in the greatest need of it and its sudden restoration was almost too much for him.

They soon rode back to town when the stranger took leave of Uncle Jimmy and started down the valley with the old man's blessings on his head.

Uncle Jimmy took his gold to the house of an intimate masonic friend of his named Lemmon, with whom he was stopping and locked it up in his trunk. Immediately his whole bearing became changed. From abject dispair he was raised to the height of hope and happiness. He was to old and absent minded a man to succeed in masking his feelings, and everyone knew from his radiant face and joyful manner that some great change had come over him. Some thought that grief must finally have made him crazy, but his friend Lemmon who knew him better, shrewdly judged that his changed manner was the result of changed circumstances and questioned him closely about it. Uncle Jimmy refusing to speak out definitely, he became suspicious that something was crooked. He could not understand why there should be any hesitacy on his part to state the facts if there be no improper conduct by Uncle Jimmy and intimated so to him pretty plainly. Smarting under such insinuations, Uncle Jimmy finally made a clean breast of it and told Lemmon just how his good fortune had come about, supposing of course that it would go no further, but it seemed that Lemmon had a still dearer friend in another mason there, Mr. Rhodes of the express company, who with his partner, Mr. Lusk, had lost over $20,000 by the robbery, and he determined to give him the information that might enable him to recover it. Accordingly he saw his friend Rhodes, who upon hearing the facts of the case, immediately swore out a warrant and started some officers of after the stranger, whom they overtook and arrested some miles down the valley and brought him back to Shasta City. Thus to Uncle Jimmy's dismay and chagrin he saw his benefactor thrust into the Shasta jail in less than two days from the time he had so kindly restored to him his property. He had thoughtlessly and too lightly held his pledge though he had no idea that its disclosure could ever work such irretrievable injury to his friend.

Uncle Jimmy did not know what to do to redeem himself in the eyes of his friend, but thought he would go to the jail and confer with him about the best steps to be taken. On getting to the jail however, he found him too angry and disgusted to say anything or have anything to do with him. Then Uncle Jimmy went around to all the prominent masons and labored in his friend's behalf. It was finally arranged that if the robber would go with Rhodes and some others to Clear creek and assist in hunting for the remainder of the buried gold Rhodes & Lusk would not appear against him.

Accordingly Rhodes, the robber and a few others set out for Clear Creek to search for the gold. The first day after a long search they found the places where two of the robbers had buried their booty and recovered it. On the following day they found the share of another robbeer but here their discoveries ended for, nothwithstanding the fact that the people turned out and made repeated and diligent searches nothing was ever found of the fifth robber's gold. In the meantime Sheriff Nunelly and a posse armed with the necessary warrants and what information Uncle Jimmy had heard about the headquarters of the robbers, proceeded to Folsom to capture the rest of the gang. Arriving there about dark they made a hasty survey and picking out the house answering to the description surrounded it. Sheriff Nunelly rapped for admittance but received no answer. Presently one of the robbers tried to escape by jumping out of a back window but was instantly shot and killed. The door was then broken in and two more of the robbers discovered. The Captain it was learned had gone that day down to SanFrancisco and therefore escaped them, but the other two were put in irons and taken back to Shasta City. Evidence was obtained in the way of finding pistols, saddles and other articles stolen from the express train which together with the admissions of the [illegible] robber to Uncle Jimmy would be sufficient to insure their conviction. When Uncle [illegible] would never be safe in any place if the Captain imagined he was out of prison, so the matter was finally arranged in some way that he should be tried with the others and on conviction or a short time afterwards be pardoned and allowed to quietly leave the country. Shortly after the apprehension of the last two robbers all three of them were indicted and put upon their trial which speedily ended in their being convicted and sentenced to ten years penal servitude. The conviction broke up one of the worst gangs in Northern California and if it did not have a salutary effect upon all the law breakers in the state it certainly discouraged a few of them, and rendered Shasta City and vicinity an exceptionally unpleasant base of opperations. Some little time after, Uncle Jimmy's friend was pardoned and was supposed to have left California. After the excitement was over and his benefactor pardoned, Uncle Jimmy bade good bye to all the boys and started East ashamed of his own breach of faith in itself but happy at the whole outcome and deeply imbued with the striking example he had seen of masonic brotherly love and fidelity that had even clung to one in dishonor and disgrace. Rhodes & Lusk recovered $15,000 of their $20,000 but the other five happening to be the share of the robber who was killed is still probably hidden in the bank of Clear Creek waiting to astonish some lucky scoverer with its yellow grains and nuggets.

Under a Delusion.

An exchange speaking of newspaper advertising says: "Many people labor under the delusion that a space in a newspaper is of no value, that the editor is anxious to have something to fill it, etc. While filled with this idea notices of entertainments, festivals, etc., which come under the head of advertising, are sent in for gratuitous publication. People have no more right to ask such favors of a newspaper than they have to ask the minister to marry them free, the undertaker to bury them gratuitously, or the manager of a show to admit them as deadheads. Printers, paper, postage, coal, ink, etc., all must be paid for, and those who reap the benefits of the newspaper's circulation which is the result of the outlay, in justice to all should help foot the bills. If a free entertainment is to be given a free notice can be asked with good grace, but if a charge is made for admittance whether receipts are made for charitable purposes or otherwise, the newspaper is entitled to pay for its work, and then if the publisher wishes to give something to aid the cause, well and good. But let each tub stand on its own bottom, and your newspaper will be more prosperous and always better for it. In these times even the minister is not asked to expound the scriptures for nothing. And who would think of going to the grocer and asking for a pound of tea thrown in because he had bought a pound of sugar, or to the dry goods merchant and claim a yard of silk because he had purchased a yard of calico. There would be as much reason in it, as for the use of advertising space, (as many do) worth ten cents per line, on the strength of being a subscriber to the paper. The only man who, beside the printer, is a victim of the old style is the butcher. He is still compelled to give some people a pound of liver with every half-pound of pork."

THE PROPER THING.

Tartan plaids are in the ascendency.

Basques remain short with high darts.

Bands of embroidered cashmeres are used in combinations with soft silk.

The foundation skirt remains about two yards and a quarter in width.

Flounces all around the skirt are seldom seen even as a finish to the foot.

An attempt is made to lengthen skirts both for street and house dresses.

The lace front is a feature of new basques, and is becoming to all small figures.

Gay and pretty corsages made of wide Roman sash ribbon are worn by young ladies to brighten up dark or black silk or satin skirts.

New costumes for spring and summer retain the general effect of those now worn, with bask, bouffant skirt and combinations of two materials.

The Gladstone is an English long coat which this spring takes the place of the ulster. It is a trim-fitting wrap, simple in shape, with the usual box pleatings in the back.

A Paris correspondent writes that the last and most "recherche" production of modern industry is "point lace into web of which brilliants are woven." So far it has only been used for bonnet crowns and covering fans.

Small mantles will be made to match the dresses and lined with colored silk.

Many dresses are fastened with hooks and eyes; buttons of two sizes are also used.

Bustles are only worn large just below the waist, and even then not exaggerated in size.

Pale pink tulle ruches are becoming in the neck and sleeves of colored or black silk dresses.

Crape dresses of lighter quality than any Canton crape are the first choice for summer silk dresses.

There is an effort to introduce leg-of-mutton sleeves; coat sleeves are used on the handsomest street dresses.

Pearl hemmed plaitings, ruschings and flat folds of crepe and other soft materials continue to be quite a craze.

The new draperies are arranged very long in the front and back, leaving both sides of the lower skirt uncovered from the belt down.

I have been troubled with catarrh of the head and throat for the last five years. About three years ago I commenced the use of Ely's Cream Balm, and from the first application I was relieved. The sense of smell, which had been lost, was restored after using one bottle. I have found the Balm the only remedy for catarrh I have used with satisfaction, and it has accomplished a cure in my case.—H. L. Myer, Waverly, N. Y.

A BABY SAVED!

Since birth my baby had running sores all over his head, and the doctors said that he must die, for they could not heal them. I used everything I ever heard of, but it was no good. He got so bad that he would not nurse. My husband's sister told me to try Sulphur Bitters as she had great faith in them. I used a bottle and the sores commenced to heal. After using two bottles more the sores all healed and I considered my baby saved.—Mother, Concord, N. H.
